NOTIFICATION.

The 4th February 1880.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to publish for general information the following Order in Council, and the Regulations appended thereto, for preventing collisions at sea, which will come into force on the 1st September 1880.

H. J. REYNOLDS,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

At the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 14th day of August 1879.

PRESENT:

THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS by "The Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862," it was enacted that on and after the first day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, or such later day as might be fixed for the purpose by Order in Council, the Regulations contained in the table marked C in the schedule to the said Act should come into operation and be of the same force as if they were enacted in the body of the said Act; but that Her Majesty might from time to time, on the joint recommendation of the Admiralty and the Board of Trade, by Order in Council, annul or modify any of the said Regulations, or make new Regulations in addition thereto or in substitution therefor; and that any alterations in, or additions to, such Regulations made in manner aforesaid should be of the same force as the Regulations in the said schedule:

And whereas by the same Act it was further provided that whenever it should be made to appear to Her Majesty that the Government of any foreign country was willing that the Regulations for preventing collisions contained in Table C in the schedule to the said Act, or such other Regulations for preventing collisions as are for the time being in force under the said Act, should apply to the ships of such country when beyond the limits of British jurisdiction, Her Majesty might, by Order in Council, direct that such Regulations should apply to the ships of the said foreign country, whether within British jurisdiction or not; and it was further provided by the said Act that whenever an Order in Council had been issued applying any Regulation made by, or in pursuance of, the said Act to the ships of any foreign country, such ships should in all cases arising in any British court, be deemed to be subject to such Regulation, and should, for the purpose of such Regulation, be treated as if they were British ships:

And whereas by an Order in Council made in pursuance of the said recited Act, and dated the ninth day of January one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, Her Majesty was pleased to direct:—First, that the Regulations contained in the schedule to the said Act should be modified by the substitution for such Regulations of certain Regulations appended to the said Order;

Secondly, that the said Regulations appended to the said Order should, on and after the first day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, apply to French ships, whether within British jurisdiction or not:

And whereas by several Orders in Council subsequently made, Her Majesty was pleased to direct that the Regulations appended to the said Order of the ninth of January one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, should apply to ships of the countries specified in the said Orders, whether within British jurisdiction or not:

And whereas by Order in Council, dated the thirtieth day of July one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, Her Majesty, on the joint recommendation of the Admiralty and the Board of Trade, was pleased to make certain additions to the Regulations appended to the said first-recited Order in Council, for the purpose of explaining Articles 11 and 13 of the said Regulations, and of removing doubt and misapprehension concerning the effect of the said two Articles:

And whereas the Admiralty and the Board of Trade have jointly recommended to Her Majesty that the Regulations contained in the Order in Council dated the ninth day of January one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and the additions to the said Regulations contained in the said Order in Council of the thirtieth day of July one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, shall be annulled from the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and that there shall be substituted for the said Regulations and additions respectively the new Regulations hereinafter set forth:

And whereas it has been made to appear to Her Majesty that the Governments of the several foreign countries mentioned in the second schedule hereto are respectively willing that the Regulations contained in the first schedule hereto shall apply to ships of the said countries respectively, whether within British jurisdiction or not:

Now therefore Her Majesty, by virtue of the powers vested in Her by the said recited Act, and by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, is pleased to direct—

First, that on and after the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and eighty, the Regulations appended to the said Order in Council of the ninth day of January one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and the additions to the said Regulations contained in the said Order in Council of the thirtieth day of July one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, shall be annulled, and that there shall be substituted for the said Regulations and additions respectively the new Regulations contained in the first schedule hereto.

Second, that the said Regulations contained in the said first schedule hereto shall, from and after the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and eighty, apply to ships of the countries mentioned in the said second schedule hereto, whether within British jurisdiction or not.

C. L. PEEL.

(b.) On the starboard side, a green light so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the starboard side; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(c.) On the port side, a red light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the port side; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(d.) The said green and red side lights shall be fitted with inboard screens projecting at least three feet forward from the light, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

ART. 4. A steam-ship, when towing another ship, shall, in addition to her side lights carry two bright white lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steam-ships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position, as the white light which other steam-ships are required to carry.

ART. 5. A ship, whether a steam-ship or a sailing ship, when employed either in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, or which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry in the same position as the white light which steam-ships are required to carry, and, if a steam-ship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart: and shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, in front of, but not lower than, her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each two feet in diameter.

These shapes and lights are to be taken by approaching ships as signals that the ship using them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way.

The above ships when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them.

ART. 6. A sailing ship under way, or being towed, shall carry the same lights as are provided by Article 3 for a steam-ship under way, with the exception of the white light, which she shall never carry.

ART. 7. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red side lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use: and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

ART. 8. A ship, whether a steam-ship or a sailing ship, when at anchor, shall carry, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding 20 feet above the hull, a white light, in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light visible all round the horizon, at a distance of at least one mile.

ART. 9. A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the mast-head visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light or flare-up lights at short intervals which shall never exceed fifteen minutes.

A pilot vessel, when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

ART. 10. (a)—Open fishing boats and other open boats when under way shall not be obliged to carry the side lights required for other vessels; but every such boat shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side; and on the approach of or to other vessels such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

(b)—A fishing vessel and an open boat when at anchor shall exhibit a bright white light.

(c)—A fishing vessel when employed in drift net fishing, shall carry on one of her masts two red lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart.

(d)—A trawler at work shall carry on one of her masts two lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, the upper light red and the lower green, and shall also either carry the side lights required for other vessels, or if the side lights cannot be carried, have ready at hand the coloured lights as provided in Article 7, or a lantern with a red and a green glass as described in paragraph (a) of this Article.

(e)—Fishing vessels and open boats shall not be prevented from using a flare-up in addition if they desire to do so.

(f)—The lights mentioned in this Article are substituted for those mentioned in the 12th, 13th, and 14th Articles of the Convention between France and England scheduled to the British Sea Fisheries Act, 1868.

(g)—All lights required by this Article, except side lights, shall be in globular lanterns so constructed as to show all round the horizon.

ART. 11. A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.

Sound Signals for Fog, &c.

ART. 12. A steam-ship shall be provided with a steam whistle, or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog-horn to be sounded by bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell. A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog-horn and bell.

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the signals described in this Article shall be used as follows, that is to say—

(a)—A steam-ship under way shall make with her steam whistle, or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

(b)—A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog-horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

(c)—A steam-ship and a sailing ship when not under way shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, ring the bell.

Speed of Ships to be moderate in Fog, &c.

ART. 13. Every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam-ship, shall in a fog, mist, or falling snow go at a moderate speed.

Steering and Sailing Rules.

ART. 14. When two sailing ships are approaching one another, so as to involve risk of collision, one of them shall keep out of the way of the other as follows, viz :—

(a)—A ship which is running free shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled.

(b)—A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack.

(c)—When both are running free with the wind on different sides, the ship which has the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the other.

(d)—When both are running free with the wind on the same side, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

(e)—A ship which has the wind aft shall keep out of the way of the other ship.

ART. 15. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, each shall alter her course to starboard, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

This Article only applies to cases where ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision, and does not apply to two ships which must, if both keep on their respective courses, pass clear of each other.

The only cases to which it does apply are, when each of the two ships is end on, or nearly end on to the other, in other words, to cases in which by day each ship sees the mast of the other in a line, or nearly in a line, with her own; and by night, to cases in which each ship is in such a position as to see both the side lights of the other.

It does not apply by day to cases in which a ship sees another ahead crossing her own course; or by night, to cases where the red light of one ship is opposed to the red light of the other, or where the green light of one ship is opposed to the green light of the other, or where a red light without a green light, or a green light without a red light is seen ahead, or where both green and red lights are seen anywhere but ahead.

ART. 16. If two ships under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

ART. 17. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship and the other a steam-ship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam-ship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

ART. 18. Every steam-ship when approaching another ship, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or stop and reverse if necessary.

ART. 19. In taking any course authorized or required by these Regulations a steam-ship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, viz:—

One short blast to mean—"I am directing my course to starboard."
Two short blasts to mean—"I am directing my course to port."
Three short blasts to mean—"I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional; but if they are used, the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

ART. 20. Notwithstanding anything contained in any preceding Article every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam-ship, overtaking any other, shall keep out of the way of the overtaken ship.

ART. 21. In narrow channels every steam-ship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fair way or midchannel which lies on the starboard side of such ship.

ART. 22. Where by the above rules one of two ships is to keep out of the way the other shall keep her course.

ART. 23. In obeying and construing these rules due regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may render a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

No Ship under any circumstances to neglect proper precautions.

ART. 24. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look-out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

Reservation of Rules for Harbours and Inland Navigation.

ART. 25. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of a special rule duly made by local authority relative to the navigation of any harbour, river, or inland navigation.

Special Lights for Squadrons and Convoys.

ART. 26. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the Government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war, or for ships sailing under convoy.

DRAFT RULES PROPOSED UNDER ACT III (B.C.) OF 1876.

No. 76. Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by Section 99 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to direct the publication of the following rules for the Orissa Canals.

H. C. LEVINGE,
Jt.-Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal,
P. W. Dept., Irrigation Branch.

RULES UNDER ACT III (B.C.) OF 1876.

PART I.

Of Supply.

Rule 1.—Canal water will be supplied on written applications at the rates and on the conditions to be hereafter stated. (Section 74, Act III of 1876.)

Rule 2.—All applications must be made in forms which may be obtained free of cost at the Canal Revenue Offices. (Appendices A and B.)

Rule 3.—Applications for water will be received by the Deputy Revenue Superintendents or their duly authorized subordinates at the various circle and branch circle offices.

Rule 4.—Any Deputy Superintendent may refuse an application if he thinks it would not be to the interest of Government to comply with it. This discretion will be vested in the Deputy Superintendents only. Other canal revenue officers authorized to receive applications must refer for orders all doubtful cases to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of their respective circles.

PART II.

Rates and Conditions of Supply.

Rule 5.—The rates chargeable per acre for the different descriptions of crops have been fixed up to the end of November 1882, and are as follow:—

Rule 6.—Applications for water for the irrigation of rice crops at Rs. 1-8 per acre "flow" and Re. 1 "lift" must be signed by all the cultivators holding rice culturable and irrigable lands in the villages mentioned in the applications, and the names of the villages adjoining that in respect of which the application is made must be specified at the back of the applications.

Rule 7.—Applications for water at Rs. 3 "flow" and Rs. 2 "lift" irrigation must be signed by all those cultivating in the specific portion of the villages applied for. At the back of such applications should be entered the names and boundaries of the chaks or plots for which water is required.

Rule 8.—The provisions of Rule 7 will apply to all applications for water for sugarcane and dry-weather crops.

Rule 9.—Applications under Rules 6, 7, and 9 will not be deemed complete until all the signatures of intending irrigators have been obtained, and water may be refused by the Deputy Superintendent until all the signatures shall have been obtained. Those who cannot write must affix their marks.

Rule 10.—All applicants should have distinctly explained to them the terms of the agreement at the head of their applications. The assessments made will be on the areas actually irrigable or irrigated and cultivated by applicants, and not on the areas as stated by them.

Rule 11.—Separate applications must be given in respect of each description of crop mentioned in the statement attached to Rule 5.

Rule 12.—The Deputy Superintendent may refuse to comply with the application of any village from the cultivators of which any arrears of water-rates are due, until such time as the arrears are paid.

PART III.

Of the Procedure for the Disposal of Applications for Water.

Rule 13.—On receipt of an application for water it should be dated and initialled by the receiving officer and entered in the register of applications (Register No. I). The officer receiving it, or his duly authorized subordinate, will then proceed to ascertain by local enquiry and the aid of survey maps, or by actual measurement, the following particulars regarding the lands mentioned in the applications:—

(1) Whether canal supply can be given.

(2) Whether the particulars as to areas and boundaries as given in the application are correct.

(3) Whether, with reference to the situation of the lands and areas applied for, it is to the interest of Government to comply with the application.

Rule 14.—After ascertaining by survey maps or actual measurement, and recording on the application the areas being or to be irrigated, the enquiring officer shall prepare a permit to supply water in the form prescribed in Appendix C for despatch to the supplying officer. A copy of the permit may, if wished, be made over to the applicants.

Rule 15.—Should the enquiring officer be of opinion that the areas applied for cannot be irrigated, or that the application should not for other reasons be sanctioned, he will submit his report with all the papers of the case for the orders of the Deputy Superintendent.

Rule 16.—It shall be at the discretion of the Deputy Superintendent to grant supply of water to any village or villages for which applications for water may have been received without waiting for the completion of any local enquiry or measurement.

Rule 17.—The manner in which any application may be finally disposed of should be briefly stated in the column of remarks in Register No. I.

Rule 18.—When an application for water has been finally disposed of, either by an order to supply water or otherwise, it should be forwarded to the head office, where it will be registered in detail in the register of leases (Register No. II).

PART IV.

Of Water Distribution to Applicants.

Rule 19.—Village channels have been constructed and are maintained by Government for the purpose of leading water to some convenient point or points within the boundaries of certain villages; and wherever such channels exist, canal water shall, if possible, be supplied from them to all applicants by the Superintending Engineer, his Executive Engineers, and their subordinates.

Rule 20.—Where no village channels exist from which supply can be given, applicants shall be directed to construct such village channels as may be required to irrigate their areas, and supply may be withheld until proper channels are made.

Rule 21.—Canal officers shall give every assistance to applicants in laying out and aligning village channels, and every effort must be made to induce villagers to construct their own channels.

Rule 22.—The complete control and custody of all irrigation sluices shall rest in the Superintending Engineer and the Executive Engineers subordinate to him; but it shall be competent to either of these officers, by an order in writing, to transfer the control and custody of any sluice to any person deemed fit to take charge thereof.

Rule 23.—All questions as to priority of right to take water, and all disputes regarding the quantity and regulation of supply, shall be determined by the Executive Engineer. It shall further be competent to this officer, at his discretion, to close entirely such channels and outlets as he may deem expedient to ensure proper rotation of supply to all applicants, and no claims for compensation for such closure shall lie.

Rule 24.—Applicants whose applications may have been sanctioned shall as far as possible be supplied at any time during the growth of the crop mentioned in their applications: but no applicant for water for a rice crop can claim a full supply before the 15th of June.

Rule 25.—Cultivators shall embank the field to which water is supplied, so that the water shall not run to waste or flow unnecessarily on land not entitled to irrigation.

Rule 26.—Where water is appropriated in an unauthorized manner, by cutting canal, distributary or village channel banks, or by opening sluices or shoots fixed in such banks, or by cutting or neglecting to keep in repair the boundaries of fields to which water is supplied, and the person by whose act or neglect such appropriation has ensued cannot be identified, all lands deriving benefit shall be liable to twice the ordinary charge, or such other charge, not being less than the ordinary rate, as the Deputy Superintendent of Canal Revenue may determine.

PART V.

Of Realization of Water-rates.

Rule 27.—Any person appointed as a Collector under section 82 of the Act shall receive sunnuds of appointment in Form D for each village from which he agrees to collect, and he will be entitled to receive commission at the rate of 5 per cent. on all sums paid by him to Government on or before such dates as may be stated in his sunnuds of appointment. The person appointed Collector shall usually be a nominee of the cultivators from whom water-rates are due. No person appointed as Collector of water-rate shall be entitled to claim his commission until he has submitted such accounts as the Deputy Superintendent may prescribe.

Rule 28.—The Deputy Superintendent shall be at liberty to cancel any sunnud of appointment to collect, whenever such course appears advisable in the interest of Government or of the cultivators.

Rule 29.—Where no Collectors of water-rates are appointed, realizations will be made by the Canal Revenue Officers in charge of circles and by their authorized subordinates. The instructions embodied in Appendix E regarding collections must be read as part and parcel of these rules, and must be adhered to by all canal revenue subordinates.

Rule 30.—Demand statements of the water-rates due from each village will be issued from the Canal Revenue Office at least two months before such water-rates fall due. All demand statements will contain the names and residences of the cultivators from whom water-rates are due, the areas on which rates are payable, and amounts due from each ryot. Demand statements shall be served on the Collector, or if no Collector has been appointed, on some one of the principal applicants. General notice of such service shall be posted on some conspicuous part of each village, and shall specify dates of payment.

Rule 31.—The dates of payment of water-rates for the different crops shall be as follow:—

For rice ...	... 1st February
„ sugarcane ...	... 1st June.
„ dalwa and other dry-weather crops	... 1st August.

All payments of water-rates shall be paid in one instalment.

PART VI.

Rule 32.—All objections and claims for remission shall be made to the Deputy Superintendent.

Rule 33.—Remissions of water-rates will be granted in whole or in part by the Deputy Superintendent on the following grounds:—

(1) The total failure of supply

(2) Damage to crops caused by deficiency or delay in the supply of water, in consequence of some act or omission on the part of the supplying officer, and independent of any act or omission on the part of the applicants.

(3) Damage caused by excess water under above restrictions.

(4) Where it can be shown that no crop was grown as originally intended. Provided that no claim for remission shall be allowed unless made while the crops alleged to have been damaged are on the ground.

Rule 34.—Special cases for remission not coming under the above heads shall be reported to the Collector for orders.

Rule 35.—All orders passed on claims for remission shall be duly communicated to the parties concerned.

PART VII.

Of Miscellaneous Sources of Revenue.

Rule 36.—Written applications must be given on plain paper to the Deputy Superintendent or to his duly authorized subordinate by any person wishing to cultivate Government canal lands, catch fish, or farm or purchase any miscellaneous source of canal revenue. The rules and procedure for dealing with these applications will be the same as those for dealing with applications for water, except that after necessary enquiry the applicant shall, if his demand be complied with, be called on to execute a kabooliyut, a pattah being made over to him.

Rule 37.—Leases for miscellaneous sources of revenue shall usually run for three or five years, at the discretion of the Deputy Superintendent; but all payments thereon shall be annual and payable on the 1st of June.

Rule 38.—A separate register (Register No. III) shall be maintained of all miscellaneous leases.

PART VIII.

Of Registers to be maintained under these Rules.

Rule 39.—The following registers shall be maintained by the Deputy Revenue Superintendent:—

Register No. I.—Register of applications.
Do. No. II.— Do. of water-rate leases (in head office only).
Register No. III.—Register of miscellaneous leases.
Register No. IV.—Daily cash-book.
Do. No. V.—Register of applications for remissions.
Register No. VI.—Register of persons appointed Collector under section 82.
Register No. VII.—Register of unauthorized irrigation.

Rule 40.—Register of all village channels shall be maintained by the Executive Engineers in such form as the Superintending Engineer may direct, and lists of all such registered village channels shall from time to time be supplied to the Deputy Superintendent.

3. On the day of , corresponding to (Uryah date), I will pay in to the Deputy Revenue Superintendent or other duly authorized officer the whole sum collected by me from the lessees, and if such sum be not the full amount due on the lease, my sunnud may be cancelled by the Deputy Revenue Superintendent. I will also give up the counterfoils of my receipt book, together with an account showing the total sum collected from, and the balance still due from, each ryot.

4. I shall be entitled to receive a commission of 5 per cent. on the total sum collected and paid in by me on or before the day of in full of the demand of each ryot, and shall not be entitled to any further remuneration whatever.

5. For a breach of any of the above conditions I will forfeit to the Secretary of State a sum not exceeding Rs. 500.

(Sd.) A. B.

SUNNUD No. .

To A. B., of village , pergunnah

You are hereby appointed under section 82 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876 to collect the sums due on lease No. , in accordance with the terms of the agreement given by you, and which are detailed below:—

1. I will not collect or take from any of the lessees any sum whatever over and above that specified in the lease without written authority from the Deputy Revenue Superintendent.

2. For every sum paid to me by any lessee I will, at the time of payment, grant a receipt in such form as may be prescribed by the Deputy Revenue Superintendent, and I will duly make over to the Deputy Revenue Superintendent or other duly authorized officer every sum received by me from every lessee.

3. On the day of , corresponding to (Uryah date), I will pay in to the Deputy Revenue Superintendent or other duly authorized officer the whole sum collected by me from the lessees, and if such sum be not the full amount due on the lease, my sunnud may be cancelled by the Deputy Revenue Superintendent. I will also give up the counterfoils of my receipt book, together with an account showing the total sum collected from, and the balance still due from, each ryot.

4. I shall be entitled to receive a commission of 5 per cent. on the total sum collected and paid in by me on or before the day of in full of the demand of each ryot, and shall not be entitled to any further remuneration whatever.

5. For a breach of any of the above conditions I will forfeit to the Secretary of State a sum not exceeding Rs. 500.

Deputy Revenue Superintendent.

APPENDIX E.

The following rules are issued for the information and guidance of the Deputy Revenue Superintendents, tehsildars, and mohurirs :—

Rule 1.—As a rule all collections should be made by the tehsildar only, or by such other officer as may be in charge of a canal revenue circle.

Rule 2.—The tehsildar or officer in charge of a circle will as heretofore grant detail receipts for all collections made by him, will enter such collections as usual in his siha or No. IV Register, will remit all collections periodically to the head office in Cuttack, with detailed "challans" and counterfoils of all receipts granted. In addition to this, he will at the close of each month submit to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of his circle a detailed statement of all collections made by himself during the month. This will be simply a copy of all "siha" entries made by him during the month, and an abstract statement of demands and collections in the subjoined form :—

Balance outstanding ...		...	...	...

The tehsildar or officer in charge of a circle will also submit to the head office in Cuttack half-yearly returns of all outstanding balances. These returns will show in detail the amounts due from each defaulter. They will be checked and compared in the head office, and then forwarded to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of the canal to which they refer, and he will, when on tour of inspection, ascertain by personal enquiry from the alleged defaulters, as noted in such balance sheet, whether the sums due from them have been realized or not.

Rule 3.—Whenever it may be found necessary to employ ameens and mohurirs for collection work, the following system will be adopted :—

(a) The tehsildar or officer in charge of the circle will remain at head-quarters.

(b) The ameens and mohurirs collecting money will remit once or twice a week all their collections to the tehsildar's cutcherry. These remittances will be accompanied by a challan showing in gross the amounts remitted—(1) under the head of water-rates, and (2) under miscellaneous, thus—

1877-78.						Rs. A. P.
Water-rates	...	...	...	...	...	50 0 0
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	...	...	50 0 0

and all the counterfoils of receipts granted by the collecting officer.

For the sums so remitted the collecting officer will obtain a receipt from the tehsildar or officer in charge of the tehsil cutcherry, and these receipts will as heretofore be posted into collecting officer's "siha" below dates of remittance, sufficient space being left for the purpose. Collecting ameens and mohurirs will keep up detail "sihas" showing the particulars of all sums collected and remitted to the tehsil cutcherry, and at the close of each month will forward their "sihas" to the Deputy Superintendent in charge, procuring from him a receipt for their monthly "siha" in the subjoined form :—

(1) Dates between which collections noted in the "siha" were made.

(2) Name of collecting officer.

(3) Name of officer to whom collections were forwarded.
(4) Dates of receipt of such collections at tehsil cutcherry, with amounts received on each date.
(5) The Deputy Superintendent's certificate that all sums collected and forwarded by collecting officer have been duly acknowledged, and acknowledgments posted into the "siha."

The Deputy Superintendent's receipts will be kept by the collecting officers as vouchers in support of their work until such time as they may be called in by the Canal Revenue Superintendent. This will usually be when the total demands for the years to which such receipts refer have been finally closed.

Rule 4.—With the monthly "siha" and abstract statement of total demands and collections in his possession, the Deputy Superintendent will have ample information for enabling him to thoroughly check the tehsildar's accounts, and for taking all necessary action with regard to large and long-standing balances. He should periodically check the tehsildar's "siha," or No. IV Register, by comparing the entries in it with those in "ameen's" and mohurir's "sihas," marking off with a red pencil all items checked. By reference to the tehsildar's half-yearly balance sheets he will see at a glance whether the necessary processes have been issued or not, and by comparing it with the tehsildar's No. IV Register, should occasionally satisfy himself that amounts due on legal processes have been credited to Government. When on tour of inspection he should look into collecting officers' "sihas," and satisfy himself that they are properly kept up.

Rule 5.—Forms for tehsildar's, ameen's, and mohurir's "sihas" will be issued in detached sheets of Alipore Jail paper; each sheet will be numbered and initialled by the Deputy Superintendent. Printed forms of "half-yearly" balance statements will be issued for the use of tehsildars or other officers in charge of circles. All receipts and counterfoils issued from the head office will bear the initials of the head clerk or head mohurir, and each volume will be separately numbered and paged.

HIGH COURT NOTICES.

Circular Order issued by authority of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

CIVIL AND CRIMINAL.

No. 22, dated the 2nd June 1880.

IN supersession of the orders contained in Circular Order No. 85 of 5th August 1861, of the late Sudder Nizamut Adawlut, and in Circular Order No. 8 (Civil), dated 29th June 1875, the Court are pleased to direct that in future, in all Civil and Criminal Courts, a uniform charge be made for the preparation of copies, whether authenticated or unauthenticated, at the rate of four annas per folio. This term, it is to be carefully explained to all subordinate officers, merely denominates a certain quantity of manuscript; the folio to consist of 150 words English, or of 300 words Vernacular.

2. It is intended that this charge should eventually be levied by means of an impressed stamp of four annas on each sheet of paper corresponding with the folio to be provided by the applicant for a copy. Till such stamps are available, sheets bearing each an impressed (non-judicial) stamp of two annas* will be used for the preparation of the copies; and the applicant will be required to affix to his application court-fee stamps of an amount sufficient to make up the balance of the charge at the rate of two annas per folio.

* The Superintendent of Stamps will be requested to arrange for the supply of these stamps through the usual channel, and to have them enfaced with the words "For copies."

3. All copies, whether authenticated or unauthenticated, must in future, before issue, be examined by a salaried officer. The copies themselves will in all cases be made by section-writers, who will be remunerated at the rate of 2 annas per folio. General Letter No. 19, dated 29th November 1877, is cancelled.

4. The charge of two annas per folio, levied by means of the impressed stamp, represents the payment to Government on account of the salary of examiners, cost of paper, &c. No refund of this amount will accordingly be allowed. The amount received in court-fee stamps will represent the earnings of the section-writers, whose accounts will be made up monthly, and the amount due to each paid out of contingencies. These payments must be checked at the time with the applications for copies; and care must be taken to see that nothing in excess of the court-fee stamps realized is paid away.

5. To prevent the risk of court-fee stamps being used more than once, the stamps must be cancelled in the usual way at once, when the application is presented, and entry of the amount made, not in the Register of Court-fee Stamps, but in a separate register to be kept for the purpose. At the end of the month, the officer passing the copyist's account will, after checking it with the court-fee stamps, remove the upper part of the applications containing the latter, and after tearing them to pieces, cause them to be burnt in his presence. A certificate that this has been done must be attached to the contingent-bill on which the copyist's fees are drawn.

6. To protect the interests of the Government, care must be taken to see that no copies issue from the courts which are not prepared on the prescribed stamp paper, which must be written on one side of the sheet only,† and not contain more than the authorized number of words. On the other hand, care must be taken to see that applicants are not imposed upon by the copyists spreading their writing over a larger number of sheets than is necessary. By insisting on the number of lines in each sheet being uniform, control may easily be exercised in this matter, the number of words in a few of the lines in each folio being checked. The business of a copyist is (like most other occupations) one calling for skill, and greatly dependent for its successful practice in experience: copyists therefore must possess or acquire skill in their business, or they ought not to be retained.

† As the size of the paper at present available is somewhat small, it may be found convenient to make the copy, not on the side bearing the impressed stamp, but on the reverse.

7. In the case of authenticated copies, the court-fee chargeable under the Court-fees Act should be levied by affixing the necessary stamp to the first folio of the copy.

8. A register of applications for copies should be maintained in the following form :—

Register of Applications for Copies.

Serial number.	Date of application.	Name of applicant.	Number of Folios				Amount of court-fees realized.	Date on which copy was ready for delivery.	Date on which delivery was taken.	Remarks.
			Filed with application.	Filed afterwards.	Returned unused.	Used.

CIVIL.

No. 23, dated the 3*rd June* 1880.

The Court having found on inquiry that the practice based on its Circular Order No. 10, dated 28th March 1872, differs in different districts as regards recovering from parties to a suit the cost of retransmitting records called for by the Court, is pleased to lay down the following instructions with a view to securing uniformity of practice.

2. When a record is called for by a Civil Court at the instance of a party, the cost of postage should be borne by such party, both for the transmission of the record and for its retransmission : more especially in execution cases. And when a Court calls for records of its own motion, and sees fit in its discretion to make the postage, which is in the first instance paid by the State, a part of the costs payable by the losing or other party, such postage should include the cost of retransmission of the records.

3. With reference to the practice which appears to exist in some districts of sending to Moonsiffs records of execution cases by peons, the Court observes that, although in appearance no cost may be incurred in sending records by peons or coolies, it certainly must cause outlay indirectly. But what is more important is, that to trust the carriage of records to chance "peons and coolies" is an insecure and unsatisfactory plan, as no one could effectually be held responsible in case of important documents being lost in such circumstances.

4. The Court is accordingly of opinion that the post is the proper and regular mode of transmission, and ought to be resorted to on all these occasions.

No. 24, dated the 11*th June* 1880.

The Court are pleased to sanction, as an experimental measure, the filling up by duly certificated Mookhtars, of the requisite particulars, names of parties and witnesses, and the like, in the forms of processes to be served on defendants and on witnesses; the parties who apply for the issue of such processes being held responsible for the correct filling up, which must be effected before the processes are signed and sealed by the Court.

2. District Judges will be good enough to watch the working of this measure, and to report upon it at the end of six months.

NOTIFICATION.

NOTIFICATION.

The following rules, made by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal for the guidance of Courts in the exercise of their duties under Section 287 of the Code of Civil Procedure, are published for general information.

C. A. WILKINS, Officiating Registrar.

FORT WILLIAM, the 29th June 1880.

RULES.

N.B.—These rules do not apply to sales of under-tenures held in pursuance of Sections 59, 60 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869.

1. Whenever a Court, in the execution of a decree, shall make an order for the sale of any property under Section 284 of the Code, it shall at the same time fix an early day, not being distant more than ten days, for settling the proclamation of sale, of which day notice shall be given to the party or parties applying for the order of sale, and also to the judgment-debtor or judgment-debtors, or his or their respective vakils.

2. When immoveable property is under attachment in execution of a decree, the party applying for the order of sale, or, if more than one, then one of them, shall, before he makes his application, cause search to be made in the office or offices of the Registrar or Sub-Registrars of Deeds, within whose circle or circles the property is situate, with a view to ascertain whether such property is subject to any, and, if so, what encumbrances; and he shall also procure an extract from the register kept by the Collector under Act VII (B.C.) of 1876 if the immoveable property to be sold be the property of a proprietor as defined by the last-mentioned Act.

3. Every application for an order for the sale of property in execution, whether moveable or immoveable, shall be supported by an affidavit to be made by the applicant or by some other person acquainted with the facts of the case, and to be verified in the manner prescribed by the Code for the verification of plaints, which affidavit shall state everything, known or believed by the deponent to exist, which relates to the nature or affects the value of the property to be sold; and, if the deponent has no knowledge or belief on either of these matters, he shall in his affidavit state to the effect that, after making due enquiry into the matter, he has no knowledge or belief respecting the existence of either of such matters. Furthermore, whenever the application is for the sale of immoveable property, the deponent shall state the result of the search hereinbefore directed to be made in the Registrar's Office or offices, and shall also, if the property is a revenue-paying or rent-paying estate, state the revenue or rent payable in respect of such property, and if the immoveable property belong to a proprietor within the meaning of Act VII (B.C.) of 1876, he shall also append to his affidavit the extract from the Collector's register, which by the preceding rule he is directed to procure.

4. The Court may, if for good reason dissatisfied with the affidavit of any deponent made under the second of these rules, require from such deponent a further affidavit respecting the matters as to which he is by that rule required to make an affidavit, and, if the deponent is other than the party at whose instance the application for an order of sale is made, the Court may also for good reason require such last-mentioned party himself to make an affidavit respecting any of such matters.

5. On the day fixed for the settling of the proclamation, the Court shall enquire into the matters necessary to be specified therein, and shall, after perusing the affidavit or affidavits and examining any witnesses whom it may have thought necessary to summon, or whom, being present without being summoned, it may have thought necessary to examine, and after considering any document which it may have required to be produced, settle the proclamation of sale, specifying, as fairly and accurately as possible, the matters required by Section 287 of the Code to be specified; and the proclamation when so settled shall be signed by the judicial officer settling the same.

6. If, when the proclamation is being settled, any of the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed is present, he shall be at liberty to put any relevant questions to any witness who may be examined by the Court, whether that witness be a party to the suit or not, and may also cross-examine such witness, if such witness gives evidence hostile to the interests of the examining party.

7. Every person examined by the Court shall be sworn or affirmed, and a short note or memorandum of his evidence shall be taken down by the Court.

8. The Court may for good reason from time to time adjourn the settling of the proclamation; provided that no such adjournments shall be for longer than a week at a time, and that the entire time consumed by such adjournments shall not exceed four weeks.

9. The costs of the searches, affidavits, and proceedings upon the settlement of the proclamation of sale shall be paid, in the first instance, by the judgment-creditor or creditors; but he or they, as the case may be, shall be at liberty to recover them as part of the costs of execution, unless the Court, for reasons to be specified in writing, should consider that the judgment-creditor or creditors should be deprived either wholly or in part of the first-mentioned costs, or should pay the costs of the judgment-debtor or judgment-debtors in the event of the latter appearing, when the proclamation is settled.

10. In case the applicant for sale has been admitted to sue as a pauper, the costs first mentioned in the preceding rules shall, on the application of the pauper, be in the first instance paid by Government, but shall be recovered as part of the costs of execution and in the manner provided by Section 411 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

11. If, after the sale-proclamation has been published, any written communication regarding the property to be sold shall be received by the Court, which it considers material for purchasers to know, the Court shall cause the same to be read out when the property is put up for sale.

12. Subject to the proviso in Section 269 of the Code of Civil Procedure, sales of property in execution of decrees in the several Courts of each district (not being Courts of Small Causes) shall be held and commence at a certain day in each month, such day to be fixed by the District Judge or other principal Judge in the district, as regards his own Court and all other Courts sitting at the same place as his own; but as regards subordinate Courts sitting at other places within his district, he shall fix the day in consultation with the Judges of those Courts: Provided that where two or more of such Courts are stationed in the same place, the District Judge may fix the time for sales in consultation with only one of them.

13. All property to be sold at each place of sale shall be entered in lists for each place; the lists of moveable and of immoveable property being distinct. The lists shall be so prepared as to contain, in regular order, each item of property to be sold in execution of the decrees of each Court severally; and shall be stuck up in the Courts where the sales are to be held not less than seven days before the date fixed for the commencement of each set of sales.

14. At the stated hour upon each fixed date the sales shall be commenced, and shall be carried on in the order stated in the lists above mentioned. No sale shall continue after sunset; but the sales shall be held from day to day, except when the Court is closed and until the lists are finished: Provided that this rule shall not interfere with the adjournment of any particular sale according to law.

15. The same days shall not ordinarily be fixed for the sale of movable and of immovable property.

16. Except as regards property of the kind mentioned in the next succeeding rule, sales in execution of decrees for all courts sitting in sudder stations shall be held in the Court of the District Judge or other chief judicial officer. If, in other places, there are two or more subordinate Courts, all the sales in that place shall be held in such one of the Courts as may be selected by the District Judge. Where there is only one Court, the sales shall be held in that Court: Provided that the Court executing a decree may, if it see fit, for reasons to be specified in writing, direct in the interest of the parties that the sale be held at any other time and place within its jurisdiction, and, when acting under this last-mentioned proviso, shall, except for good reason to the contrary, give the preference as regards choice of time and place to the wishes of the judgment-debtor.

17. All sales of live stock, agricultural produce, articles of local manufacture and of other things commonly sold at country markets shall, unless the Court otherwise direct, be held at such market in the neighbourhood of the place where the goods were attached, as may appear likely to be for the greatest advantage of the debtor, regard being had to the prospect of good prices and to the saving of expense in conveyance and carriage.

Mary Carpenter Scholarships.

IT is hereby notified that the Committee of the National Indian Association in London have renewed for the present year their grant for the award of "Mary Carpenter" Scholarships, to be competed for by girls in Bengal. The scholarships are five in number, and are tenable for one year; two of the annual value of Rs. 60, and three of the annual value of Rs. 48. They will be awarded by the Bengal Branch of the Association to female candidates passing at the Departmental Scholarship examinations, middle and lower, to be held next October.

One scholarship will be assigned to each of the five educational circles,—namely, the Presidency, Western, Eastern, Rajshahye, and Behar Circles. A scholarship not taken up in one circle will be awardable in any other; candidates from Orissa having the first claim on a scholarship not taken up in the Rajshahye Division.

Candidates requiring further information should apply to the Inspector of Schools of the Circle, the Deputy Inspector of the district, and the Secretary to the District Committee.

A. W. CROFT, Director of Public Instruction.

Orders by the Vice-Chancellor and Syndicate of the Calcutta University.

The following changes in the Regulations in Arts, Law, Medicine and Engineering having been sanctioned by the Senate and approved by His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, are published for general information:—

The following foot-note has been appended to the marginal note to the Entrance Certificate (Appendix A):—

"It is in the power of the Syndicate to refuse to recognize any school unless it is certified by a Government Inspector of Schools, as having been in existence since the 1st of March next preceding the examination, and as qualified to teach up to the Entrance Standard."

In paragraph 9 of the Regulations for Honours in Arts, the words "History of Philosophy" have been substituted for the words "Natural Theology, and the words "(a) Natural Theology" for the words "(a) History of Philosophy."

In paragraph 9 of the Regulations, for the words "the Syndicate shall notify, three months before the examination, the portions of the subjects of Chemistry and Botany in which candidates shall be examined," the following words have been substituted:—

"The Syndicate shall notify, three months before the examination, the portions of Botany in which candidates shall be examined."

For the words "on the first Monday in December," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the Entrance Examination; for the words "on the morning of the fourth Monday after the examination," in paragraph 7 of the same Regulations; for the words "on the first Monday in December," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the F. A. Examination; for the words "on the morning of the fourth Monday after the examination," in paragraph 7 of the same Regulations; for the words "in the first week in January," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the Bachelor of Arts Examination; for the words "on the morning of the fourth Monday after the examination," in paragraph 7 of the same Regulations; for the words "in the first week in February" in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for Honours in Arts; for the words "on or before the 31st day of December," in paragraph 4 of the same Regulations; for the words "on or before the 1st of January," in paragraph 2 of the Regulations for the examination for the degree of Master of Arts; for the words "in the first week in January," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the degree of Bachelor in Law; for the words "in the first week in March," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the examination for Honours in Law; for the words "in the last week of March," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the license in medicine and surgery, and in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the degree of Bachelor in Medicine; for the words "in the first week of April," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the degree of Doctor in Medicine; for the words, "in the first week of May," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the license in Civil Engineering, and in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for the degree of Bachelor in Civil Engineering; and for the words "in the first week of June," in paragraph 1 of the Regulations for Honours in Civil Engineering, the following words have been substituted:—

"At such time as the Syndicate shall determine, the date to be approximately notified in the calendar for the year."

The following orders, issued by the Government of India in the Marine Department, are republished for general information :—

Simla, the 25th June 1880.

ALLOWANCES.

No. 34.—MESSING—

In supersession of Marine Notification No. 9 of 11th May 1877, the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify the following rates of table money payable for the entertainment of high functionaries, their suites, &c., on board Indian Government vessels. The rates are intended to cover all charges for messing, including wine, &c. :—

Class.	Passengers.	ALLOWANCE PER DIEM. For males.	For females.	For children of both sexes: Between 16 and 7 years.	For children of both sexes: Under 7 years.
	Captain's Table.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
I	Viceroy and Governor-General of India.	68 0 0 for the first 7 days 14 0 0 afterwards ...	9 0 0	5 0 0	4 0 0
	Each individual composing the suite.	14 0 0 for every day ...
II	Governors and Commanders-in-Chief.	45 0 0 for the first 7 days ... 12 0 0 afterwards ...
	Each member of their suite ...	12 0 0 for every day ...
III (a)	Lieutenant-Governors and Bishops.	34 0 0 for the first 7 days ... 12 0 0 afterwards ...
	Each member of their suite ...	12 0 0 for every day ...	8 0 0	4 0 0	3 0 0
(b)	Members of Council, Chief Commissioners, General Officers, Political Residents, and Secretaries to Government.	34 0 0 for the first 7 days ... 12 0 0 afterwards ...
IV	Political Agents	12 0 0 for the first 14 days 8 0 0 afterwards ...

NOTE.—The above rates will be allowed for officers under class IV only when embarking under special circumstances: when travelling as ordinary passengers, the rates laid down in G. G. O. No. 35 of 25th June 1880 will be allowed.

2. When the Viceroy, a Governor, or Commander-in-Chief proceeds in a ship on a tour which requires him to disembark at various ports, the higher rate a day will in general only be paid for the seven days' entertainment following his first embarkation. If there are special reasons for repeating this payment, the officer in command of the vessel may represent the circumstance to the official entertained for consideration, and, if subsequently necessary, to the Government of India in the Marine Department.

3. When more than one distinguished person is embarked at the same time, the person of the highest rank is to be paid for according to the scale, and the other or others only at the rate of Rs. 14 or Rs. 12 a day per head, as the case may be.

4. The periods for which the rates are to be paid shall commence on the day on which the first, and shall terminate on that on which the last, dinner is taken on board.

5. Should a passenger for whom provision is made under competent authority not embark, or having embarked subsequently disembark, or be transferred to another ship, the mess will be entitled to half the allowance, to cover the expenses incurred in making the necessary preparations. No deduction is to be made from the allowance for the time passengers may land at intermediate places for their own pleasure.

6. When any official is ordered a passage, the officer commanding the vessel will inform such passenger of the rate authorized for his entertainment, and arrange for payment of the amount before the passenger leaves the ship, if possible, or, upon his certificate, by the Indian Government treasury at the port of disembarkation, or at the nearest chief port, as the case may be.

7. Should the passenger not be satisfied with the statement of the commander of the vessel as to the class in the scale under which he is required to pay, the matter is to be at once referred to the authority ordering the passage. In the event of the latter officer agreeing with the passenger, the rate specified by the commander of the vessel should be paid, and the circumstances reported to the Government of India in the Marine Department.

8. Civil and Military officers will be liable to deduction for messing under existing rules.

No. 35.—In continuation of Marine Notification No. 34 of the 25th June 1880, the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council is pleased to rule that the following rates of table money shall be payable to commanders of all Indian Government vessels for the entertainment, on board such vessels, of British Commissioned Officers and of Civil Officers with rank not lower than that of Deputy Magistrate, Deputy Collector, or Extra Assistant Commissioner, together with their families and servants, when such officers travel as ordinary passengers, and not under the special rules laid down in the above order :—

	Rs. A. P.
Officers (Civil or Military)	... 4 0 0	per diem.
Lady, or female child of 16 years and upwards ...	... 3 0 0	,, Notice to the Public.

WITH effect from the 1st August 1880, the rates of commission charged on the realization of the value of parcels and registered book packets sent under the "value-payable" system will be reduced to half what they now are and thereby assimilated to the rates of commission charged on the issue of money orders. The new rates will be as follows:—

	Rs.	A.
On sums not exceeding Rs 10 ...	0	2
,, ,, ,, 25 ...	0	4
,, ,, ,, 50 ...	0	8
,, ,, ,, 75 ...	0	12
,, ,, ,, 125 ...	1	4

and 4 annas for every additional Rs. 25 or fraction thereof.

The value of the contents of a value-payable article will be limited to Rs. 600.

Value-payable articles may be addressed only to post offices, which are money order offices; and they may be posted only in post offices which are money order offices. The former restriction limiting the posting of value-payable articles in disbursing post offices is superseded.

The amounts realized from the addressees of value-payable articles less the commission chargeable thereon, will be paid to the senders by means of money orders.

When a value-payable article is presented at a post office, it must be accompanied by a memorandum prepared by the sender in the prescribed form, printed copies of which may be obtained from the post offices on application.

E. R. DOUGLAS,

Offg. Dy. Director-General of the Post Office of India.

DRAFT RULES PROPOSED UNDER ACT III (B.C.) OF 1876.

No. 76. Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by Section 99 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to direct the publication of the following rules for the Orissa Canals.

H. C. LEVINGE,
Jt.-Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal,
P. W. Dept., Irrigation Branch.

RULES UNDER ACT III (B.C.) OF 1876.

PART I.

Of Supply.

Rule 1.—Canal water will be supplied on written applications at the rates and on the conditions to be hereafter stated. (Section 74, Act III of 1876.)

Rule 2.—All applications must be made in forms which may be obtained free of cost at the Canal Revenue Offices. (Appendices A and B.)

Rule 3.—Applications for water will be received by the Deputy Revenue Superintendents or their duly authorized subordinates at the various circle and branch circle offices.

Rule 4.—Any Deputy Superintendent may refuse an application if he thinks it would not be to the interest of Government to comply with it. This discretion will be vested in the Deputy Superintendents only. Other canal revenue officers authorized to receive applications must refer for orders all doubtful cases to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of their respective circles.

PART II.

Rates and Conditions of Supply.

Rule 5.—The rates chargeable per acre for the different descriptions of crops have been fixed up to the end of November 1882, and are as follow:—

Crop.	Flow.			Lift.
First Rice.	Rs.	A.	P.	Rs.	A.	P.
For the whole irrigable and rice cultivated area of any village if applied for up to expiration of sanctioned rates ...	1	8	0	1	0	0
For any fractional area of any village or for other term...	3	0	0	2	0	0
Second Rice.
For dry-weather or rubbee crops for dalwa rice ...	1	8	0	1	0	0
For cotton, tobacco, haldi, ginger, wheat, vegetables, indigo, and all garden produce ...	2	0	0	1	8	0
For linseed, oilseed, dâl, and all pulses	1	0	0	0	10	0
Third Rice.
For sugarcane ...	6	0	0	4	0	0
Fourth Rice.
For filling tanks Re 1 per 10,000 cubic feet.

Rule 6.—Applications for water for the irrigation of rice crops at Rs. 1-8 per acre "flow" and Re. 1 "lift" must be signed by all the cultivators holding rice culturable and irrigable lands in the villages mentioned in the applications, and the names of the villages adjoining that in respect of which the application is made must be specified at the back of the applications.

Rule 7.—Applications for water at Rs. 3 "flow" and Rs. 2 "lift" irrigation must be signed by all those cultivating in the specific portion of the villages applied for. At the back of such applications should be entered the names and boundaries of the chaks or plots for which water is required.

Rule 8.—The provisions of Rule 7 will apply to all applications for water for sugarcane and dry-weather crops

Rule 9.—Applications under Rules 6, 7, and 9 will not be deemed complete until all the signatures of intending irrigators have been obtained, and water may be refused by the Deputy Superintendent until all the signatures shall have been obtained. Those who cannot write must affix their marks.

Rule 10.—All applicants should have distinctly explained to them the terms of the agreement at the head of their applications. The assessments made will be on the areas actually irrigable or irrigated and cultivated by applicants, and not on the areas as stated by them.

Rule 11.—Separate applications must be given in respect of each description of crop mentioned in the statement attached to Rule 5.

Rule 12.—The Deputy Superintendent may refuse to comply with the application of any village from the cultivators of which any arrears of water-rates are due, until such time as the arrears are paid.

PART III.

Of the Procedure for the Disposal of Applications for Water.

Rule 13.—On receipt of an application for water it should be dated and initialled by the receiving officer and entered in the register of applications (Register No. I). The officer receiving it, or his duly authorized subordinate, will then proceed to ascertain by local enquiry and the aid of survey maps, or by actual measurement, the following particulars regarding the lands mentioned in the applications:—

(1) Whether canal supply can be given.
(2) Whether the particulars as to areas and boundaries as given in the application are correct.
(3) Whether, with reference to the situation of the lands and areas applied for, it is to the interest of Government to comply with the application.

Rule 14.—After ascertaining by survey maps or actual measurement, and recording on the application the areas being or to be irrigated, the enquiring officer shall prepare a permit to supply water in the form prescribed in Appendix C for despatch to the supplying officer. A copy of the permit may, if wished, be made over to the applicants.

Rule 15.—Should the enquiring officer be of opinion that the areas applied for cannot be irrigated, or that the application should not for other reasons be sanctioned, he will submit his report with all the papers of the case for the orders of the Deputy Superintendent.

Rule 16.—It shall be at the discretion of the Deputy Superintendent to grant supply of water to any village or villages for which applications for water may have been received without waiting for the completion of any local enquiry or measurement.

Rule 17.—The manner in which any application may be finally disposed of should be briefly stated in the column of remarks in Register No. I.

Rule 18.—When an application for water has been finally disposed of, either by an order to supply water or otherwise, it should be forwarded to the head office, where it will be registered in detail in the register of leases (Register No. II).

PART IV.

Of Water Distribution to Applicants.

Rule 19.—Village channels have been constructed and are maintained by Government for the purpose of leading water to some convenient point or points within the boundaries of certain villages; and wherever such channels exist, canal water shall, if possible, be supplied from them to all applicants by the Superintending Engineer, his Executive Engineers, and their subordinates.

Rule 20.—Where no village channels exist from which supply can be given, applicants shall be directed to construct such village channels as may be required to irrigate their areas, and supply may be withheld until proper channels are made.

Rule 21.—Canal officers shall give every assistance to applicants in laying out and aligning village channels, and every effort must be made to induce villagers to construct their own channels.

Rule 22.—The complete control and custody of all irrigation sluices shall rest in the Superintending Engineer and the Executive Engineers subordinate to him; but it shall be competent to either of these officers, by an order in writing, to transfer the control and custody of any sluice to any person deemed fit to take charge thereof.

Rule 23.—All questions as to priority of right to take water, and all disputes regarding the quantity and regulation of supply, shall be determined by the Executive Engineer. It shall further be competent to this officer, at his discretion, to close entirely such channels and outlets as he may deem expedient to ensure proper rotation of supply to all applicants, and no claims for compensation for such closure shall lie.

Rule 24.—Applicants whose applications may have been sanctioned shall as far as possible be supplied at any time during the growth of the crop mentioned in their applications: but no applicant for water for a rice crop can claim a full supply before the 15th of June.

Rule 25.—Cultivators shall embank the field to which water is supplied, so that the water shall not run to waste or flow unnecessarily on land not entitled to irrigation.

Rule 26.—Where water is appropriated in an unauthorized manner, by cutting canal, distributary or village channel banks, or by opening sluices or shoots fixed in such banks, or by cutting or neglecting to keep in repair the boundaries of fields to which water is supplied, and the person by whose act or neglect such appropriation has ensued cannot be identified, all lands deriving benefit shall be liable to twice the ordinary charge, or such other charge, not being less than the ordinary rate, as the Deputy Superintendent of Canal Revenue may determine.

PART V.

Of Realization of Water-rates.

Rule 27.—Any person appointed as a Collector under section 82 of the Act shall receive sunnuds of appointment, in Form D for each village from which he agrees to collect, and he will be entitled to receive commission at the rate of 5 per cent. on all sums paid by him to Government on or before such dates as may be stated in his sunnuds of appointment. The person appointed Collector shall usually be a nominee of the cultivators from whom water-rates are due. No person appointed as Collector of water-rate shall be entitled to claim his commission until he has submitted such accounts as the Deputy Superintendent may prescribe.

Rule 28.—The Deputy Superintendent shall be at liberty to cancel any sunnud of appointment to collect, whenever such course appears advisable in the interest of Government or of the cultivators.

Rule 29.—Where no Collectors of water-rates are appointed, realizations will be made by the Canal Revenue Officers in charge of circles and by their authorized subordinates. The instructions embodied in Appendix E regarding collections must be read as part and parcel of these rules, and must be adhered to by all canal revenue subordinates.

Rule 30.—Demand statements of the water-rates due from each village will be issued from the Canal Revenue Office at least two months before such water-rates fall due. All demand statements will contain the names and residences of the cultivators from whom water-rates are due, the areas on which rates are payable, and amounts due from each ryot. Demand statements shall be served on the Collector, or if no Collector has been appointed, on some one of the principal applicants. General notice of such service shall be posted on some conspicuous part of each village, and shall specify dates of payment.

Rule 31.—The dates of payment of water-rates for the different crops shall be as follow:—

For rice	1st February.
„ sugarcane ...	.. 1st June.
„ dalwa and other dry-weather crops	... 1st August.

All payments of water-rates shall be paid in one instalment.

PART VI.

Rule 32.—All objections and claims for remission shall be made to the Deputy Superintendent.

Rule 33.—Remissions of water-rates will be granted in whole or in part by the Deputy Superintendent on the following grounds:—

(1) The total failure of supply.

(2) Damage to crops caused by deficiency or delay in the supply of water, in consequence of some act or omission on the part of the supplying officer, and independent of any act or omission on the part of the applicants.

(3) Damage caused by excess water under above restrictions.

(4) Where it can be shown that no crop was grown as originally intended. Provided that no claim for remission shall be allowed unless made while the crops alleged to have been damaged are on the ground.

Rule 34.—Special cases for remission not coming under the above heads shall be reported to the Collector for orders.

Rule 35.—All orders passed on claims for remission shall be duly communicated to the parties concerned.

PART VII.

Of Miscellaneous Sources of Revenue.

Rule 36.—Written applications must be given on plain paper to the Deputy Superintendent or to his duly authorized subordinate by any person wishing to cultivate Government canal lands, catch fish, or farm or purchase any miscellaneous source of canal revenue. The rules and procedure for dealing with these applications will be the same as those for dealing with applications for water, except that after necessary enquiry the applicant shall, if his demand be complied with, be called on to execute a kabooleyut, a pattah being made over to him.

Rule 37.—Leases for miscellaneous sources of revenue shall usually run for three or five years, at the discretion of the Deputy Superintendent; but all payments thereon shall be annual and payable on the 1st of June.

Rule 38.—A separate register (Register No. III) shall be maintained of all miscellaneous leases.

PART VIII.

Of Registers to be maintained under these Rules.

Rule 39.—The following registers shall be maintained by the Deputy Revenue Superintendent:—

Register No. I.—Register of applications.
Do. No. II.— Do. of water-rate leases (in head office only).
Register No. III.—Register of miscellaneous leases.
Register No. IV.—Daily cash-book.
Do. No. V.—Register of applications for remissions.
Register No. VI.—Register of persons appointed Collector under section 82.
Register No. VII.—Register of unauthorized irrigation.

Rule 40.—Register of all village channels shall be maintained by the Executive Engineers in such form as the Superintending Engineer may direct, and lists of all such registered village channels shall from time to time be supplied to the Deputy Superintendent.

FORM D.

5. For a breach of any of the above conditions I will forfeit to the Secretary of State a sum not exceeding Rs. 500.

Deputy Revenue Superintendent.

APPENDIX E.

The following rules are issued for the information and guidance of the Deputy Revenue Superintendents, tehsildars, and mohurirs :—

Rule 1.—As a rule all collections should be made by the tehsildar only, or by such other officer as may be in charge of a canal revenue circle.

Rule 2.—The tehsildar or officer in charge of a circle will as heretofore grant detail receipts for all collections made by him, will enter such collections as usual in his siha or No. IV Register, will remit all collections periodically to the head office in Cuttack, with detailed "challans" and counterfoils of all receipts granted. In addition to this, he will at the close of each month submit to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of his circle a detailed statement of all collections made by himself during the month. This will be simply a copy of all "siha" entries made by him during the month, and an abstract statement of demands and collections in the subjoined form :—

The tehsildar or officer in charge of a circle will also submit to the head office in Cuttack half-yearly returns of all outstanding balances. These returns will show in detail the amounts due from each defaulter. They will be checked and compared in the head office, and then forwarded to the Deputy Superintendent in charge of the canal to which they refer, and he will, when on tour of inspection, ascertain by personal enquiry from the alleged defaulters, as noted in such balance sheet, whether the sums due from them have been realized or not.

Rule 3.—Whenever it may be found necessary to employ ameens and mohurirs for collection work, the following system will be adopted : —

(a) The tehsildar or officer in charge of the circle will remain at head-quarters.

(b) The ameens and mohurirs collecting money will remit once or twice a week all their collections to the tehsildar's cutcherry. These remittances will be accompanied by a challan showing in gross the amounts remitted—(1) under the head of water-rates, and (2) under miscellaneous, thus—

1877-78.						Rs.	A.	P.

and all the counterfoils of receipts granted by the collecting officer.

For the sums so remitted the collecting officer will obtain a receipt from the tehsildar or officer in charge of the tehsil cutcherry, and these receipts will as heretofore be posted into collecting officer's "siha" below dates of remittance, sufficient space being left for the purpose. Collecting ameens and mohurirs will keep up detail "sihas" showing the particulars of all sums collected and remitted to the tehsil cutcherry, and at the close of each month will forward their "sihas" to the Deputy Superintendent in charge, procuring from him a receipt for their monthly "siha" in the subjoined form :—

(1) Dates between which collections noted in the "siha" were made.

(2) Name of collecting officer.

(3) Name of offices to whom collections were forwarded.
(4) Dates of receipt of such collections at tehsil cutcherry, with amounts received on each date.
(5) The Deputy Superintendent's certificate that all sums collected and forwarded by collecting officer have been duly acknowledged, and acknowledgments posted into the "siha."

The Deputy Superintendent's receipts will be kept by the collecting officers as vouchers in support of their work until such time as they may be called in by the Canal Revenue Superintendent. This will usually be when the total demands for the years to which such receipts refer have been finally closed.

Rule 4.—With the monthly "siha" and abstract statement of total demands and collections in his possession, the Deputy Superintendent will have ample information for enabling him to thoroughly check the tehsildar's accounts, and for taking all necessary action with regard to large and long-standing balances. He should periodically check the tehsildar's "siha," or No. IV Register, by comparing the entries in it with those in "ameen's" and mohurir's "sihas," marking off with a red pencil all items checked. By reference to the tehsildar's half-yearly balance sheets he will see at a glance whether the necessary processes have been issued or not, and by comparing it with the tehsildar's No. IV Register, should occasionally satisfy himself that amounts due on legal processes have been credited to Government. When on tour of inspection he should look into collecting officers' "sihas," and satisfy himself that they are properly kept up.

Rule 5.—Forms for tehsildar's, ameen's, and mohurir's "sihas" will be issued in detached sheets of Alipore Jail paper; each sheet will be numbered and initialled by the Deputy Superintendent. Printed forms of "half-yearly" balance statements will be issued for the use of tehsildars or other officers in charge of circles. All receipts and counterfoils issued from the head office will bear the initials of the head clerk or head mohurir, and each volume will be separately numbered and paged.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 123.

The 12th July 1880.

UNDER section 89 of Act X (B.C.) of 1871, the following annual accounts and reports of the District Road Committees of Chittagong and Noakholly, and of the Deputy Commissioner of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, of works done and in progress during the past cess year 1878-79, together with the remarks thereon of the Commissioner of Chittagong Division, are published for general information.

T. H. WICKES,

Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, in the P. W. Dept.

No. 51L, dated Chittagong, the 30th January 1880.

From—H. J. S. COTTON, Esq., Chairman of the District Road Committee, Chittagong,

To—The Commissioner of the Chittagong Division.

I HAVE the honor to submit the following report and annexed accounts on the working of the Chittagong District Road Committee for the cess year 1878-79, ending with 30th September 1879.

The Committee consisted of 17 members, of whom five were officials and the rest non-officials. The total number of meetings held during the year was seven.

There is no Sub-Committee in any part of the district. The supervision of the road works in the Cox's Bazar sub-division is carried out by the District Committee.

Mr. G. M. Currie was Chairman of the Road Cess Committe up to the 28th November 1878: I was Chairman from that date up to the 5th September 1879; and Mr. A. H. Haggard was Chairman during the remainder of the year.

The following officers held the office of Vice-Chairman during the year:—

Mr Fasson from October to 10th December 1878;

Mr. Bolton from 11th December 1878 to 25th January 1879;

Mr. Savage from 26th February 1879 to 22nd June 1879; and Mr. Fasson again from 24th June to the end of the year.

During the intervals, when there was no Vice-Chairman, the duties were discharged by the Chairman.

Under sections 49 and 50 of Act X of 1871, the following gentlemen were appointed members of the Committee towards the close of the year :—

Alfred Dowling Esq. ...	... Proprietor of the Agonea Tea Estate.
A. Brownlow, Esq. ...	... Manager and part proprietor of the Futtickcherry Tea Estate.
Baboo Durga Das Das ...	... Pleader.
„ Chaitunyo Churn Dutt ...	... Ditto.
„ Nittya Nundo Roy ...	.. Merchant and Zemindar.
„ Kailas Chunder Das ...	... Manager under the Court of Wards.

A statement in the prescribed form is annexed, giving the names of the members of the Committee and the number of meetings attended by each. The average number of members attending each meeting was seven, a circumstance plainly shewing the general interest taken in the proceedings of the Committee. At the meeting held towards the close of the year, to consider the budget and determine the rate of cess to be fixed for the ensuing year, no less than 15 members out of 17 were present. At all meetings I have derived great assistance from the members of the Committee, and especially from Mr. Campbell, Baboo Khetter Mohun Bose, the Executive Engineer, and Baboo Lall Chand Chowdrie. There is no question of the utility of the Committee as at present organized in this district.

The following table will show the receipts of the Road Cess Fund during the year under the several heads :—

		Estimated amount.	Actual amount.
		Rs.	Rs.	A.	P.
(a)	Cess on lands ...	89,000	97,932	8	4¼
	Cess on houses ...	420	7[illegible]	3	10½
	One per cent road cess ...	200	422	10	4
(b)	Canal tolls ...	6,344	5,245	2	6
(c)	Grant-in-aid from Provincial Services ...	.....	5,810	5	1
	Grant-in-aid from Government on account of Public Works Cess establishment ...	.....	4,800	0	0
(d)	Contribution from Khas Mehal Fund ...	1,233	.....
(e)	Process fees for recovery of road cess arrears ...	300	2,456	12	6
(f)	Sales of produce and stores ...	.....	4	5	0
	Total ...	97,497	1,16,750	15	7¾

The financial result of the year is therefore satisfactory, the receipts exceeding the estimate in almost all items of the budget.

(a.)—In regard to the cess on land, the realizations of the previous year had been very indifferent, and the excess over the estimate is to be attributed to the recovery of large arrears. There is still great difficulty in realizations, but some method has now been introduced, and by the assiduous exertions of the collecting establishment, matters have been placed on a somewhat better footing. The Committee are indebted to the Road Cess Deputy Collector for this result.

(b.)—The falling off under canal tolls is due to special circumstances. The collection of these tolls was formerly farmed out to the highest bidder, and the estimate was prepared in accordance with the amount of rent settled at the auction sales. But the farmers defaulted to a large extent, and early in the year it was found necessary to bring the canals under khas management. The truth is that the bids were higher than was warranted, and the estimate based upon them was therefore excessive. This subject will be again alluded to later on in this report.

(c.)—The grant-in-aid from Provincial Fund of Rs. 5,810 is a mere refund of road cess money spent on the Jaldi road in the previous year 1877-78, and recovered from the sum of Rs. 15,000 sanctioned by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal on account of relief measures in that part of the district. The grant from Government on account of Public Works Cess establishment was sanctioned during the year, and therefore could not be shown in the budget estimate.

(d.)—As sanction to the Khas Mehal budget was not received during the year under report, the sum allotted in the budget as a contribution from this fund could not be realized. It will be credited during the current year.

(e)—The increase under the head of process fees is due to the fact that the salary of temporary peons employed for recovery of road cess has been recovered from the parties and credited to the fund. This is a mere refund of attachment charges, and per contra a part of the increased expenditure under "General management" is attributable to this extraordinary charge.

The following statement shows the expenditure incurred during the year:—

		Estimated amount.	Actual amount.
		Rs.	Rs.	A.	P.
(a) General management ...	...	13,492	16,488	7	4
(b) Toll collection—canal ...	...	.....	1,668	4	7
(c) Staging bungalows ...	...	.....	.....
Public Works.—Original works	...	14,330	4,839	7	11
Repairs	...	24,850	16,426	7	5
Establishment	...	10,988	5,477	14	8
Tools-and plant	...	200	484	8	0
Total	...	63,860	45,385	1	6

It was necessary for the Committee to act during the past year with the most studied regard to economy. The year began with a deficit balance of Rs. 37,007, and it was the first charge upon the funds of the Committee to pay off this debt to Government. Not only has this debt been discharged, but the year closed with a credit balance of Rs. 23,099.

The Committee were of opinion that it was essential to place their affairs upon a sound financial footing, and that until this was done expenditure in all departments should be curtailed as far as possible. They have been successful in their object, and this fact affords a satisfactory explanation of the comparatively small sum expended during the year on account of public works.

(a.)—The increase of expenditure on "General management" is due to the salary of temporary peons and other charges incurred for recovery of road cess arrears. These charges have been recovered from the parties in the shape of process fees and credited to the fund as explained above. The cost of printed books and forms supplied by private presses was also very high, and this is another cause of the excess expenditure over the budget estimate. But under any circumstances the total expenditure is large and must always continue to be so in a district where the estates are almost innumerable and exceedingly small and divided amongst many shareholders. The establishment is kept as low as possible, and it would be false economy to reduce it so as to in any way impair its efficiency.

(b.)—The cost of collecting canal tolls is a new charge. Before November 1878, the line of canals through the Banscally and Puttea thanas, which are in fact one of the most important lines of communication in the district, were under the management of the Magistrate. They were then transferred to the Committee, and the old procedure of letting them out in farm was continued; the rents, however, were not realized with regularity, and an adjustment of accounts showed that, on the 1st January 1879, there was still outstanding a total of Rs. 5,728 on account of the arrears of the previous year. Notice was then given to the farmers to pay up the arrears within a certain time, and they were informed that, if they did not do so, their leases would be cancelled and the canals held direct. As they failed to pay, the canals were taken by the Committee under khas management from the 1st February, and were so managed during the remainder of the year. This change, in the opinion of the Committee, has worked satisfactorily; the financial results are better than they were under the old system, and there is less oppression. Civil suits were instituted against the defaulting farmers, and after some trouble decrees were obtained, but it is not expected that more than half of the amount of the decrees will be realized.

Owing to the convergent action of the tides, these canals, especially the sections known under the names of Boalkhally and Banscolly, have a constant tendency to silt up, and large sums have to be periodically spent to make them navigable for traffic. The silt accumulates at the place where the tides meet. Various schemes have been proposed, and some attempted in order to facilitate a stronger current of water in one direction, but without much success at present. This is one of the most important matters to which the District Engineer, who has recently joined, will have to turn his attention.

The Moheskhali canal, which was before under the control of the Conservator of the Port, was transferred to the charge of the Committee in July 1879, and the proceeds are now credited to the Road Fund. If any opinion may be formed from the receipts of this canal during the past six months, its maintenance will prove the reverse of profitable to the Committee.

The following is a brief account of works executed on the different roads and canals of the district during the year.

Arracan Road. This road has received surface repairs from the south bank of the river Karnafuli to 39th mile, the bridges have been repaired to 31st mile, and a new wooden bridge, No. 38, of 42 feet span, has been constructed. The whole line of this road, a distance of 22½ miles between Padua village and the south bank of the Karnafuli, is in good condition. Beyond Padua up to Chunati the road is a fragment merely of magnificent embankments. It is repeatedly intersected by khalls and unbridged all along. The Committee are sensible of the importance of completing this road, and during the present season two new bridges will be constructed.

A dam 72 feet long has been placed on the side of this road at 12th mile for protection of the road from the sudden floods which come down from the adjacent hills during the rains in almost irresistible force.

One hundred and seventy-one temporary bamboo bridges, aggregating 7,722 feet in length, have been put up between Satkania and Teknaf and from Ramoo to Gurjonia. The jungle has also been cleared from the sides of the road where it passes through these hilly tracts.

The road has been raised on the 9th, 11th and 12th miles.

Ramghur Road.—This road runs from the northern boundary of Chittagong Municipality towards Ramghur. A length of 23½ miles of this road has been completed. It has received surface repairs throughout this length, and urgent repairs were also given to 12 bridges which were much dilapidated. The unusually heavy rains in June breached this road badly about the 22nd mile, and for some time it was impossible to accord even temporary repairs. The necessary steps are now being taken. New bridges on the 15th and 17th miles will be constructed during this cold weather.

Hill Tracts Road.—This road joins the Ramghur road a little north of Hathazari and goes in the direction of Raojan. It is an exceedingly fine embankment, but unbridged. Surface repairs were given and 30 temporary foot bridges were put up to make the road passable for dâk-runners and foot passengers Moiskhali Strand Road.—This road connects the western boundary of the municipality with the village of Halishahur. It received surface repairs throughout its whole length, and bridges Nos. 1 and 2 received thorough repairs.

There is some anxiety about a portion of this road being washed away by the Karnafuli river, and it was found necessary to guard against this by banking the river with stone ballast. This is another matter demanding the District Engineer's particular attention.

Chandpore Road.—This road has been repaired between Sadonpore and the south bank of the river Karnafuli, a distance of 16¾ miles, and wooden bridges thereon, Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, and 21, have been constructed. Twelve bamboo bridges five feet wide have been erected between the south bank of the Sungoo river and Banigram. This road is very narrow and winding. It has been proposed to straighten it between the first and seventh miles, and perhaps in other places, and when funds are available they might very profitably be expended in the improvements of this useful road. At present, though passable, it is one of the worst constructed roads in the district.

Sakerapole Road.—This road proceeds from Puttea police station on the Arracan road to the bank of Hargya nullah, a distance of 4½ miles, and was repaired all along. Wooden wing walls to the ends of bridges Nos. 3, 4, and 7 have been constructed, and two old timber bridges repaired. The road is in fair condition and passable for carts.

The branch Sakerapole road in connection with the Dhalghat road has been thoroughly repaired and a timber bridge erected; it is a very useful little branch and much appreciated by the people of the neighbourhood, but properly it should be classed among village roads.

Dhalghat Road.—This road has been repaired from the junction of the Sakerapole road to the south bank of Kaicha or Karnafuli, a distance of 6½ miles, and four bamboo bridges have been put up. The road is in fair condition, but it is too narrow for carts.

Ramoo Road.—This road has received surface repairs between Cox's Bazar and Ramoo. Six wooden bridges have been repaired, and a new wooden bridge of 30 feet span has been constructed on the 18th mile. The road is in tolerable condition.

Kalurghat Road.—This road runs from the Bakolia road to the east bank of Karnafuli, over a length of six miles. Surface repairs and urgent repairs to seven bridges have been carried out. It is very muddy and impassable during the rains and requires to be raised.

Nasirabad Road.—This road begins from the western boundary of the municipality and meets the Ramghur road near Setaljharna Surra Surface repairs have been done. Two bridges with masonry abutments and wooden platforms have also been constructed.

Robertgunge Road.—This road runs from the Trunk Road to the bank of Fenny river. It has received surface repairs, and five bamboo platforms have been given.

Poroikora Road.—This road runs from the north bank of the Murali nullah to the third mile of the Chandpore road, a distance of 5½ miles. It has received necessary repairs. The road with its bridges is in fair condition.

Mahajan's Hat Road.—This road has received surface repairs and two bamboo platforms have been put up. It is passable for carts.

Rangonea Road.—This road runs from the bank of Issamutty to Ranee's Hât. Petty repairs to surface over four miles have been executed. Three foot bridges were put up.

Anwarah Road.—This road branches off from the 10th mile of Chandpore road to the Anwarah outpost and Anwarah village. It has received surface repairs, and two of its wooden bridges have been repaired. The state of the road is tolerable.

Meeta Serra Road.—This road branches off from the old Arracan road close to the tea factory, one mile in length, and goes towards Meeta Serra village. It has received surface repairs.

Tipperah Pass, Halishahur, and Bakolia Roads.—These three roads are near the station. They have received surface repairs.

Fenewa Road.—This road runs from Beebi's Hât on the Ramghur road to the Halda Valley Tea Estate. Surface repairs have been carried out and petty repairs to some of the bridges. A large bridge has been constructed over the Lelang Surra by the Manager of Fenewa Tea Estate.

Jaldi Road.—This road was commenced last year as a famine relief, and as far as it has gone is the best laid out road in the district. No new earthwork was done during the year, but now that funds are available it will be again taken up. Twenty-eight temporary bamboo foot bridges were put up for the use of the dâk runners and other foot traffic.

Boalkhali Towing Paths.—These paths have received thorough repairs, and wooden bridges Nos. 1, 4, and 5 have been repaired. The present condition of these paths is very satisfactory.

Boalkhali Canal.—The silt from this canal was cleared out from the junction of Chandkhali to the east of the mouth of the Kumarkhal, 2¼ miles in length, and the canal is now in a satisfactory state, being navigable during the whole season.

Village Roads.—A sum of Rs. 4,000 was sanctioned on account of the village roads during the year and was well spent. The Committee are anxious to spend more money on village roads. This is the most popular and by no means the least useful manner of expending the road cess funds, and the villagers of Chittagong are very eager to derive their full benefit from the cess in this respect. More money would have been spent on these roads last year if it had been available. During the current year a sum of Rs. 7,000 has been sanctioned for village roads, and there is no doubt that the whole of it will be utilized. The village roads of this district are, however, exceedingly bad, and require much more money to be spent on them than the funds of the road cess will ever be able to afford.

1. Kanongopara.
2. Seetacoond.
3. Sonahora.
4. Agonea village road.
5. Kelishohur.

Establishment.—The saving under this head is concurrent with the saving effected under Public Works.

The newly appointed District Engineer, Baboo Nitye Gobind Chowdry, did not join his appointment till after the close of the year. The officer primarily responsible for carrying out the road works during the year was supervisor Baboo Mohes Chundra Goho, who for many years has been in charge of the Road Department. He is an invaluable officer of great energy and experience, and the Committee are glad to record their appreciation of his services during the past year. Overseer Okhil Chunder Sen has given satisfaction. The Committee also desire to notice the good work done by Baboo Prosanna Coomar Chowdry their head clerk and accountant.

A. MANSON,
Chairman, District Road Committee.

No. 112RCC, dated Noakholly, the 14th January 1880.

From—W. FIDDIAN, Esq., Chairman, District Road Cess Committee, Noakholly,
To—The Commissioner of the Chittagong Division.

I HAVE the honor to submit the annual accounts and the administration report of the local works undertaken by the District Road Cess Committee during the year 1878-79.

2. Mr. A. Manson was Chairman for the first six months of the year and myself for the remainder.

3. On the transfer of Baboo Bagola Prosanna Mozumdar, Vice-Chairman, to Tipperah on promotion in February 1879, the Vice-Chairmanship remained vacant until the end of April. The Road Cess Deputy Collector who was then appointed fell sick and had to leave the district in July, Mr. Sandys taking his place as Vice-Chairman in September. During these successive vacancies, the filling up of which was a matter of difficulty, the work of both appointments had to be done by the Chairman.

4. During the year eleven meetings of the Committee were convened, but at four of these no business was transacted for want of a quorum, owing partly to the large number of mofussil members who rarely attend, and partly to the unusual sickliness of the rainy season. The following is a list of the members who attended six or more meetings:—

The Chairman	10
Baboo Adysit Charan Datta, Government Pleader	8
,, Raj Kumar Rai	7
The District Superintendent of Police	6
Baboo Tarini Prosad Sen, Naib of Bhullooah Estate	6

Four members, including the Executive Engineer, whose head-quarters are at Chittagong, did not attend a single meeting The number of mofussil members has been reduced and a corresponding increase made of town members, so as to give the Committee a better working proportion.

5. The native members, with one or two exceptions, take little interest and afford but little aid in the management of road cess affairs, although they value the honour of belonging to the Committee

6. The provisions of section 57 were duly observed in issuing notices of the Committee meetings. The proceedings of every meeting have been regularly entered in a minute book under section 61 of the Road Cess Act since the formation of the Committee. No land proprietor has taken the trouble to inspect the book.

7. The Road Cess Act has worked satisfactorily on the whole. There has been a difficulty in the way of securing prompt collections of the road cess dues for want of a sufficiently stringent procedure, but this defect will be remedied under the new Act.

8. The annual accounts were examined and passed by a sub-committee, as required under section 88 of the Act.

9. The following works were executed during the year:—

ORIGINAL WORKS.	Rs.	A.	P.

38. Bose's Haut road.
39. Panpara road.
40. Chur Kaonia road.
41. Rangamala road.

A lump sum of Rs 5,100 has been budgeted for village communications of the district.

12. There is a Branch Road Cess Committee at the Fenny river sub-division which held five sittings during the year. The Chairman takes an active interest in the matter of village communications, and in that department the Branch Committee will probably be of considerable service.

13. The proposed scheme of planting fruit trees along the edges of the roads has not as yet made any progress. The district being low and submerged in water for several months in the year, trees in general, and more especially fruit trees, are grown with difficulty and require high ground. The roads are not, as a rule, wide enough to admit of trees being planted at the edge. An attempt may be made during the coming season.

14. The people thoroughly appreciate the value of village roads, and are not slow in petitioning for their construction or developement, but are often unwilling to give up the small amount of land which is required for the purpose. Satisfactory progress has, however, been made in the utilisation and improvement of village roads already in existence. There were many applications by cultivators for drains to drain their fields, but these could not of course be complied with.

15. The following roads which lie within the municipality at the head-quarters have been taken over by the Committee under Government orders during the year, as they really formed the terminations of district roads and required to be kept in good order, while the funds at the disposal of the municipality were extremely limited :—

Gateway road.
Bara Bazar road.
Taltolly road, in two sections.
Kalitara road.
Bruce's Tank road.
Dewanpara road.

The Deputy Examiner, Mr. Wilson, made an examination of accounts on the 23rd August last, and the instructions given by him will be carefully attended to.

GENERAL REMARKS.

16. The condition of the principal roads has been considerably improved during the year, and the district is now very fairly of in that respect. There is still, however, much to be done in the district in the matter of bridges, many of which are in a dilapidated state, and should be repaired or replaced by better structures. A large new bridge is to be built on the Chittagong road to span the Dhumchur khall. The Government has referred to the desirability of improving the water communications of the district by deepening khalls, &c., and during the past year the Noakholly river or khall has been carefully surveyed with a view to opening out an important route to Tipperah, and a considerable sum of money reserved for the purpose. The scheme will shortly be submitted to the higher authorities for approval.

17. The offices of the Committee and of the District Engineer have had inadequate accommodation hitherto in a small hired bungalow. The execution of a new pucka building, at a cost of Rs. 10,000, has been sanctioned, and will be undertaken during the coming year.

REMARKS ON OFFICERS.

Account Branch.

18. The clerks in the Account Department have continued to do their work satisfactorily, and the state of the office at the time of inspection by Mr. Wilson was found to be good. The head clerk, Baboo Tarak Nath Sen, is a steady and capable subordinate.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

19. The District Engineer has worked diligently during the year and in a more regular system than was in operation before, and the condition of the roads has improved considerably. On the whole he deserves credit for his work.

20. There was some difficulty in keeping up the establishment subordinate to the District Engineer, and inconvenience resulted. Of the two Overseers, one fell ill and resigned, and the other, Baboo Bishun Charan Biswas, had to be suspended by the Committee for some irregularities in reference to his work.

Mr. D. E. Ferrault, Assistant Overseer, is favourably reported on by the District Engineer. He had a considerable number of roads to look after and seems to work hard.

Baboo Mohim Chunder Ghosh, the head clerk and accountant in the District Engineer's office, who has now returned to his permanent appointment in the Magistrate's office, has done his work quietly and well, and Mr. Andrews, who takes his place, is also well spoken of EXPLANATION.

There will appear a difference of Rs. 209-3 between the establishment under the committee's control and that of works when compared with the quarterly returns. This is owing to the amount being shown in the first quarterly return during the month of December 1878 under the head of "working establishment" instead of "establishment under committee's control."

E. F. SANDYS,

Vice-Chairman, Road Cess Committee.

No. 161R, dated Rungamatti, the 6th November 1879.

From—CAPTAIN A. E. GORDON, Offg. Deputy Commissioner, Rungamatti,
To—The Commissioner of the Chittagong Division.

I HAVE the honor to submit the District Road Fund annual accounts for the cess year commencing from 1st October 1878 and closing with 30th September 1879. The following is an abstract of the transaction during the above period :—

	Rs.	A.	P.
Balance in hand on the 1st October 1878	13,519	4	3
Expenditure from 1st October 1878 to 30th September 1879	7,562	14	3
Balance available on the 1st October 1879 ...	5,956	6	0

2. The grant-in-aid from Provincial Reserve Fund for 1878-79 was drawn from the treasury in 1877-78, and advanced to hillmen who were suffering from distress. This timely aid not only enabled them to harvest their "jhoom" crop, but they were able to repay the loan and secure a better crop during 1878-79 than they had enjoyed for years past.

3. The Road Cess Act (X of 1871) has not been introduced in this district, there being no property taxable, hence there has been no need of a Sudder or Branch Committee. The works are executed under the guidance of the Deputy Commissioner and his assistants after they are approved by the Commissioner of Chittagong. In important works the opinion of the Executive Engineer of Chittagong is sought and obtained.

4. The works enumerated below were executed during the period under review. About one-quarter mile of road on the west of Manickcherry hill was improved by cutting and removing débris which had fallen on the road during the rainy season. On this road 90,000 cubic feet of hard sandstone were cut and removed, and its width has been enlarged from three to five feet at a cost of Rs. 525.

On the above road 102 temporary bridges were constructed, each measuring about 35 feet in length and six feet in breadth, at a cost of Rs. 1,108-10.

At the head-quarter station of Rungamatti about 300 yards of road were improved by cutting and removing 15,000 cubic feet of earth which had accumulated on the road during the rainy season at a cost of Rs. 70.

Two roads—one from Manickcherry to Ramghur, about 21 miles in length, and the other from Mohalsurry to Kunchunnagore, about 32 miles in length—were constructed by cutting and removing jungle and undergrowth of trees. The cost of making the former amounted to Rs. 1,050, and of the latter to Rs. 1,615-3-3.

At Ruma, the head-quarter station of the Sungoo sub-division, two embankments were made for roads and for preserving water during the dry season for the use of the men of the frontier police. Jungle all over the station was cleared for roadways at a cost of Rs. 935-13-3.

5. The following repairs were executed by cutting and removing jungle, undergrowth of trees, and brushwood from the roadways :—

Twenty-four miles of road from Rungamatti to Raojan, at a cost of Rs. 403.
Twenty miles of road from Chandergona to Banderbun, at a cost of Rs 507-12.
Three miles of road from Chandergona towards Rungamatti, at a cost of Rs. 50.
Twelve miles of road from Ruma to Politye, at a cost of Rs. 67-10-3.
Ten miles of road from Banderbun to Dohasary, at a cost of Rs. 150.

On the road from Rungamatti to Chittagong gaps were filled up and débris removed at a cost of Rs. 180, and jarul timber to the value of Rs. 50 purchased for repairing the wooden bridge at Rungamatti.

6. The establishment which was entertained during the year consisted of a mohurrir, one temporary overseer, and one sirdar; Mr. A. DeRozario, Inspector of Police, drawing a special allowance of Rs. 50 per mensem for supervising all out-door works. The total cost of the establishment amounted to Rs. 585-1-6.

7. The sum of Rs. 58-4 were paid for the price of forms and printing charges. Rs. 206-8 were spent for new tools and repairs of old ones.

8. The execution of the following works have been proposed at a cost of Rs. 15,500 in the budget estimate for 1879-80, and the amount will be devoted as follows :—

	Rs.	A.	P.
To original works	5,418	12	0
„ repairs and maintenance	8,560	0	0
„ establishment	1,059	0	0
Total ...	15,500	0	0

Cutting down and lowering the top of Manickcherry hill by excavating and removing 80,000 cubic feet of hard sandstone; constructing half mile of wheeled cart road on the west of Manickcherry hill by cutting and removing 450,000 cubic feet of rocky sides of hills.

Constructing a dam at the head-quarter station of Rungamatti for a roadway by raising an embankment and filling up the dam with 150,000 cubic feet of earth.

Raising an embankment on the banks of the river for a roadway with 120,000 cubic feet of stone; constructing 11 miles of road from Ruma towards Banderbun by cutting and removing jungle.

9. The following repairs will also be executed:—

Three miles of road from Chandergonah towards Rungamatti.
Four miles of road from Dewan's keel towards Raojan.
Ten miles of road from Banderbun to Dohasary.
Twenty-four miles of road from Rungamatti to Raojan in Chittagong, three wells, one revetment and one wooden bridge at Rungamatti, two-and-a-half miles of road, and 18 bridges on the road from Feskichera to Beerkul.
Twenty miles of road from Chandergona to Banderbun.
Forty-six miles of road from Banderbun to Ruma.
One mile of rapids at Uttan-Chuttra river, Kurnafoolee.
Twelve miles of road from Ruma to Pyramid hill.
Two-and-a-half miles of village road from Rungamatti to Singi nullah.
Two miles of village road from Chandergona to Waggah.
Thirty-two miles of road from Mohalsurry to Kunchunnagore.
Twenty-one miles of road from Manickcherry to Ramghur.

10. It has been proposed to entertain an establishment consisting of a mohurir, one temporary overseer, two temporary sirdars, and Mr. A. DeRozario, Inspector of Police, for supervising the works.

11. The works enumerated above cannot be executed until Government sanction to the usual grant of Rs. 10,000 per annum from the Provincial Reserve Fund is obtained. Such sanction in former years would reach this office in July or August; this year it has been delayed up to date.

12. The memorandum of advances will show that a sum of Rs. 4,433-10-4 were outstanding at the close of September last, out of which sum Rs. 615-14 detailed in the margin, form a portion of the Rs. 85,000 advanced to hillmen from the Road Fund during 1871, 1872, and 1873. The men from whom the above amount is recoverable have absconded to Hill Tipperah and other places. It is impossible to get any trace of these men. I would recommend that the sum of Rs. 615-14 may be written off the accounts, and that Government sanction be obtained to this.

No. 69GM, dated Chittagong, the 24th February 1880.

From—E. E. LOWIS, ESQ., Commissioner of the Chittagong Division,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Public Works Department.

I HAVE the honor to submit the following annual report on the administration of the District Road Fund in the districts of the Chittagong Division, for the cess-year ending with 30th September 1879, and to enclose herein the district reports and accounts.

2. The report and accounts from the Chittagong Hill Tracts district were received in this office on the 24th December 1879; from the district of Noakholly on the 17th January 1880, and from the Chittagong district, on the 3rd instant only.

3. An abstract of particulars regarding the meetings of the district road committees in the Regulation Districts of this Division during the year under review also accompanies. The Road Cess Act, X (B.C.) of 1871, has not been extended to the Chittagong Hill Tracts district, nor has any committee been formed for the management of its Road Fund, the administration of which rests solely with the Deputy Commissioner.

4. The committee in Chittagong consisted of five official, and 12 non-official members, and they had seven meetings, the average attendance being 7·28. The inclusion of Baboo Koilas Chandra Das amongst the non-official members seems, however, to be a mistake, as he is manager of Court of Wards' estates under the Collector's control, and is therefore virtually an official rather than a non-official member of the committee. The same remarks apply to Baboo Gopee Mohun Ghose, who is a khas mehal teshildar under the Collector.

5. In Noakholly the committee was composed of five official and 13 non-official members. There were 11 meetings held during the year, with an average attendance of six.

6. In Chittagong the members are reported to have generally taken interest in the proceedings of the committee, and to have assisted the Chairman greatly. Mr. Cotton further adds that there is no question of the utility of the committee as at present organised in this district. The Magistrate would appear to find his committee useful only as a consultative body. In his reply to Government Financial Department Circular No. 7, of the 1st November last, regarding the proposals for the improvement of the drainage of towns and villages in Bengal, he reports that in many cases no member, but the Chairman is adequately acquainted with the demands of the whole district upon the resources of the committee; that the members are no doubt intimately acquainted with the needs of particular localities, but it is usually the case that they have never even seen the greater part of the district, and never intend to visit it; and that the principal value of the committee's services is deliberative and consultative to guide and advise the Chairman and Vice-Chairman, but the initial executive work cannot, as a rule, be taken up by members of the committee.

7. In Noakholly, the native members are reported to have taken little interest, and to have afforded but little aid, in the management of road-cess affairs. Four of the members did not attend any meeting during the year. Their names have accordingly been removed and others selected to take their place.

8. There is only one branch committee formed under the Act in the Fenny subdivision in Noakholly. The district committee at Chittagong has been asked to take steps to open branch committees in proper quarters.

9. The receipts of the Division during the year under report on account of the District Road Fund amounted to Rs. 2,05,467-12-8¾ against Rs. 1,48,700-13-7 of the preceding year, viz.—

	Cess year. 1877-78. Rs.	A.	P.	1878-79. Rs.	A.	P.
Revenue under the District Road Cess Act	1,18,291	2	2	1,82,001	2	6¾

Ditto from private sources ...	.....			.....
Grant-in-aid from Government on account of Public Works Cess Establishment	.....			4,800	0	0

Sales of produce and stores ...	42	11	3	4	5	0
Miscellaneous	1,814	9	11	2,913	15	8
Total ...	1,48,700	13	7	2,05,467	12	8¾

10. The total receipts (Rs. 2,05,467-12-8¾, together with the unexpended balance (Rs. 32,382-14-3) of the preceding year, minus the deficit expenditure (Rs. 37,007-13-1) which the Chittagong committee had to repay as debt due to Government, gives a net income of Rs. 2,00,792-13-10¾ for, expenditure during the year under report. The unexpended balance of the preceding year, however, includes Rs. 10,000 granted for expenditure in the Hill Tracts during the year under review—vide Government notification No. 104, of 6th May 1878, published in page 120 of Part I of the Calcutta Gazette of 8th idem.

12. Out of the above income only Rs. 92,663-1-11 were actually spent during the past year, against Rs. 1,27,470-6-3 of the preceding year, viz.—

	Cess year. 1877-78. Rs.	A.	P.	1878-79. Rs.	A.	P.
On collection of revenue, &c. ...	42,629	14	1	24,496	12	0
On original district works ...	32,166	13	7	20,920	15	5
On repairs	41,676	13	6	33,542	7	10
On work establishment	10,107	3	7	12,281	9	5
On tools and plant	889	9	6	1,421	5	3
Total ...	1,27,470	6	3	92,663	1	11

13. The unexpended cash balance at close of the year amounted to Rs. 89,575-13-7¾, and the advances outstanding to Rs. 18,553-14-4.

14. There was an unduly large expenditure incurred in the past year on work establishment, more especially in the Chittagong district. Rs. 12,282 were spent on establishment to carry out original works and repairs costing Rs. 54,463, while in the preceding year an establishment costing Rs. 10,107 only was all to carry out works to the value of Rs. 73,844. Contracts were less freely given, but I am not sure that better work was done.

15. It is also unsatisfactory to find that no progress has been made in any of the districts in planting fruit or other trees along the sides of roads. The attention of the committees will be drawn to this.

16. Rupees 4,000 in Chittagong, and Rs. 2,419-11 in Noakholly were spent on village roads during the past year. The village roads in both the districts appear to be numerous, though many of them are much in want of repair, and a portion of the funds at the disposal of the committee may well be expended in keeping up these means of communication, for such outlay will do much to make the Act popular and facilitate its working.

17. In Chittagong especially, complaints have been made to me regarding the imposition of the road cess and public works tax, and of the difficulty experienced by the zemindars in getting the ryots to pay their quota, and this objection will continue until the roads are made and communication opened, when the people will, I hope, find that they are not paying without reaping some compensating advantage. It is but little the committee can afford to set aside for village roads in Chittagong, for the whole system of roads had by degrees fallen into such a neglected state that a very large expenditure is now required to put them into thorough repair. There is not a single road in Chittagong, not even excepting the Imperial road to Dacca, that can be said to be in satisfactory order.

18. The Act is reported to have worked well in Noakholly during the year.

19. No contribution was made to the Public Works Department during the past year. The agency at the disposal of the committees and the Deputy Commissioner of the Hill Tracts were sufficient to cope with the works done.

20. The following is a statement showing the works proposed to be done in the districts of this Division, and the amounts estimated to be spent on them during the current cess year:—

NOTICE is hereby given that the proprietary right of Government, as specified in the conditions of sale below, to the undermentioned estate situate in the district of Gya, will be put up to sale at the Gya Collectorate on the 22nd July 1880, corresponding with 1st Sawan 1887, Thursday.

The purchasers will be subject to the following conditions of sale:—

Conditions of Sale.

1*st*.—The estate to be sold to the highest bidder above the upset price. The purchaser of this estate will be considered as the proprietor of the estate, and the entire proprietary right of Government in such estate will be transferred to him, subject to the revenue fixed in perpetuity.

2*nd*.—The sale to be subject to existing leases, and to the rights conferred by the settlement proceedings and by the laws in force; and purchasers to be bound to respect the rights of resident cultivators who have signed the Schedule of Assessment prepared by the revenue authorities.

3*rd*.—If the amount of purchase-money do not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount to be paid down at once.

4*th*.—If the amount of purchase-money exceed Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount bid to be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale to be cancelled (the sum deposited being forfeited to Government), and the estate to be again put up to sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

An Act to amend the Law for the Recovery of certain Public Demands.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law for the recovery of certain dues and debts demandable by Public Officers: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short Title.

1. This Act may be called "The Public Demands' Recovery Act, 1880:"

Extent.

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 2, it extends to all the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal:

Commencement.

It shall come into operation on and after the date on which it shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Construction of this Act.

2. This Act, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, shall be construed as one with Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council, and Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council. The powers given by this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any powers conferred by any Act now being in force for the recovery of any due, debt, or demand to which the provisions of this Act are applicable.

Repeal of Acts in Schedule.

3. The Acts specified in the first Schedule annexed to this Act are hereby repealed from and after the commencement of this Act, to the extent specified in the third column of that Schedule; provided that this repeal shall not affect—

(a) the past operation of any enactment hereby repealed, nor anything duly done or suffered thereunder:

(b) any liability created under any enactment hereby repealed.

Certificate under Bengal Act VII of 1868 to be enforced under this Act.

Every Certificate made under the provisions hereby repealed of Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, may be enforced under the provisions of this Act.

Definitions.

4. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, but not in the other Acts mentioned in section 2—

"Section."

"Section" means a section of this Act:

"Collector."

"Collector" means (a) within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, the Collector of Calcutta; (b) without those limits, the Collector of a District or any officer specially appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor to perform the functions of a Collector under this Act; and (c) any officer in charge of a Sub-division of a district whom the Collector of such district, with the sanction of the Commissioner, authorizes to perform such functions as aforesaid.

5. In the following cases, that is to say—

When an estate or tenure has been sold for its own arrears; and the sale-proceeds are insufficient to liquidate the same; or

(1) when, under the provisions of Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council, or of Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, an estate or tenure has been sold for the recovery of arrears of revenue due thereupon, and after deducting the expenses of such sale, the balance of the sale-proceeds remaining is insufficient to liquidate the arrears of revenue in discharge of which such sale-proceeds may under the aforesaid provisions be applied;

When arrears of revenue due from a farmer are not paid on latest date of payment;

(2) when arrears of revenue due from a farmer on account of an estate held by him in farm are not paid on the latest day of payment fixed under the provisions of section 3 of Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council;

the Collector may make under his hand, and in form No. 1 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of arrears so remaining unpaid, and may cause the same to be filed in his office.

the Collector of the district may make a Certificate of the unpaid arrears.

Such Certificate shall have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court as regards the remedies for enforcing it.

6. (a) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every Certificate made under the provisions of section 5 shall, as regards the remedies for enforcing the same and so far only, have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court, and the Secretary of State for India in Council shall be deemed to be the decree-holder, and the person therein named as debtor shall be deemed to be the judgment-debtor.

Judgment-debtor may bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest his liability, if he has deposited the amount of the certificate.

(b) Such judgment-debtor may at any time within one year after the service upon him of such notice as is mentioned in section 10, bring a suit in the Civil Court to have the said Certificate cancelled on the ground that the arrears stated therein were not due by him; but no such suit shall be entertained unless such judgment-debtor has paid such arrears to the Collector within one month after being served with the said notice, or, in any case in which he has filed a petition of objection under section 12, then within fifteen days after such petition has been heard and determined.

If no such suit brought within one year, or if brought and decided against judgment-debtor, the certificate to become absolute, and have effect of a decree of the Civil Court to all intents and purposes.

(c) If no such suit is instituted within the said period of one year, or if any such suit having been so instituted, is decided against such judgment-debtor, such Certificate shall become absolute, and shall have to all intents and purposes the effect of a final decree of a Civil Court.

When any arrear of a Public Demand is unpaid by the person liable to pay the same,

7. When any arrears of the following Public Demands are unpaid by the person liable to pay the same, that is to say—

(1) any sum of money which by any law for the time being in force is declared to be recoverable or realizable as an arrear of revenue or land revenue, or by the process prescribed for the recovery of arrears of revenue or of the public or Government revenue:

(2) any sum of money due from the sureties of a farmer in respect of the revenue of the estate farmed by him:

(3) any such demand, money, fee, duty, arrear, fine, or costs as is mentioned in the following sections of the following Acts passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, that is to say—in Act VIII of 1862, Section 9; in Act VI of 1873, Section 50; in Act IV of 1875, Section 1; in Act V of 1875, Section 57; in Act III of 1876, Section 42, Section 78 and Section 85; in Act VII of 1876, Section 82; in Act VIII of 1876, Section 138; in Act VII of 1878, Section 36: or in the following sections and portions of the following Act passed by the Governor-General in Council, that is to say—in Act VII of 1870, "The Court Fees' Act," Sections 19G, 19H, and the note to paragraph 12 of Schedule I:

(4) in the case of a person to whom the collection of tolls has been farmed under the provisions of Section 8 of "The Canals Act, 1864," or of the sureties of such person—any sum of money due in respect of such farm:

(5) in the case of a person having charge of a ferry subjected to the payment of a yearly rent—any arrear of such rent ascertained and certified as provided in Regulation VI of 1819, section 10:

(6) any arrears of revenue or rent payable to the Secretary of State for India in Council from any ryot, or from any person holding any interest in land, pasturage, forest rights, fisheries, and the like, whether such interest is or is not transferable:

(7) in the case of property which, under the provisions of any law for the time being in force, has been taken under the charge of, or is managed by the Court of Wards or the Revenue Authorities on behalf of a private individual,—any arrears of rent or of other demands recoverable as rent, whether such arrears became due before or after the management devolved upon such Court or such Authorities: provided that this clause shall not apply to any arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, unless such enhanced rate has been agreed to by the person liable to pay the same, or has been confirmed by a competent Court:

(8) any sum payable to a Public Officer of Government in respect of which the person liable to pay the same has agreed by a written instrument duly registered that it shall be recoverable under the provisions of this Act:

(9) any fee, duty, tax, or other demand, which by any Act passed hereafter shall be declared to be recoverable under the provisions of this Act;

the Collector of the district may make a certificate of the unpaid demand.

the Collector of the district may make under his hand, and in form No. 2 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of such arrears so remaining unpaid, and may cause the same to be filed in his Office: provided that no such Certificate shall be made in respect of any such demand, the recovery of which is barred by any law of Limitation for the time being in force.

Such Certificate shall have the same effect as a decree of a Civil Court as regards the remedies for enforcing the same

8. (a) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every Certificate made under the provisions of Section 7 shall, as regards the remedies for enforcing the same and so far only, have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court. In the cases other than case (7) mentioned in the said Section 7, the Secretary of State for India in Council and in the said case (7) the private individual therein mentioned, or, if such private individual be a Minor, Lunatic or Ward of Court, then such Minor, Lunatic or Ward of Court by his next friend, shall be deemed to be the decree-holder, and in all the cases mentioned the person therein named as debtor shall be deemed to be the judgment-debtor.

Judgment-debtor may bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest the Certificate. If no such suit within one year, or if brought and decided against the judgment-debtor, Certificate to become absolute.

(b) Such judgment-debtor may at any time within one year after the service upon him of such notice as is mentioned in Section 10 bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest his liability to pay the amount stated in the said Certificate, and to have such Certificate cancelled: but no such suit shall be entertained unless such judgment-debtor has stated in a petition presented to the Collector under Section 12 the ground upon which he claims to have such Certificate cancelled, or unless, having omitted to state such ground in such petition as aforesaid, he can satisfy the Civil Court that there was good reason for such omission. If no such suit is instituted within the said period of one year, or if any such suit having been instituted is decided against such judgment-debtor, such Certificate shall become absolute, and shall have to all intents and purposes the same force and effect as a final decree of a Civil Court.

provided that no Certificate duly made under the provisions of this Act shall be cancelled by a Civil Court otherwise than on one or more of the following grounds, that is to say—

(1) that the amount stated in the Certificate was actually paid or discharged before the making of such Certificate:

(2) in the case of fines imposed, or costs, charges, expenses, damages, duties or fees adjudged, by a Collector or a Public Officer under the provisions of any Regulation or Act for the time being in force—that the proceedings of such Collector or Public Officer were not in substantial conformity with the provisions of such Regulation or Act, and that in consequence the judgment-debtor under the Certificate suffered substantial injury from some error, defect or irregularity in such proceedings:

(3) in cases other than those mentioned in clause (2)—that the amount stated in the Certificate was not due by the judgment-debtor under the Certificate:

(4) want of jurisdiction.

Nothing in this proviso shall be construed to interfere with the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal, or with the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes.

In case of arrears of public demand payable to Officer other than Collector, such Officer may give notice to Collector.

9. (a) When any arrear of any of the public demands specified in Section 7 is unpaid by any person liable to pay such public demand to a Public Officer other than a Collector, or when any such demand as is specified in clause (7) of the said section is unpaid by any person liable to pay the same to a Manager appointed by the Court of Wards, such Officer or such Manager may give to the Collector of the district, in which such person resides, or in which such demand is payable, a notice in writing in form No. 3 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act: provided that no such notice may be given in respect of any such demand, the recovery of which is barred by any law of Limitation for the time being in force.

Such notice given by a Manager to be verified and stamped as a plaint.

(b) Every such notice given by a Manager shall be verified by such Manager in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as to the verification of plaints, and there shall be payable in respect thereof a Court-fee of the same amount as is payable under the Court Fees' Act for the time being in force in respect of a plaint for the recovery of a sum of money equal to that stated in such notice.

Collector may on receipt of such notice make a Certificate

(c) On receipt of such notice, such Collector, if satisfied that such demand is justly recoverable, may make under his hand, and in the form No. 2 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of such arrears so remaining unpaid, and shall cause the same to be filed in his office.

(d) The provisions of Section 8 shall apply to every such Certificate.

When Certificate filed, notice to be given to judgment-debtor. Upon service of notice, Certificate to bind immovable property of judgment-debtor.

10. When a Certificate has been filed in the Office of a Collector under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, such Collector shall issue to the judgment-debtor a copy of such Certificate and a notice in form No. 4 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act. From and after the service of such notice, such Certificate shall bind all immovable property of such judgment-debtor situate within the jurisdiction of such Collector in the same manner and with like effect as if such immovable property had been attached under the provisions of Section 274 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A copy of such Certificate may be transmitted by post to any other Collector for the purpose of being filed in his Office, and as soon as it is so filed, such Certificate shall, if the aforesaid notice has been served, bind in like manner all immovable property of such judgment-debtor situate within the jurisdiction of such last-mentioned Collector.

Copy of Certificate may be sent to Collector of another district to be filed in his office; and, upon its being filed, Certificate shall bind immovable property situate in such district.

Movable property of person, against whom Certificate has been made, may be attached at any time, if Collector satisfied that such person is likely to conceal, remove, or dispose of such property.

11. If in any case other than the case mentioned in clause (7) of Section 7, the Collector is satisfied that any person against whom a Certificate has been filed under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, is likely to conceal, or remove, or dispose of the whole or any part of his movable property, and that the realization of the amount of such Certificate will in consequence be delayed or obstructed, he may at any time after making such Certificate direct an attachment of the whole or any part of the movable property of such person. Such attachment shall be made in the manner provided in the Code of Civil Procedure for attaching movable property, and subject to the provisions of Section 266 of the same Code. Such property may be sold for the purpose of satisfying such Certificate, if no petition of objection is filed under Section 12, or if any such petition is filed, then as soon as it has been heard and determined.

Any person served with notice under section 10 may file a petition of objection.

12. If any person, who has been served with a notice under section 10, denies his liability to pay the whole or any part of the amount for which such Certificate has been made and filed against him, he may at any time within thirty days after service of such notice or, where no such notice has been duly served, within thirty days after the execution of any process for enforcing such Certificate, file a petition denying his liability as aforesaid before the Collector by whom such certificate has been made. Such petition shall be in, or as nearly as possible in, the form No. 5 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act.

Day to be fixed for hearing such petition. Collector to determine the liability of the petitioner. Certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to the inquiry.

13. Such Collector shall fix a day for hearing any such petition so filed, and upon such day, or any subsequent day to which such hearing may be adjourned, shall determine whether such petitioner is liable for the whole or any part of the amount for which such Certificate was made, and may set aside or modify or vary the Certificate accordingly. Every such Collector shall, for the purpose of hearing any such petition and determining as aforesaid, exercise all or any of the powers of a Civil Court in respect of summoning, causing the attendance of, and examining witnesses, and in respect of causing the production of documents; and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure applicable to these matters shall apply to a Collector exercising these powers.

Collector may direct costs of such petition to be paid by the petitioner. Such costs how realized.

14. The Collector shall have full power to direct that the costs of such petition and of the hearing thereof shall be paid by the petitioner, and in any case in which a Collector directs the payment of such costs by any such petitioner, the amount thereof shall, if such petitioner be the judgment-debtor, be added to the amount entered in the Certificate, and shall be recoverable as if the same had been originally entered therein.

15. The Collector of a district may refer to any Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner subordinate to him any such petition as is mentioned in section 12, and such Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner, shall hear and determine such petition accordingly. The provisions of Sections 13 and 14 shall be applicable to any such Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner to whom any such petition has been so referred.

Collector may refer petition for hearing to Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, &c., who shall have the same powers to hear it as the Collector.

16. An appeal from any order of a Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner may be preferred to the Collector within fifteen days, and an appeal from any original order of a Collector may be preferred to the Commissioner within thirty days after the making of such order respectively. Pending the decision of such appeal, execution may be stayed, if the Appellate Authority so direct, but not otherwise.

Appeal from Deputy Collector Assistant Commissioner, &c., to Collector, and from Collector to Commissioner. Stay of execution.

17. There shall no appeal, as of right, lie from any order of a Collector passed on appeal from an order of a Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner; but the Commissioner may in any case in which he thinks fit, revise any order passed by a Collector or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Commissioner, or Extra Assistant Commissioner.

Power of revision.

18. Every Certificate made under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, may be enforced and executed, upon the expiry of one month after service of the notice mentioned in Section 10, or when any such petition as is mentioned in Section 12 has been filed, then as soon as such petition has been heard and determined.

Certificate may be enforced after one month from notice, or when petition of objection disposed of.

19. Such Certificate may be so enforced and executed by all or any of the ways and means mentioned and provided in and by the Code of Civil Procedure for the enforcement and execution of decrees for money, and all the practice and procedure provided by the said Code of Civil Procedure in respect of sales in execution of decrees; in respect of raising the amount of a decree otherwise than by sale of immovable property under the provisions of Sections 305, 320, 322, 323 and 324 of the said Code; in respect of arrests in execution of decrees for money; in respect of the execution of decrees by imprisonment; in respect of insolvent judgment-debtors; in respect of claims to attached property; in respect of resistance to execution; and in respect of the execution of decrees out of the jurisdiction of the Courts by which they were passed, shall apply to every execution issued to enforce such Certificate and realize the amount recoverable thereunder, save that all the duties, powers, and authorities by the said Code imposed or conferred on the Court shall be exercised by the Collector in whose office any such Certificate, or any copy thereof transmitted for execution under the provisions of Section 223 of the said Code has been filed. Subject to the control of the Collector and save and except in respect of the provisions relating to insolvent judgment-debtors any of the said duties, powers, and authorities may be exercised by any Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, or Extra Assistant Commissioner subordinate to such Collector.

Certificate may be enforced under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as a decree for money.

20. If any immoveable property is sold in execution of a Certificate under the provisions of section 18, and if such Certificate is subsequently set aside by a competent court, such court may set aside such sale of such immoveable property, and in any case in which such sale is so set aside, such court shall direct that the amount of the purchase-money be refunded to the purchaser with or without interest, as such court thinks fit: provided that no such sale shall be so set aside unless such purchaser has been made or added as a party to the suit brought to set aside such Certificate.

Sale of immovable property may be set aside, if certificate is set aside by a competent Court. Proviso.

21. Every Collector shall cause to be kept in his office a Register in such form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Board of Revenue, and shall cause to be entered in such register the particulars of every Certificate made under this Act, which, or a copy of which, has been filed in his office. Such Register shall be open during office hours to the inspection of any one desiring to inspect the same, and a fee of eight annas, or such fee not exceeding eight annas as the Board of Revenue may prescribe, shall be chargeable for such inspection.

Register of Certificates to be kept in Collector's office and to be open to inspection on payment of fee of eight annas.

22. (a) Payment of the amount due under a Certificate may be made by instalments, if the Collector who made such Certificate so direct. The payment of any instalment shall be entered in the Register mentioned in Section 21.

Payment of sum due under a Certificate may be made by instalments. Payment of instalments to be entered in Register.

(b) When the total amount due under a Certificate has been paid and satisfied, the Collector in whose office such Certificate was originally filed shall enter satisfaction upon such Certificate under his hand and signature; and shall cause the same to be entered in the Register mentioned in Section 21.

When total amount satisfied, Collector to enter satisfaction on certificate and in Register;

(c) When a copy of such Certificate has been transmitted to another Collector, or when such Certificate has been made under the provisions of Section 9 upon notice from a Public Officer other than a Collector or from a Manager appointed by the Court of Wards, such satisfaction shall be communicated to such other Collector or to such officer or to such Manager.

and to communicate it to other Collector in whose office a copy of such Certificate has been filed.

(d) When a sum has been levied or received by a Collector in respect of a Certificate, a copy of which has been transmitted to him and filed in his office, such Collector shall send such sum to the Office in which such Certificate was originally made.

Sum levied by Collector to whom copy of Certificate sent to be transmitted to Collector who made Certificate.

23. Every Collector, Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner and Extra Assistant Commissioner and every such Public Officer as is mentioned in Section 9 shall, in the discharge of his functions under this Act, be deemed to be a person acting judicially within the meaning of Act XVIII of 1850, passed by the Governor-General in Council.

Collector, Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, Extra Assistant Commissioner and Public Officer to be deemed to be acting judicially in the discharge of his duties under this Act.

24. All Collectors, Deputy Collectors, Assistant Commissioners, and Extra Assistant Commissioners shall, in the performance of their duties under this Act, be subject to the general supervision and control of the Commissioners of Divisions and the Board of Revenue.

Collectors, &c, to be subject to the supervision and control of Commissioners and Board in discharge of their duties under this Act.

NOTIFICATION.

The 5th July 1880.—The following amended Rule XI, of the Rules under section 59 of the Land Acquisition Act, X of 1870, having been sanctioned by the Governor-General of India in Council, is published for general information:—

XI. On the date on which payment of compensation in any case may become due under section 41 of the Act, the Collector shall tender the amount to such of the persons entitled to receive it as may be present at his office in person, or by agent duly authorized to receive the same, informing them at the same time that in the event of their refusal to accept the amount tendered, no claim to interest will be entertained. Should any such person be absent and have no authorized agent at the Collector's Court, the Collector shall serve a notice upon him calling upon him to attend in person or by agent, within one week of his receipt of the notice, to receive the amount due to him, and warning him that on failure to appear within the period above named, no interest whatever will be paid to him. Should such person neglect to appear within the time specified, the Collector shall, on being satisfied of the due service of the notice, hold the amount in deposit until it shall be applied for by the person entitled to it.

A. MACKENZIE,

DRAFT RULES PROPOSED UNDER ACT III (B.C.) OF 1876.

Dated the 20th July 1880.

No. 102.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 99 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to direct the publication of the following rules for the Sone Canals which it is proposed to substitute for the rules passed and published at pages 761 to 767, Part I of the Calcutta Gazette of the 23rd July 1879.

C. TAYLOR,
Offg. Asst. Secy., for Joint.-Secy.
to the Govt. of Bengal, P. W. Dept.,
Irrigation Branch.

RULES UNDER ACT III (B.C.) 1876.

1. The Collector, before awarding compensation under section 16, or for making a reference under section 17 of the Act, shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, which shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

2. Persons desirous of acquiring land for the construction of a village channel, or for having a village channel constructed by Canal Agency, shall prefer a written application to the Divisional Canal Officer, or to any other officer duly authorized by him to receive such application.

3. Ordinarily, no village channel shall exceed two miles in length from its head to the point of contact with the village boundary.

4. It shall be the duty of the Canal Officer to register all village channels after due notice has been given to the owner of his intention to do so; if the latterobjects, no water will be given.

5. No alteration among the shareholders will be recognized, unless the sanction of the Canal Officer has been first obtained.

6. Persons desirous of taking water from a registered village channel shall, previous to doing so, prefer a written application (Appendix A) to the Divisional Canal Officer, Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, or any subordinate duly authorized by the Divisional Canal Officer to receive such application; and no water shall be taken until after the receipt of a permit (Appendix B) from competent authority.

7. Water shall not be granted where, in the opinion of the Canal Officer, waste is likely to occur.

8. An application under Rule 6 shall, if granted, and unless otherwise specially agreed upon, be subject to the following conditions:—

(a)—That the water supplied shall not be used for other purposes than irrigation without the written consent of the Divisional or Sub-Divisional Canal Officer.

(b)—That the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer shall, in consultation with the applicants, appoint a headman (to be called a Lambardar), known, or ascertained to be, a substantial person possessed of property, to attend to their interests, to receive and carry out the orders of the Canal Officers, and to distribute the water among the shareholders in the village channel according to their shares.

(c)—That in any case where the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer cannot agree with the applicants in the appointment of a Lambardar, the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer shall make the appointment himself, subject to the approval of the Divisional Canal Officer.

9. The Divisional Canal Officer is empowered to pay to the Lambardar appointed under Rule 81, the fees detailed in the rule next following, subject to the condition of satisfactory performance of duty.

10. The allowance to the Lambardar for duties connected with the village channel such as arranging that it shall be kept in proper repair, reporting unauthorized irrigation, distributing the water to the shareholders, seeing that the outlet is closed according to the orders of the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, and generally assisting the officers of the Irrigation Department, shall be half anna in the rupee on the amount of canal water-rates assessed on the lands irrigated from the village channel under his charge. The Divisional Canal Officer may retrench the whole or any part of the fees under this rule in the event of non-compliance with these conditions.

11. The Sub-Divisional Canal Officer may, by written order under section 76 (a), stop the supply to any village channel when he is satisfied, after inspection by himself or by one of his subordinates, that it is not maintained in proper repair; such order shall be recorded in the Sub-Divisional Office.

12. The Divisional Canal Officer may close the outlets in rotation as he may consider necessary. Such closures shall not extend beyond ten consecutive days, and shall be notified to the Lambardars of village channels. For longer closures the authority of the Superintending Canal Officer is required.

13. Nothing in the above rules shall be taken to affect the power of the Superintending or Divisional Canal Officer to stop the supply of water in case of pressing emergency.

14. The water-gauges on distributaries or other channels shall be held to give authoritative data for all calculations of discharge required to verify claims for remission of water-rate on account of loss of water.

15. Claims to remission of water-rates under section 76(b) shall only be admitted on proof of actual loss caused by the stoppage of supply. On proof of such loss, the Divisional Canal Officer may remit the whole or any portion of the rates. All applications for remission of water-rates shall be made in writing by the parties concerned, either in person, or through their headman, to the nearest Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, at least seven days prior to the cutting of the crop. On receipt of such application, the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer shall, after due local enquiry, forward the application with his remarks to the Divisional Canal Officer for decision.

16. Before awarding compensation under section 76(c), the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer, and such opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

17. Contracts between the Divisional Canal Officer on the part of Government, and private individuals, for the use of water as a motive power, or for any other purpose whatsoever, not included in the published schedule of rates, shall, if for any period not exceeding one year, require the previous sanction of the Superintending Canal Officer. If proposed for longer periods, such contracts shall be submitted for the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor in the Irrigation Department.

18. Tanks may be filled with canal water without charge, and without reference to the area irrigated in any village, wherever water can be made available without injury to the cultivation dependent on any canal, under the following conditions:—

(a.)—No tank shall be so filled unless the water is to be exclusively used for domestic purposes or for watering cattle, or both.

(b.)—No tank shall be so filled from which irrigation is practised.

(c.)—No tank shall be so filled which, intercepting any line of drainage, is liable to overflow from accumulation of water derived from natural causes.

(d.)—No tank shall be so filled except on the written order of the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer issued on the written application of the parties concerned.

(e.)—No tank shall be so filled unless the village channel used to fill it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer to be in a sound condition when the application is made.

(f.)—The privilege herein accorded may, by written order of the Divisional Canal Officer, subject to revision by the Superintending Canal Officer, whose decision shall be final, be suspended for 12 months for breach of any of the above conditions

19. Leases for terms of five years for the supply of water between the 25th June of one year and the 1st April of the following year will be given at the rates fixed in the Schedule, Rule 33, provided that land leased in any village forms one or more compact blocks, each of not less than 50 acres, defined by well-marked boundaries of such a nature as clearly to distinguish leased from the adjoining unleased lands, and to prevent the latter from being surreptitiously watered under cover of the lease.

20. Well-marked boundaries of the nature required by the foregoing rule generally exist. Village roads, bunds of ahrahs, village boundaries, and similar natural marks will be sufficient. If such do not exist, and it appears advisable to grant the lease, the villagers may, at the discretion of the Divisional Canal Officer, be required to make small bunds round the leased area, or mark its limits by the erection of cheap boundary marks, or cause to be carried out such arrangements as may suffice for the future identification of the leased area.

21. No restriction is placed on the description of crop to be grown under five-year leases, but no water will be given on these leases between the 1st of April and the 25th of June. The Superintending Canal Officer may relax this rule in the case of water being required for rice-seed beds.

22. If in the opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer it appears advisable to grant a lease for a block of less than 50 acres in area, he must refer the matter for the decision of the Superintending Canal Officer, at whose discretion the restriction as to area may be relaxed.

23. Present holders of three-year leases may at their option avail themselves of the terms offered to the holders of the five-year leases, but without retrospective effect.

24. Leases for five years at the rates entered in Rule 33 may be given—(1) on the application of all the cultivators of the area proposed to be leased, on condition of their agreeing in such application to become jointly and severally responsible for the payment of all amounts due on account of water-rates; or (2) on the joint application of the cultivators and of some person hereinafter called the Contractor, who may agree to collect and pay to Government, under section 82 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, all sums due under the agreement on account of water-rates. The agreement of villagers binding themselves jointly and severally will be in the form prescribed in Appendix C. The joint agreement of villagers and a water-rate Contractor shall be in the form prescribed in Appendix D. Every agreement under this rule must be signed by each applicant in the presence of at least one respectable witness.

25. Contractors shall be entitled to collect water-dues, at the rates given in schedule 4 attached to Rule 33, from the cultivators who have applied for the water supplied. Every due from a cultivator to the Contractor on account of water-rates shall be deemed to be a sum due to Government under sections 82 and 85 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876.

26. A Contractor (or in case there be more than one, each Contractor severally and jointly) shall be responsible for all sums payable on the agreement (Appendix D), except such sums as may be remitted by competent authority under the rules in force, and shall be entitled to a deduction of 5 per cent. for cost of collection.

27. No water shall be taken previous to the receipt of a permit (Appendix B) signed by the Divisional Canal Officer. When an agreement has been made for the collection of the rates by a Contractor, the Divisional Canal Officer shall under section 82 furnish such Contractor with a written authority to collect the amounts due by the cultivators according to a list furnished in the application, one copy of which is to be sent to the Collector.

28. Every Contractor shall nominate a headman, to be approved of by the Divisional Canal Officer, to perform the duties specified in Rule 10. Such headman or the contractor, according to the arrangement made at the time of contract, shall receive 5 per cent. on the assessment, but the Divisional Canal Officer may retrench the whole or any part of these fees if the duties are not properly performed.

29. All water-rates for five years leases leviable under the above leases shall become due on the 31st December and 15th March in equal portions, and shall be paid within one month of such dates.

30. Under section 78 of the Act, the rates chargeable per acre for water supplied to the different description of crops up to 1st of April 1881, except in cases of three-year leases now in existence, will be as follow :—

SCHEDULE I.—Existing rates.

34. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates levied under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Divisional Canal Officer in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor.

35. All water-rates shall become due on the dates below stated, and shall be paid within one month of such dates :—

Water-rate on spring crops, wheat, barley, peas, poppy, &c. ...	15th March.
Water-rate on summer crops, cheena, &c. ...	15th July.
Water-rate on bhadoi crops, early rice, indian-corn, murwa, &c. ...	31st October.
Water-rate on annual and winter crops, sugarcane, aghani rice, jowar, &c.	31st December.

36. In the case of lands held in bhaoli, the water-rate shall be recoverable from both the cultivator and the person or persons in receipt of the bhaoli rents in the same proportion as the produce is divisible amongst them.

37. In the case of lands held in bhaoli, the zemindar shall sign jointly with the cultivators. (This rule only applies to the case of five-year leases.)

38. The area irrigated in any village shall be measured by an Ameen appointed for the purpose. The Putwari shall be present at the measurement, and shall at the time take a copy of the khusrah of the Ameen; if for any reason the Putwari is not present, the cost of preparing the copy will be charged against him. This copy shall be delivered to the Putwari, or, in his absence, to the Lambardar. Both the Lambardar and Putwari shall sign the khusrah.

39. When the measurement is completed, the khusrah shall be forwarded to the Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, who shall prepare the khatiani with all possible despatch. A copy of the khatiani, signed and sealed by the Zilladar, shall, as soon as it is prepared, be forwarded to the Putwari, who shall grant a receipt for the same. If the Putwari is not present, or declines to receive the khatiani, the Sub-Divisional Officer shall forward it direct to the Collector.

40. It shall be the duty of the Putwari, immediately on the completion of the measurement, to inform each ryot, on application, of the fields measured against him, and on receipt of the khatiani to supply each person charged with a percha showing the water-rates due. For these duties, and for attending the measurement and rendering such other reasonable assistance to the Canal Officer and Collector as may be required, an allowance of one quarter anna per rupee on the amount collected shall be made.

41. This allowance shall be paid to the Putwari by the Collector if he is satisfied that the work has been properly done.

42. The Canal Officer shall note on the khatiani whether the Putwari has given proper assistance during the measurement.

43. If a cultivator is dissatisfied with the entries made against him in the khatiani, whether as to the fact of the land having been charged "flow" instead of "lift" or as to the measurements and entries of classes of crops, he must lodge a complaint, either personally or through the Lambardar of his village channel, with the Divisional or Sub-Divisional Canal Officer within a month after the date of the demand being made on him.

44. The Zilladar shall submit his check measurements in a form (Appendix E) which shall be sent in for the inspection of the Divisional Canal Officer. The Sub-Divisional Canal Officer shall check the Ameens' measurements as often as he possibly can. If it be found that any ameen wilfully or frequently makes wrong measurements, he shall be punished by dismissal.

45. Collection of all water-rates shall be made by the Collector in accordance with the statement of demands furnished to him by the Divisional Canal Officer.

46. Objections to the demand addressed to the Collector, if preferred within one month after the demand has been made, shall, if remission be claimed on the score of short supply, or of any matter affecting the Irrigation Department, be referred for orders to the Divisional Canal Officer. The Collector shall have discretion to suspend collections by a written order in cases where (objections having been filed) it may seem advisable to do so.

47. Claims for remission, referred by the Collector and admitted by the Divisional Canal Officer, shall be reported by him for the sanction of the Superintending Canal Officer, except in cases where remissions are made on account of excess areas having been charged, or a wrong name entered in the khatiani.

48. If the Divisional Canal Officer reject the claim, an appeal may be made to the Superintending Canal Officer, provided that it is preferred within forty days from the issue of the order of the Divisional Canal Officer.

49. A remission statement, signed by the Superintending or Divisional Canal Officer, shall be sufficient authority for a refund by the Collector.

50. In special cases not otherwise provided in these rules, and in cases where water-rates are not recoverable owing to the absconding or bankruptcy of the defaulter, the Collector will obtain the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division to the remission of such sums as he may deem irrecoverable. The details of such remission shall be communicated at the close of each official year to the Divisional Canal Officer.

51. The Collector shall appoint a headman (to be called a Tehsildar), whose duty will be to collect and pay in, to the Collector or other duly authorized person, all water-rates leviable on the land irrigated.

52. The Tehsildar shall furnish security for the payment of all sums realized by him, the stamp and registration fees on security bonds being deducted from the percentage allowed, under the following rule.

53. The allowance to the Tehsildars of a village or villages for collecting the water-rates shall be fixed by the Collector, but the total amount to be paid in any one year to all the Tehsildars in a district shall not exceed half an anna in the rupee on the amounts actually paid in. If the Tehsildar shall satisfy the Collector that arrears have not accrued through any negligence on his part, it shall be at the option of the Collector to pay him the allowance on the whole or any part of such arrears.

54. If only a portion of a field be irrigated, the water-rate shall be chargeable on the whole field, unless such portion shall have been clearly demarcated, previous to the admission of the water, by a ridge not less than half a foot high.

55. When a portion of a field has been irrigated with canal water, and a portion with well or reservoir water, the whole field shall be liable for canal water-rate, unless a clearly distinguishable boundary exists between the two portions.

56 If well or reservoir water is conveyed in the same channel as canal water, the whole of the irrigation from that channel shall be liable to canal water-rate. The Lambardar will be held personally responsible that this and any breach of Rules 54 and 55 is duly reported.

57. Irrigation from escape channels, when the supply is permanent, shall be governed by the same rules as irrigation from other parts of the canal.

58. Irrigation from such channels, when the supply is intermittent, may be allowed at such reduced rates as shall from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor.

59. Persons using water without a written permit, or taking water at times prohibited by proper authority, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding double water-rates on the area irrigated, and such charge shall be leviable at the time of report to the Collector.

60. The charge leviable for water suffered to run to waste on uncultivated lands shall be calculated at the highest rate specified in the schedule, viz. Rs. 5 per acre on the area flooded; provided that in every such case the Divisional Canal Officer may impose a lower rate if he thinks fit. The Lambardar is to be held responsible for reporting such waste of water.

61. When the original crop sown in a field irrigated by canal water fails, and is ploughed up, and a fresh crop is sown in the same season, the water-rates shall be levied on the second crop.

62. No person shall, without the permission in writing of the Divisional or Sub-Divisional Canal Officer, pass, or cause any animal or vehicle to pass, on or across any of the works, banks, or channels of a canal or drainage work after he has been desired to desist therefrom, excepting by means of such bridges, fords, and ferries, and their approaches, as are provided by the Divisional Canal Officer.

63. No Canal Officer, unless specially exempted by the Lieutenant-Governor from the operation of this rule, shall have any interest in the distribution of water from any of the canals, or purchase or bid for any Government property sold thereon, either in his own name, or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others.

An Act to amend the Law for the Recovery of certain Public Demands.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law for the recovery of certain dues and debts demandable by Public Officers: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

Short Title.

1. This Act may be called "The Public Demands' Recovery Act, 1880:"

Extent.

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 2, it extends to all the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal:

Commencement.

It shall come into operation on and after the date on which it shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Construction of this Act.

2. This Act, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, shall be construed as one with Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council, and Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council. The powers given by this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any powers conferred by any Act now being in force for the recovery of any due, debt, or demand to which the provisions of this Act are applicable.

Repeal of Acts in Schedule.

3. The Acts specified in the first Schedule annexed to this Act are hereby repealed from and after the commencement of this Act, to the extent specified in the third column of that Schedule; provided that this repeal shall not affect—

(a) the past operation of any enactment hereby repealed, nor anything duly done or suffered thereunder:

(b) any liability created under any enactment hereby repealed.

Certificate under Bengal Act VII of 1868 to be enforced under this Act.

Every Certificate made under the provisions hereby repealed of Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, may be enforced under the provisions of this Act.

Definitions.

4. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, but not in the other Acts mentioned in section 2—

"Section."

"Section" means a section of this Act:

"Collector."

"Collector" means (a) within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, the Collector of Calcutta; (b) without those limits, the Collector of a District or any officer specially appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor to perform the functions of a Collector under this Act; and (c) any officer in charge of a Sub-division of a district whom the Collector of such district, with the sanction of the Commissioner, authorizes to perform such functions as aforesaid.

5. In the following cases, that is to say—

When an estate or tenure has been sold for its own arrears; and the sale-proceeds are insufficient to liquidate the same; or

(1) when, under the provisions of Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council, or of Act VII of 1868, passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, an estate or tenure has been sold for the recovery of arrears of revenue due thereupon, and after deducting the expenses of such sale, the balance of the sale-proceeds remaining is insufficient to liquidate the arrears of revenue in discharge of which such sale-proceeds may under the aforesaid provisions be applied;

when arrears of revenue due from a farmer are not paid on latest date of payment;

(2) when arrears of revenue due from a farmer on account of an estate held by him in farm are not paid on the latest day of payment fixed under the provisions of section 3 of Act XI of 1859, passed by the Governor-General in Council;

the Collector of the district may make a Certificate of the unpaid arrears.

the Collector may make under his hand, and in form No. 1 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of arrears so remaining unpaid, and may cause the same to be filed in his office.

Such Certificate shall have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court as regards the remedies for enforcing it.

6. (a) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every Certificate made under the provisions of section 5 shall, as regards the remedies for enforcing the same and so far only, have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court, and the Secretary of State for India in Council shall be deemed to be the decree-holder, and the person therein named as debtor shall be deemed to be the judgment-debtor.

Judgment-debtor may bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest his liability, if he has deposited the amount of the certificate.

(b) Such judgment-debtor may at any time within one year after the service upon him of such notice as is mentioned in section 10, bring a suit in the Civil Court to have the said Certificate cancelled on the ground that the arrears stated therein were not due by him; but no such suit shall be entertained unless such judgment-debtor has paid such arrears to the Collector within one month after being served with the said notice, or, in any case in which he has filed a petition of objection under section 12, then within fifteen days after such petition has been heard and determined.

If no such suit brought within one year, or if brought and decided against judgment-debtor, the certificate to become absolute, and have effect of a decree of the Civil Court to all intents and purposes.

(c) If no such suit is instituted within the said period of one year, or if any such suit having been so instituted, is decided against such judgment-debtor, such Certificate shall become absolute, and shall have to all intents and purposes the effect of a final decree of a Civil Court.

When any arrear of a Public Demand is unpaid by the person liable to pay the same,

7. When any arrears of the following Public Demands are unpaid by the person liable to pay the same, that is to say—

(1) any sum of money which by any law for the time being in force is declared to be recoverable or realizable as an arrear of revenue or land revenue, or by the process prescribed for the recovery of arrears of revenue or of the public or Government revenue:

(2) any sum of money due from the sureties of a farmer in respect of the revenue of the estate farmed by him:

(3) any such demand, money, fee, duty, arrear, fine, or costs as is mentioned in the following sections of the following Acts passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, that is to say—in Act VIII of 1862, Section 9; in Act VI of 1873, Section 50; in Act IV of 1875, Section 1; in Act V of 1875, Section 57; in Act III of 1876, Section 42, Section 73 and Section 85; in Act VII of 1876, Section 82; in Act VIII of 1876, Section 138; in Act VII of 1878, Section 36: or in the following sections and portions of the following Act passed by the Governor-General in Council, that is to say—in Act VII of 1870, "The Court Fees' Act," Sections 19G, 19H, and the note to paragraph 12 of Schedule I:

(4) in the case of a person to whom the collection of tolls has been farmed under the provisions of Section 8 of "The Canals Act, 1864," or of the sureties of such person—any sum of money due in respect of such farm:

(5) in the case of a person having charge of a ferry subjected to the payment of a yearly rent—any arrear of such rent ascertained and certified as provided in Regulation VI of 1819, section 10:

(6) any arrears of revenue or rent payable to the Secretary of State for India in Council from any ryot, or from any person holding any interest in land, pasturage, forest rights, fisheries, and the like, whether such interest is or is not transferable:

(7) in the case of property which, under the provisions of any law for the time being in force, has been taken under the charge of, or is managed by the Court of Wards or the Revenue Authorities on behalf of a private individual,—any arrears of rent or of other demands recoverable as rent, whether such arrears became due before or after the management devolved upon such Court or such Authorities: provided that this clause shall not apply to any arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, unless such enhanced rate has been agreed to by the person liable to pay the same, or has been confirmed by a competent Court:

(8) any sum payable to a Public Officer of Government in respect of which the person liable to pay the same has agreed by a written instrument duly registered that it shall be recoverable under the provisions of this Act:

(9) any fee, duty, tax, or other demand, which by any Act passed hereafter shall be declared to be recoverable under the provisions of this Act;

the Collector of the district may make under his hand, and in form No. 2 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of such arrears so remaining unpaid, and may cause the same to be filed in his Office: provided that no such Certificate shall be made in respect of any such demand, the recovery of which is barred by any law of Limitation for the time being in force.

The Collector of the district may make a certificate of the unpaid demand.

8. (a) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every Certificate made under the provisions of Section 7 shall, as regards the remedies for enforcing the same and so far only, have the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court. In the cases other than case (7) mentioned in the said Section 7, the Secretary of State for India in Council and in the said case (7) the private individual therein mentioned, or, if such private individual be a Minor, Lunatic or Ward of Court, then such Minor, Lunatic or Ward of Court by his next friend, shall be deemed to be the decree-holder, and in all the cases mentioned the person therein named as debtor shall be deemed to be the judgment-debtor.

Such Certificate shall have the same effect as a decree of a Civil Court as regards the remedies for enforcing the same.

(b) Such judgment-debtor may at any time within one year after the service upon him of such notice as is mentioned in Section 10 bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest his liability to pay the amount stated in the said Certificate, and to have such Certificate cancelled: but no such suit shall be entertained unless such judgment-debtor has stated in a petition presented to the Collector under Section 12 the ground upon which he claims to have such Certificate cancelled, or unless, having omitted to state such ground in such petition as aforesaid, he can satisfy the Civil Court that there was good reason for such omission. If no such suit is instituted within the said period of one year, or if any such suit having been instituted is decided against such judgment-debtor, such Certificate shall become absolute, and shall have to all intents and purposes the same force and effect as a final decree of a Civil Court.

Judgment-debtor may bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest the Certificate. If no such suit within one year, or if brought and decided against the judgment-debtor, Certificate to become absolute.

provided that no Certificate duly made under the provisions of this Act shall be cancelled by a Civil Court otherwise than on one or more of the following grounds, that is to say—

(1) that the amount stated in the Certificate was actually paid or discharged before the making of such Certificate:

(2) in the case of fines imposed, or costs, charges, expenses, damages, duties or fees adjudged, by a Collector or a Public Officer under the provisions of any Regulation or Act for the time being in force—that the proceedings of such Collector or Public Officer were not in substantial conformity with the provisions of such Regulation or Act, and that, in consequence the judgment-debtor under the Certificate suffered substantial injury from some error, defect or irregularity in such proceedings:

(3) in cases other than those mentioned in clause (2)—that the amount stated in the Certificate was not due by the judgment-debtor under the Certificate:

(4) want of jurisdiction.

Nothing in this proviso shall be construed to interfere with the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal, or with the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes.

In case of arrears of public demand payable to Officer other than Collector, such Officer may give notice to Collector.

9. (a) When any arrear of any of the public demands specified in Section 7 is unpaid by any person liable to pay such public demand to a Public Officer other than a Collector, or when any such demand as is specified in clause (7) of the said section is unpaid by any person liable to pay the same to a Manager appointed by the Court of Wards, such Officer or such Manager may give to the Collector of the district, in which such person resides, or in which such demand is payable, a notice in writing in form No. 3 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act: provided that no such notice may be given in respect of any such demand, the recovery of which is barred by any law of Limitation for the time being in force.

Such notice given by a Manager to be verified and stamped as a plaint.

(b) Every such notice given by a Manager shall be verified by such Manager in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as to the verification of plaints, and there shall be payable in respect thereof a Court-fee of the same amount as is payable under the Court Fees' Act for the time being in force in respect of a plaint for the recovery of a sum of money equal to that stated in such notice.

Collector may on receipt of such notice make a Certificate.

(c) On receipt of such notice, such Collector, if satisfied that such demand is justly recoverable, may make under his hand, and in the form No. 2 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act, a Certificate of the amount of such arrears so remaining unpaid, and shall cause the same to be filed in his office.

(d) The provisions of Section 8 shall apply to every such Certificate.

When Certificate filed, notice to be given to judgment-debtor. Upon service of notice, Certificate to bind immovable property of judgment-debtor.

10. When a Certificate has been filed in the Office of a Collector under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, such Collector shall issue to the judgment-debtor a copy of such Certificate and a notice in form No. 4 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act. From and after the service of such notice, such Certificate shall bind all immovable property of such judgment-debtor situate within the jurisdiction of such Collector in the same manner and with like effect as if such immovable property had been attached under the provisions of Section 274 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A copy of such Certificate may be transmitted by post to any other Collector for the purpose of being filed in his Office, and as soon as it is so filed, such Certificate shall, if the aforesaid notice has been served, bind in like manner all immovable property of such judgment-debtor situate within the jurisdiction of such last-mentioned Collector.

Copy of Certificate may be sent to Collector of another district to be filed in his office; and, upon its being filed, Certificate shall bind immovable property situate in such district.

Movable property of person, against whom Certificate has been made, may be attached at any time, if Collector satisfied that such person is likely to conceal, remove, or dispose of such property.

11. If in any case other than the case mentioned in clause (7) of Section 7, the Collector is satisfied that any person against whom a Certificate has been filed under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, is likely to conceal, or remove, or dispose of the whole or any part of his movable property, and that the realization of the amount of such Certificate will in consequence be delayed or obstructed, he may at any time after making such Certificate direct an attachment of the whole or any part of the movable property of such person. Such attachment shall be made in the manner provided in the Code of Civil Procedure for attaching movable property, and subject to the provisions of Section 266 of the same Code. Such property may be sold for the purpose of satisfying such Certificate, if no petition of objection is filed under Section 12, or if any such petition is filed, then as soon as it has been heard and determined.

Any person served with notice under section 10 may file a petition of objection.

12. If any person, who has been served with a notice under section 10, denies his liability to pay the whole or any part of the amount for which such Certificate has been made and filed against him, he may at any time within thirty days after service of such notice or, where no such notice has been duly served, within thirty days after the execution of any process for enforcing such Certificate, file a petition denying his liability as aforesaid before the Collector by whom such certificate has been made. Such petition shall be in, or as nearly as possible in, the form No. 5 in the second Schedule annexed to this Act.

Day to be fixed for hearing such petition. Collector to determine the liability of the petitioner. Certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to the inquiry.

13. Such Collector shall fix a day for hearing any such petition so filed, and upon such day, or any subsequent day to which such hearing may be adjourned, shall determine whether such petitioner is liable for the whole or any part of the amount for which such Certificate was made, and may set aside or modify or vary the Certificate accordingly. Every such Collector shall, for the purpose of hearing any such petition and determining as aforesaid, exercise all or any of the powers of a Civil Court in respect of summoning, causing the attendance of, and examining witnesses, and in respect of causing the production of documents; and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure applicable to these matters shall apply to a Collector exercising these powers.

Collector may direct costs of such petition to be paid by the petitioner. Such costs how realized.

14. The Collector shall have full power to direct that the costs of such petition and of the hearing thereof shall be paid by the petitioner, and in any case in which a Collector directs the payment of such costs by any such petitioner, the amount thereof shall, if such petitioner be the judgment-debtor, be added to the amount entered in the Certificate, and shall be recoverable as if the same had been originally entered therein.

15. The Collector of a district may refer to any Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner subordinate to him any such petition as is mentioned in section 12, and such Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner, shall hear and determine such petition accordingly. The provisions of Sections 13 and 14 shall be applicable to any such Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner to whom any such petition has been so referred.

Collector may refer petition for hearing to Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, &c., who shall have the same powers to hear it as the Collector.

16. An appeal from any order of a Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner may be preferred to the Collector within fifteen days, and an appeal from any original order of a Collector may be preferred to the Commissioner within thirty days after the making of such order respectively. Pending the decision of such appeal, execution may be stayed, if the Appellate Authority so direct, but not otherwise.

Appeal from Deputy Collector Assistant Commissioner, &c., to Collector, and from Collector to Commissioner. Stay of execution.

17. There shall no appeal, as of right, lie from any order of a Collector passed on appeal from an order of a Deputy Collector or Assistant Commissioner or Extra Assistant Commissioner; but the Commissioner may in any case in which he thinks fit, revise any order passed by a Collector or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Commissioner, or Extra Assistant Commissioner.

Power of revision.

18. Every Certificate made under the provisions of Section 5, or Section 7, or Section 9, may be enforced and executed, upon the expiry of one month after service of the notice mentioned in Section 10, or when any such petition as is mentioned in Section 12 has been filed, then as soon as such petition has been heard and determined.

Certificate may be enforced after one month from notice, or when petition of objection disposed of.

19. Such Certificate may be so enforced and executed by all or any of the ways and means mentioned and provided in and by the Code of Civil Procedure for the enforcement and execution of decrees for money, and all the practice and procedure provided by the said Code of Civil Procedure in respect of sales in execution of decrees; in respect of raising the amount of a decree otherwise than by sale of immovable property under the provisions of Sections 305, 320, 322, 323 and 324 of the said Code; in respect of arrests in execution of decrees for money; in respect of the execution of decrees by imprisonment; in respect of insolvent judgment-debtors; in respect of claims to attached property; in respect of resistance to execution; and in respect of the execution of decrees out of the jurisdiction of the Courts by which they were passed, shall apply to every execution issued to enforce such Certificate and realize the amount recoverable thereunder, save that all the duties, powers, and authorities by the said Code imposed or conferred on the Court shall be exercised by the Collector in whose office any such Certificate, or any copy thereof transmitted for execution under the provisions of Section 223 of the said Code has been filed. Subject to the control of the Collector and save and except in respect of the provisions relating to insolvent judgment-debtors any of the said duties, powers, and authorities may be exercised by any Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, or Extra Assistant Commissioner subordinate to such Collector.

Certificate may be enforced under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as a decree for money.

20. If any immoveable property is sold in execution of a Certificate under the provisions of section 18, and if such Certificate is subsequently set aside by a competent court, such court may set aside such sale of such immoveable property, and in any case in which such sale is so set aside, such court shall direct that the amount of the purchase-money be refunded to the purchaser with or without interest, as such court thinks fit: provided that no such sale shall be so set aside unless such purchaser has been made or added as a party to the suit brought to set aside such Certificate.

Sale of immovable property may be set aside, if certificate is set aside by a competent Court. Proviso.

21. Every Collector shall cause to be kept in his office a Register in such form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Board of Revenue, and shall cause to be entered in such register the particulars of every Certificate made under this Act, which, or a copy of which, has been filed in his office. Such Register shall be open during office hours to the inspection of any one desiring to inspect the same, and a fee of eight annas, or such fee not exceeding eight annas as the Board of Revenue may prescribe, shall be chargeable for such inspection.

Register of Certificates to be kept in Collector's office and to be open to inspection on payment of fee of eight annas.

22. (a) Payment of the amount due under a Certificate may be made by instalments, if the Collector who made such Certificate so direct. The payment of any instalment shall be entered in the Register mentioned in Section 21.

Payment of sum due under a Certificate may be made by instalments. Payment of instalments to be entered in Register.

(b) When the total amount due under a Certificate has been paid and satisfied, the Collector in whose office such Certificate was originally filed shall enter satisfaction upon such Certificate under his hand and signature; and shall cause the same to be entered in the Register mentioned in Section 21.

When total amount satisfied, Collector to enter satisfaction on certificate and in Register;

(c) When a copy of such Certificate has been transmitted to another Collector, or when such Certificate has been made under the provisions of Section 9 upon notice from a Public Officer other than a Collector or from a Manager appointed by the Court of Wards, such satisfaction shall be communicated to such other Collector or to such officer or to such Manager.

and to communicate it to other Collector in whose office a copy of such Certificate has been filed.

(d) When a sum has been levied or received by a Collector in respect of a Certificate, a copy of which has been transmitted to him and filed in his office, such Collector shall send such sum to the Office in which such Certificate was originally made.

Sum levied by Collector to whom copy of Certificate sent to be transmitted to Collector who made Certificate.

23. Every Collector, Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner and Extra Assistant Commissioner and every such Public Officer as is mentioned in Section 9 shall, in the discharge of his functions under this Act, be deemed to be a person acting judicially within the meaning of Act XVIII of 1850, passed by the Governor-General in Council.

Collector, Deputy Collector, Assistant Commissioner, Extra Assistant Commissioner and Public Officer to be deemed to be acting judicially in the discharge of his duties under this Act.

24. All Collectors, Deputy Collectors, Assistant Commissioners, and Extra Assistant Commissioners shall, in the performance of their duties under this Act, be subject to the general supervision and control of the Commissioners of Divisions and the Board of Revenue.

Collectors, &c, to be subject to the supervision and control of Commissioners and Board in discharge of their duties under this Act.

THE REPORT

OF

THE RENT LAW COMMISSION,

WITH

OF

A BILL TO CONSOLIDATE AND AMEND THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT WITHIN THE TERRITORIES UNDER THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL:

AND AN APPENDIX CONTAINING THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMISSION AND THE PAPERS CONSIDERED AND REFERRED TO IN THE REPORT AND PROCEEDINGS.

No. 2286½—1322½L.R., dated Darjeeling, the 15th July 1880.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

To—The Secretary to the Board of Revenue.

I AM directed to forward, for the consideration of the Board of Revenue, a copy of the report of the Rent Law Commission, and accompanying papers, including a Draft of a Bill to consolidate and amend the Law of Landlord and Tenant within the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Commissioners and District Officers have also been furnished with copies direct from this Office. I am to request that the Board will first invite the attention of those officers to the points in the Report and Bill which seem to the Board to call for particular consideration and discussion, and then, after digesting and analysing their replies, submit to Government a comprehensive review of the whole subject. This review should reach Government not later than the end of November.

2. The following are some of the questions raised by the Draft Bill which the Lieutenant-Governor would wish to have generally and carefully considered. He hopes that the Board will impress upon officers in the interior the importance of ascertaining the views of all classes of persons interested in land upon these and all other changes of moment suggested by the Commission :—

CHAPTER I.

3. The provisions of the Bill for defining more precisely the distinction between tenure-holders or undertenure-holders and ryots are new, and call for detailed criticism. The Board are well aware of the difficulties surrounding this question, and of the manner in which it constantly comes up in settlements, especially in the eastern districts and the Sunderbuns. The Commission have discussed it very fully in paragraphs 13 to 23 and 36 of their Report; and in section 11 of the Bill have put forward an arbitrary rule for the determination of such status, based on the quantity of land included in a single holding or letting. This provision has to be read with those of sections 9, 10, and 12, laying down the limits of enhancement in the case of tenures and under-tenures. Its probable effect upon the position of persons holding what are now usually classed as large ryotty jotes, in districts like Rungpore and Noakholly, should be carefully analysed and tested by concrete examples.

4. The effect of the limitations placed in the Bill on the enhancement of the rent of tenures and under-tenures generally should also be fully investigated.

CHAPTERS III AND IV.

5. A distinction is drawn in these chapters between ryots who have held land for twelve years, and ryots who have held for three or more, but less than twelve years. The former are declared to have rights of occupancy, as under the existing law; their holdings, and theirs only, are subject to all the legal incidents of the occupancy tenure as defined in the Bill; their rents are regulated by the detailed rules of enhancement laid down in Chapter III; and to them only applies the elaborate enhancement procedure set forth in Chapter XV. The ryots of Chapter IV are not deemed to have rights of occupancy, but they are evidently deemed to be something more than mere tenants-at-will. Their landlord may demand from them any rent he pleases; but if they are forced thereby to relinquish their lands, he must give them one year's enhanced rent as compensation for disturbance, besides the value of their improvements. On referring to Chapter XV, the Lieutenant-Governor finds that the scheme of enhancement devised by the Commission amounts practically, and in its essence, to a proposal to re-establish a system of authoritative local rent rates as the equivalent, in fact, of the old pergunnah rates; and to place the determination of these in the hands of the Revenue authorities. But if an authoritative local rate system is established in the manner proposed, the wording of the old Regulations would lead to the conclusion that it should apply generally to all non-privileged cultivators within the tract affected by it.

Ryots who have held over three, but less than twelve, years are in fact settled cultivators who are fast developing into the statutory occupancy ryots. On their attaining the statutory tenure, their rents should equitably be regulated by the Collector's Table of Rates, and in any future enhancement proceedings, they would be treated in the same way as other occupancy ryots. It certainly seems anomalous that they should be liable to pay higher rates meantime, and be able to claim compensation for what they choose to consider excessive demand—a right which is not allowed to the occupancy ryot himself. At present, as the Lieutenant-Governor gathers from the reports on Sir Richard Temple's enhancement proposals, the village rent rates for ordinary occupancy and non-occupancy ryots are the same in most districts; and the Collector's Table of Rates would probably be gladly accepted as a satisfactory settlement of the rates for all classes of resident cultivators. If so, it would certainly seem to be simpler to omit Chapter IV of the Bill, and declare that the right of occupancy, involving the obligation of paying rent according to the Collector's Table of Rates, should attach to all ryots holding land for three years or more. It might be necessary to make exceptions to meet the case of cultivators of chur lands and the like; but the Lieutenant-Governor would wish to know what practical objections there are to the course now suggested. Primâ facie it would tend to simplify considerably the classification of the agricultural community, and the relations of landlords and tenants.

6. In section 19, explanation 3 (a), it is proposed to confer the right of occupancy on the sub-tenants of mukuraridars and istimrardars. I am to ask if there is any good reason why this should not be done.

7. In clause (c) of the same explanation, it is explicity declared that the sub-tenant of an occupancy ryot, holding otherwise than for a term, or year by year, has himself a right of occupancy; and by clause (c) of section 23, the rent of the holder of such a sub-occupancy right is limited to a rate slightly higher than that of the occupancy ryot. This sub-occupancy right is said to be contemplated by the existing law, but the Lieutenant-Governor doubts whether such a tenure exists in practice. It would perhaps be simpler to treat the tenants of occupancy ryots as mere tenants-at-will, which is all that they usually are.

8. Under explanation 4, clause (h) of the same section, a landlord is, under certain circumstances, allowed to prevent the acquisition of the occupancy right by exacting a written contract to that effect from an in-coming tenant. If it is desirable, on grounds of public policy, as the Lieutenant-Governor considers it is, to make the occupancy right general and valuable, it is a question how far contract should be allowed to interfere. The proposals of the Commission under this head should be carefully considered. They may perhaps be deemed to suggest a reasonable compromise between the two extreme views that may be held on this subject.

9. Section 20 sets out the legal incidents of the occupancy tenure. The propriety of making it transferable by private sale and gift is recognised by the Commission, and the Lieutenant-Governor believes, under the circumstances of Bengal, rightly recognised. Attention is invited to the limitations placed on the general right of transfer; the tenure is not to be saleable in execution of any decree other than a decree for its own arrears of rent, and it may not be mortgaged. The grounds of these restrictions are given in paragraph 32 of the Commission's Report. Their validity should be investigated, and their probable effect discussed.

10. By clause (e) ejectment for arrears is done away with, but ejectment is allowed for breach of any stipulation in respect of which the landlord and tenant may have contracted in writing that ejectment should be the penalty for breach thereof. This clause assumes that the ryot is in an independent condition when contracting. The Lieutenant-Governor shares the doubts as to the propriety of this provision, referred to in paragraph 34 of the Commission's Report.

11. The provisions of section 21, regarding rent in kind, should receive attention.

12. The substantive provisions of sections 22 and 23, regarding enhancement, are very important, and should be carefully considered with reference to the remarks of the Commission in paragraphs 46 to 62 of their Report. The proposal to take one-fourth of the average annual value of the gross produce as the maximum limit or ultimate test of the equity of the occupancy ryot's rent will probably meet with general acceptance. The Commission do not, it will be seen, propose to take a share of the gross produce as the ordinary standard of rent; but leave enhancement to be made upon the grounds recognised by the present law, as now more clearly defined and explained.

CHAPTER VI.

13. The provisions of this chapter, bearing on the use of land for building purposes, are novel, and will no doubt meet with adequate criticism (see paragraphs 108 to 113 of the Commission's Report). It will probably be deemed desirable to settle this question once for all. The question of what percentage on the market value is a fair rent for building land should be carefully looked into. Possibly it should be settled from time to time, for each district or part of a district, by the Collector's Table of Rates, if it is decided eventually to have this prepared authoritatively for particular tracts, irrespective of individual applications for enhancement.

CHAPTER VII.

14. The provisions of the chapter on Merger are explained in paragraphs 114 to 115 of the Report. They are designed to remove difficulties that not unfrequently crop up under the system of sub-infeudation so common in Bengal.

CHAPTER VIII.

15. The Board will doubtless give due consideration to the sections bearing on the registration of the transfers of tenures, under-tenures, and occupancy holdings (paragraphs 116 to 121 of the Report).

CHAPTER IX.

16. Much of the matter of this chapter has been already discussed very fully, and practically settled. The sections calling specially for criticism are those relating to the deposit of rent, the apportionment of rent, and the hypothecation of all tenures and holdings for the rent thereof (paragraphs 125 to 133 of the Report).

CHAPTER X.

17. The chapter on co-parceners is explained in paragraphs 134 to 137 of the Report, and should receive careful attention.

CHAPTER XI.

18. The sections in this chapter, which most call for notice, are perhaps section 77, regarding tenants' improvements and the ryots' right to trees, and section 80, providing for the disposal of the crop on the ground in cases of ejectment. The effect of these sections upon existing local customs should be investigated. Clause (9) of section 79, read with No. 16 of the third schedule attached to the Bill, compels an auction-purchaser to elect to avoid subordinate tenancies within one year of his purchase. This seems to be a useful provision.

CHAPTER XII.

19. This is a special chapter for Behar. The Lieutenant-Governor trusts that it will be carefully studied by all officers in that province with reference to paragraphs 146 to 156 of the Report. It might also be usefully considered by Bengal officers whether some of the sections, such for instance as 84 and 85, might not be made general in their application.

CHAPTER XV.

20. This chapter provides an elaborate procedure for enhancing the rents of occupancy ryots and tenure-holders. Its provisions are explained at length in paragraphs 83 to 97 of the Report. The Lieutenant-Governor, as at present advised, is very much disposed to concur in the view taken by Mr. Dampier in his remarks appended to the Bill. It might even be sufficient to provide that the Revenue authorities, or specially selected officers working in conjunction with the district officers, should from time to time settle authoritative tables of rates for all districts or parts of districts, the rest being left to the civil courts, except, perhaps, in the cases described in section 112 et seq. The Lieutenant-Governor will not, however, attempt to prejudge the question, but desires that the fullest criticism may be applied to this portion of the Bill, and that the Board will submit eventually their matured conclusions as to accepting or modifying the proposals of the Commission.

CHAPTER XVIII.

21. In this chapter is set forth the procedure devised by the Commission for the trial of ordinary rent-suits. They are of opinion that it is impossible to go further in the direction of summary trial without risk of injustice to one or other of the parties concerned; and certainly all the modes of summary procedure hitherto suggested have been open to grave objections upon that score. Judicial officers are in the best position to judge of the value of the procedure now suggested, and the Lieutenant-Governor hopes to receive a full expression of their views, and of those of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court, on this chapter. It will be well, however, that the Revenue authorities should also examine this part of the Bill, and make any remarks that occur to them in connection with it, after studying the detailed explanations of its tenor, contained in paragraphs 174 to 189 of the Commission's Report.

22. The schedule of limitation is explained in paragraphs 159 to 162 of the Report, and should not be overlooked.

No. 2286½—1322½L.R., dated Darjeeling, the 15th July 1880.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

To—The Registrar of the High Court, Calcutta.

I AM directed to forward, for the use of the Court, 12 copies of the Report of the Rent Law Commission, and of the connected papers, and to say that the Lieutenant-Governor would be glad if the Hon'ble Judges would, in consideration of the great importance of the subject, not only consent to favour the Government with their own views upon the whole subject, but permit the reports of subordinate judicial officers to be forwarded through the Court, and submitted to its criticism.

2. Copies of the Report and papers have been sent from this Office direct to all District Judges, and the papers have also been published in the Gazette, so that all judicial officers are in a position to consider the matter, if the Court were willing to order them to report thereon to it instead of to Government.

3. I am to forward, for the information of the Hon'ble Judges, a copy of a letter addressed to the Board of Revenue, showing the points upon which the Lieutenant-Governor specially desires to learn the views of district and divisional officers, and of the Board.

THE REPORT

OF

THE RENT LAW COMMISSION.

WE, the Commissioners appointed to consider the question of amending the Rent Law of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, have the honour to make the following Report:—

§ 1. By the orders of the Government conveyed to us on our appointment we were instructed (1) to prepare a careful Analysis and Digest of the existing Rent Law, as contained in the Acts and Regulations concerned with this subject and in the decisions of the Courts since the passing of Act X of 1859; and (2), after considering the suggestions for amendment that have been put forward of late years, to endeavour to prepare a Draft Bill embodying such additions to the Substantive law, and such improvements in the law of Procedure, as might be found advisable.

Twofold instruction given to the Commission.

§ 2. The Digest was first compiled by our colleague, Mr. Field, and was submitted on the 19th August last with our Secretary's letter No. 14 of that date.

Digest submitted in August last.

§ 3. The Draft Bill has now been prepared and is submitted with this Report. In the Digest was collected the whole of the Statute law and the Case law connected with the subject of Landlord and Tenant in the Lower Provinces of Bengal,—that is, the whole of the law in its existing state. In making this compilation it was thought desirable to take in as wide a field as possible, and to include everything concerned less or more with the subject in hand. Any question as to whether a particular fragment of the law should find a place in the work was decided in favour of admissibility, if only its relevancy were at all apparent. Scantiness of materials might have involved the oversight of something of importance, while from a superabundance it was easy to select all that might well be incorporated in a consolidating enactment. This branch of the law, like many others, is more or less connected with some of the remaining branches, and it is not always easy to decide where the exact line of demarcation should be placed. In settling this question for the purposes of the Draft Bill it seemed to us advisable to omit all matter contained in special or local enactments, not because any such matter contained in the Digest has not a sufficiently clear connection with the Law of Landlord and Tenant, but because it appeared to us to have a still more intimate connection with the context in which it is at present to be found. In accordance with this view the following portions of law, though included in the Digest, are omitted from the Draft Bill:—

Scope of the Draft Bill.

Portions of law omitted from the Draft Bill though contained in the Digest.

I.—The special procedure for the realization of rents in estates under the management of the Court of Wards or of the Revenue Authorities:

II.—The special procedure for the realization of rents in estates belonging to Government.

III.—The law concerned with Ghatwals and Ghatwali and other service tenures.

IV.—The details of the law relating to the avoidance of tenancies by a Sale for Arrears of Government Revenue.

V.—The effect of a Partition of a revenue paying estate upon tenancies therein.

The law as to the resumption and assessment of lakhiraj lands by proprietors (see Articles 75 and 83 of the Digest) has also been omitted, as this subject has now ceased to have any special connection with the Law of Landlord and Tenant, and suits brought to resume and assess lands alleged to be held under invalid grants fall within the category of civil suits (see Act VII (B.C.) of 1862). With these exceptions and one more important exception about to be noticed, the Draft Bill contains the law embodied in the Digest with those amendments and alterations which we[1] feel justified in recommending after such consideration and deliberation as the importance of the whole subject demands.

Proposed abolition of Distraint

§ 4. The Bill does not reproduce the provisions of the existing law upon the subject of Distraint, and we propose to abolish altogether this mode of proceeding for the recovery of rent. This offset of English law was originally introduced into this country by Regulation XVII of 1793, which empowered certain specified landlords to distrain and sell the crops and products of the earth of every description, the grain, cattle, and all other personal property (whether found in the house or on the premises of the defaulter or of any other person) belonging to their tenants. This continued to be the law until 1859, when the power of distraint was limited to the produce of the land on account of which the rent is due. There can be little doubt that this change considerably impaired the coercive efficacy of this procedure as a means of recovering rent; and we are afraid that the provisions of the present law are not always strictly attended to. There is evidence of positive abuse of these provisions in Behar; and the experience of some of us is that they have not always been used in a regular manner in other parts of the country. We have had before us certain suggestions for shortening and improving this procedure, and have considered whether by their adoption it might not be made safely efficacious to a greater extent than it hitherto has been; but a majority of us finally came to the conclusion that it might well be omitted from any consolidating and amending Act. It is to be observed that this conclusion is in accordance with the greater number of the votes of the members of the Behar Rent Committee and of the Behar Indigo Planters' Association.

Powers of Settlement Officers excluded from the operation of the Bill

§ 5. Neither the Digest nor the Bill incorporates the law relating to the powers and duties of Settlement Officers. This subject has very recently occupied the attention of the Bengal Legislative Council, and has been dealt with by Act VIII (B.C.) of 1879, which received the assent of the Governor-General on the 22nd May last year. It has appeared to us that any re-opening of this portion of the law on the present occasion would but needlessly complicate a subject already sufficiently intricate. In connection with this topic we may, however, refer to a question which has occasionally created difficulties of a peculiar nature, and which we have attempted to solve by a section of the Draft Bill. The difference between Revenue and Rent, which was not always present with sufficient clearness to the minds of those charged with the earlier administration of these provinces, has of late years been very distinctly realized by most persons Merger in the case of Government.

[1] The plural of the pronoun of the first person—"we"—is used throughout this Report to express the unanimous opinion of the Members of the Commission, or, where the questions are unimportant, the opinion of the majority. Where the questions are important and the members are not unanimous, the opinion adopted is expressly stated to be that of the majority. Some Members have appended to the Report an expression of their views on particular points.

concerned with the subject. This difference, though discernible in the abstract, is not, however, equally manifest in the particular instance, when we come to cases in which the paramount title belonging to the State and carrying with it the right to receive the revenue, and the proprietary title carrying with it the right to receive the rent have met in the person of Government. Do the two titles continue to co-exist, each preserving its own incidents? Or is one, and, if so, which of them, swallowed up and lost in the superior essence of the other? In other words, do the tenants, after that the two titles have come into the hands of Government, pay rent or revenue. The settlement of the question is important, not merely as regards the mode of recovering arrears, but as regards other important interests. We have provided in Section 45 that it is and always has been the law, that, when the Secretary of State for India acquires an estate by purchase or otherwise, the proprietary interest is merged in the paramount title. We have endeavoured to guard this provision so as to prevent injury to the rights and interests of third parties; and we have saved the operation of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1879, which defines and limits the powers of Settlement Officers, and also the operation of the Public Demands' Recovery Act.

The Bill does not in any way depend upon the existence of Patwaris

§ 6. The revival of the office of Patwari has recently engaged the attention of Government, and there are different views as to the advisability and probable utility of rehabilitating these remains of a former system, which the working of our administration has effectually subverted. After full consideration it has been lately decided by Government that zemindars shall no longer be required to keep up Patwaris in Bengal and Orissa. As to Behar the question is still undetermined. We do not consider that it falls within the sphere of our present duty to discuss or express any opinion on this question, but it will be well to say that no portion of the Draft Bill depends upon the revival or maintenance of Patwaris. We may observe that the Behar Rent Committee do not deem it desirable to incorporate the law relating to Patwaris with the Rent Law.

Suggestions not adopted in the Bill.

§ 7. It will be convenient to notice here certain suggestions which have received our attentive consideration, but the matter of which finds no place in the Draft Bill, inasmuch as the result of our deliberations has been not to recommend their adoption. The first, and probably the most important, of these is that all contracts of tenancy should be required by law to be in writing. This is a suggestion which has been repeatedly made, and on more than one occasion supported by high authority. The majority of the tenancies in Bengal and Behar depend upon custom rather than contract. However suitable a law requiring contracts of tenancy to be made in a particular form may be for a community in which the idea of contract, being early developed, rapidly permeated all classes, we think that it is not equally suited for a community over which custom exercises a powerful influence, whilst more admiration is accorded to the ingenuity with which a contract is broken, than to the honesty which respects its binding force. The Legislature of 1793 directed its efforts to the introduction of written engagements between landlord and tenant, and the Regulations of that time contain more than one homily upon the advantages that would surely accrue to both parties from the use of such written engagements; but neither party was in the least persuaded or converted: and finally a law was rescinded in which neither party saw sufficient benefit to himself to induce him to enforce it against the other. The little use made of the provisions of the existing law, which enable the ryot to sue for a pottah or the landlord for a kabuliyat, goes far to show that the race of landlords and tenants in Bengal has not much altered its mind on this point Suggestion that contracts of tenancy should be in writing.

since the time of the Permanent Settlement. The experience of the Registration Offices indicates that writing is commonly used in the creation of new tenancies, and we think it more advisable to leave the adoption of writing to its natural growth, which will no doubt be encouraged by the spread of education amongst the cultivating classes, than to force upon the people a law fashioned according to Western rather than Eastern ideas.

Omission of the law as to pottahs and kabuliyats and suits for obtaining them.

§ 8. Closely connected with this point is the omission from the Draft Bill of any provisions similar to those of the existing law as to ryots being entitled to pottahs, and landlords being entitled to kabuliyats, and the procedure for enforcing the rights so declared. We have just observed that very little use has been made of these provisions by those for whose benefit they were intended. This observation was more particularly concerned with their use as a means of reducing to writing the conditions regulating the relation of landlord and tenant. There is, however, another purpose for which they might have been used, that is, as a means to obtain an authoritative settlement of some essential question connected with the tenancy and in dispute between the parties thereto—the rate of rent, for example, or the quantity of land held by the tenant. The landlord may contend that the ryot holds twenty bighas of land, while the ryot declares that he has but fifteen. Year after year the contention is renewed. The landlord threatens a measurement, which the ryot, afraid of a venal Amin and a varying pole, desires to avoid. A bribe to the gomashtah or compliance with some petty cess defers the final settlement of the question for a year; and the following year it arises again, perhaps deterring the ryot from going to his landlord's kachahri to pay his rent, lest he should be subjected to a demand, the justice of which he will not admit. Or some fields in the ryot's holding are by him maintained to be second class rice land and assessable with the prevailing or usual rate for land of this class, whilst the landlord avers that they are first class rice land and should pay a higher rent. At every rent day the point is discussed; and in a country where any discussion is prone to beget a wrangle, seldom conducted with a seemly choice of expressions, an amount of irritation is kept up, which is not in harmony with the friendly relations which should exist between a landlord and his tenantry. It is very desirable that facility be afforded for the ready settlement of questions like these which are constantly arising in this country, more especially in consequence of the absence of boundaries and fences and the want of an exact survey upon an uniform standard. It might have been thought that the landlord in the first case could easily have the question settled by tendering a pottah and demanding a kabuliyat for twenty bighas; and the landlord in the second case by tendering a pottah and demanding a kabuliyat for the field, as first class rice land: but if the land turned out to be nineteen and a half bighas instead of twenty, or one of the fields was found to be of some middle class kind of land, the suit, according to the decision of the highest tribunal in India, must fail and the parties be sent away, the real question in dispute unsettled, and their feelings roused and embittered by litigation. Thus these provisions of the existing law have become ineffectual for the only purpose for which the people cared to use them and for which they might have been beneficially used. While omitting what has been found useless in practice, we have endeavoured to supply the want thus indicated by experience. Section 151 of the Draft Bill accordingly allows either landlord or tenant to sue for the determination of any such questions which may arise between them. A copy of the decree passed in the case will have all the effect of a pottah or kabuliyat upon the point which the parties themselves wish to have determined.

Inadvisable to create fresh penalties for the levy of Illegal Cesses.

§ 9. We do not think it desirable that any further attempt be made to suppress the levy of Illegal Cesses by fresh measures of punitive legislation. The Draft Bill reproduces the provisions of the existing law, which enable a tenant, from whom any sum of money is exacted by his landlord in excess of the rent lawfully payable, to recover the sum so exacted, together with damages not exceeding double such sum. This of course in no way interferes with a resort to the Criminal Courts, if the exaction has been accompanied by any circumstances which constitute an offence under the Penal Code. The ryots as a body are daily becoming better acquainted with their rights. The creation of Sub-divisions and the opening of Criminal Courts in the interior of districts are calculated to prevent oppression by rendering the means of redress more easy and certain. We believe that the operation of these principles of improvement will in time reduce this particular offence to the ordinary level of normal malefaction, and that this result would in no way be accelerated by the addition of fresh penalties to those which are to be found in the existing law.

Definitions of terms—"Estate," "Proprietor," "Tenure," "Undertenure."

§ 10. Turning now to the Draft Bill, it will be convenient to follow its arrangement to a certain extent in discussing the alterations and amendments which we propose to make in the law. This arrangement will be sufficiently understood from the Table of Contents prefixed to the Bill: we shall only observe here that the Substantive Law has been placed in Part I, and the Adjective Law or Procedure in Part II. And first we have endeavoured to define the terms "estate," "proprietor," "tenure," and "undertenure" so as to create distinct ideas of what is really meant and avoid the confusion which has arisen from using these terms indiscriminately to signify the same and different things.[1] We have defined "estate" to mean land included under one entry in any of the General Registers of revenue-paying and revenue-free lands. It thus means the interest immediately below the paramount interest which Government has in the land. The owner of an estate is termed a "proprietor." The interest next below an estate and superior to that of a ryot we have defined to be a "tenure," and the owner of a tenure to be a "tenure-holder." Under a tenure and above the ryot's interest comes an "undertenure," the owner of which is an "undertenure-holder." If there are more than one of such middle interests, they are termed undertenures of the first, second, &c., degree. We thus get down to the ryot whom we have defined to be "a person who holds land, or occupies and cultivates land, if such person was originally let into possession of such land for the purpose of cultivating it or bringing it into cultivation"—adding that "a person cultivates land or brings land under cultivation within the meaning of this definition, when the cultivation is carried on by himself, or by the members of his family, or by servants, or by hired labourers, or by persons to whom he has sublet the land or any part of it, or partly by some and partly by others of these persons." We shall presently have more to say about the ryot, when we come to consider some cases in which there is some difficulty in saying whether a certain class of persons ought to be regarded as ryots or tenure-holders (or undertenure-holders). The ryot's interest is his "holding" and, where he has a right of occupancy, an "occupancy holding."

"Ryot."

"Holding." "Occupancy holding."

"Rent."

§ 11. The definition of "rent" presented some difficulty, as opinions differ about what rent really is in India. We have endeavoured to express what we hope will be accepted as a reasonable view of the subject, and have defined rent to be "whatever is payable or deliverable by a tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, or occupancy ryot to the proprietor, tenure-holder, or undertenure-holder possessing the interest immediately superior in the land held by him, in recognition and satisfaction of such superior interest; or whatever is payable or deliverable as a return or compensation for the use or occupation of land or for any rights of pasturage, forest rights, fisheries, or the like." The full force of this definition will be more clearly understood after reading our subsequent discussion of the theory of rent which we conceive to be applicable to this country. The only other definition which requires particular notice is that of "land." Certain portions of Acts X of 1859 and VIII (B.C.) of 1869 have been construed to apply only to land used for agricultural or horticultural purposes or the like. Whether the remaining portions are limited in their application is a broad question, which has never been settled, while some have contended that the provisions of these Acts as to the recovery of arrears of rent apply to the rent of any land, irrespective of the purpose for which it is used. It has never been doubted that the rents of tenures and undertenures are recoverable under these Acts, and these commonly include much more than land used for agricultural or horticultural purposes. We have endeavoured by our definition to make this question clear for the future; and according to this definition the provisions of the Bill will be applicable to land used for all such purposes as are usual in this country. We have defined bastu, or homestead land, to be land used for agricultural purposes when it is occupied by a ryot, and together with the land cultivated by such ryot forms a single holding. With respect to bastu land occupied by non-agriculturists we have considered certain suggestions as to the hardship of persons, who have occupied such land for very many years, being liable to arbitrary ejectment; and we have provided generally for land used for building purposes in Chapter VI, the provisions of which we shall notice in order.

[1] In some of the Acts of the Bengal Council, the terms "tenure" and "undertenure" are used indiscriminately for the same thing. One Act speaks of "patni taluks and other saleable undertenures." Now a patni is not an undertenure, but a tenure, and is so spoken of throughout Regulation VIII of 1819.

'Land."

"Bastu Land."

Saving of Custom and Customary rights.

§ 12. We have provided that nothing in the Bill shall affect any custom or customary right not inconsistent with, or not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by, its provisions. The mode of proving custom is not very well understood in this country, and, unfortunately, nothwithstanding a dictum of Sir Barnes Peacock to the contrary, an idea got to prevail that Act X had superseded all customs and was intended to do away with all agricultural rights except those specially mentioned and provided for in that Act. We believe that there are many local customs, in this as well as in every other country, well understood by the people, recognized by the landlords, and susceptible of proof in the courts of justice; and we think it very desirable to make it clearly understood that the Bill is not intended to interfere with any of these, unless they have expressly rescinded by, or are clearly inconsistent with, its provisions.

Question as to whether certain classes of agriculturists should be regarded as Ryots or Tenure-holders.

§ 13. It will be convenient to consider here a question to which we have referred above, namely, the difficulty of saying with regard to certain classes of the agricultural community whether they should be placed in the category of ryots, or in that of tenure-holders or undertenure-holders. We think that the usual conception of a "ryot" is that he is the cultivator of the soil. If holdings had all been of such a size that they could be cultivated by a single average family, and if the practice of subletting had never come into existence, the ryot would in all probability still be the cultivator of the soil in every case. But the practice of subletting has become very common. Even where the holding is of such a size that an average family can cultivate it, it is not uncommon for the holder to take to some other employment than agriculture and to sublet his paternal fields. Then there are in many districts farms, as we may term them in the English sense of the word, lots of land, too large for cultivation by any ordinary family in a country where cultivation is not conducted by capitalists, largely employing hired labourers and agricultural machinery. The size of these lots forbids the presumption that the original lessees contemplated cultivating them either with their own hands or through the members of their families or by hired labour; and all that we know of their history tends to negative the existence of any such intention. It will be important to describe the position of persons of this class in a few districts.

The Jotedars of Rungpore.

§ 14. As to Rungpore we take the following passage from a letter of Mr. Glazier, the Collector, written in 1876:—"The ryot who holds direct from the zemindar is called a jotedar, and his holding is a jote, whatever its size, which may and does vary from one paying a rent of one rupee to one of which the rent is half a lakh. The large majority of jotedars have small holdings and are ryots proper, cultivating their lands either by their own or hired labour, or on the system of adhiyari or halvers. But a large number of jotedars have ryots under them who are called either chukanidars or kurpa prajas. The chukanidars, too, have often ryots under them, and in some cases, especially in the larger jotes, there are four or more degrees before you get to the actual cultivator. Jotes are saleable quite irrespective of the term during which they have been held, whether jotes held direct from the zemindar, or chukani jotes which are held from a jotedar. If a man gets a jote to-day, he can legally transfer it by sale to-morrow. Such sales of jotes by registered deed or on decree of Court are of daily occurrence." There is a strong resemblance between the interests in land in Rungpore and those found in the Bhootan Dooars. Mr. Glazier says that when the jotedar pays Rs. 100, he collects Rs. 200 from the actual cultivators.

The Howladars, &c. of Backergunge.

§ 15. In Backergunge there are as many as thirteen persons having successive interests in the land inferior to that of the proprietor or zemindar. These interests are, (1) taluk, (2) zimba taluk, (3) shamilat taluk, (4) ashat taluk, (5) nim ashat taluk,[3] (6) howla, (7) ashat howla, (8) nim ashat howla, (9) nim howla, (10) ashat nim howla, (11) mirass karsha, (12) kaim karsha, (13) karshadar or ryot. The origin of most of the taluks and howlas appears to have been a grant of a considerable tract of waste land upon favourable terms as to rent to some one who undertook to bring it under cultivation. The grantee reclaimed portions and sublet portions to smaller reclaiming tenants; or perhaps sublet the whole, if he could find tenants to reclaim it. These sublessees sublet again; and the subletting was carried still lower, until the whole tract was divided into holdings of a manageable size for single families. The number of grades doubtless varied with the size of the tract originally leased, and with the denseness of the population in the particular locality. Not uncommonly those who had reclaimed land sublet it, when the demand for land increased; or a person, who had taken enough for two or three holdings, reclaimed and retained enough for one, and sublet the remainder. It is easy to imagine the intricacy of interests which must have been the result of such a system. Sometimes the zemindar's grantee embarked a little capital, making advances to needy ryots, forced out by the pressure of population from densely inhabited localities, and thus enabling them to buy ploughs and cattle and seed, and build homesteads. This was probably necessary at starting a new settlement. As matters progressed, and if the venture was successful, new settlers had to pay a salámi or fine to the grantee before he assigned them lots in his grant. In many instances the chief capital taken to the work of reclamation was the labour of those who accompanied the grantee as a leader in whom they had confidence. Where the waste has been wholly reclaimed and the land fully occupied, we find persons occupying the double position of landlord and tenant, paying rent for an entire lot, cultivating part, and subletting part to persons who perhaps again repeat the process. In the case of persons called "talukdars," no difficulty appears to have arisen, the word "taluk" carrying with it a definite kind of meaning, and being found as well in the old Regulations as in Act X of 1859. With the howladars, however, the state of the case is not so clear. Are they talukdars? Do they hold an undertenure in the vague sense in which the word has hitherto been used? If so, what is its nature, and what are its incidents? Are they ryots entitled to acquire a right of occupancy; and, if so, what becomes of the middlemen below them and the actual cultivator of the soil at the bottom. Act X supplies no answer to these questions and the Courts have not yet settled them. The howla interest has come by custom to be regarded as heritable, transferable, and permanent so long as the rent is paid, but subject to enhancement. The Government in settling some of its own estates, has treated the howladars as the occupancy ryots, and has declared that they are at liberty to make their own arrangements with the persons holding under them without interference on the part of the Settlement Officers.

The Aymadars of Midnapore.

§ 16. Persons in an apparently similar position are to be found in other districts under various appellations, such as jangalburi ryots, mandals, aymadars. The origin of all is probably similar, though the exact rights accorded to each by custom may vary in different districts. In Midnapore the Settlement Officer, Mr. Price, found certain aymadars, who were receiving from ryots subordinate to them rents one hundred per cent. higher than those which they were paying to Government. Some of these aymadars, who would not agree to the terms offered them by the Settlement Officer, were put aside, and the settlement was made with the tenants immediatly below them. Litigation ensued, and these aymadars were declared by the Civil Court to be ryots having a right of occupancy. It would appear, however, that though the subordinate tenants were parties to this case, it was substantially decided between the Government and the aymadars. It would have been more satisfactory if these tenants had taken an active part in the pleadings, and in consequence their position had also been fully considered in determining the rights of the aymadars.

The Mandals of Midnapore

§ 17. In parts of Midnapore bordering on the Jangal Mahals, there is a class of persons termed Mandals, who came into existence in the following manner. The zemindar granted a tract of waste land to a substantial ryot, termed an abadkar, who undertook to bring it under cultivation, paying the zemindar a stipulated lump sum as rent. This abadkar, partly by the labour of his own family and dependents, and partly by inducing other ryots to settle under him, gradually reclaimed the greater part of the grant and established a village upon it, to which he usually gave his name; and, as the head of the settlement, he was called Mandal or Headman. The zemindar and the mandal from time to time re-adjusted the terms of their bargain, but the zemindar never interfered between the mandal and his undertenants. In settlement proceedings of 1839, these mandals were declared to have only the rights of sthani or khudkasht ryots, and not to be entitled to any munafa or profit; but, though not exactly recognized as talukdars, they gradually acquired rights superior to those of ordinary khudkasht ryots; and, as they were left to make their own terms with the ryots settled by them, they must have had a very considerable profit besides what they obtained from any land cultivated by themselves. Their mandali right became transferable by custom; and, when at settlement they came into immediate contact with Government, though not recognized as regular talukdars, they were held entitled to the consideration which in Bengal has usually been accorded to the first reclaimer of the virgin soil. The Government in settlement proceedings deducted fifteen per centum from the gross jama in their favour, and, after some demur, they accepted this as a sufficient recognition of their status.

See No. 507A from Secretary to Board of Revenue to Secretary to Government of Bengal, dated 8th June 1877.

Difference between persons who obtained reclaiming leases in Estates Permanently Sett'ed in 1793, and similar lessees in other estates.

§ 18. In considering the position of persons of the class described in the preceding paragraphs, it is important to point out that there are important differences between persons who obtained reclaiming leases in estates permanently settled in 1793, and persons, who have since that time obtained similar leases in estates either permanently settled under more modern rules, or still the subject of temporary settlements. The settlement of 1793 was based on the assessment of the land then in cultivation; and the possible receipts from land then waste, but which might afterwards be brought under cultivation, were not taken into account. Indeed, the reclamation of this waste land, which in 1793 was computed to form one-third, or (according to others) one half, or even more of the whole area of Bengal, was expressly pointed out to the zemindars as a source of future increase of income. The waste land being thus as it were held free of revenue by the zemindars—seeing that the amount of revenue payable by them depended upon the then cultivated lands and would be in no way affected by the waste being cultivated or not cultivated—they naturally did not take much account of Government revenue in granting reclaiming leases. All the rent that they obtained by such grants was clear gain, subject to no deductions. Naturally they could afford to give, and they did give, such leases at very favourable rates—rates which left a large and increasing profit to their immediate lessees. The Government subsequently became fully alive to the importance of taking the waste land into account before any estate was permanently settled, and finally it was laid down as a general rule that no estate should be permanently settled, in which the actual cultivation amounted to less than eighty per centum of the culturable area. At the same time Government took into its own hands large tracts of waste land not included within the limits of the permanently settled estates of 1793, and the grant of reclaiming leases in these tracts was regulated by a reasonable regard to the interests of the State, the incidence of the Government revenue being carefully taken into account. When estates not included in the Permanent Settlement of 1793 are now settled, the Government usually takes as revenue seventy per cent. of the gross collections. Allowing ten per centum as collection expenses, there remains twenty per cent. to be divided between the zemindar and the reclaiming lease-holder. In the permanently settled estate of 1793, there is ninety per cent. of the profits to be divided: or even if the Government revenue be distributed over the entire area of the estate, it comes to as little as ten per cent. in many places, thus leaving eighty per cent. to be divided.

Effect of the Case-law upon the status of this class.

§ 19. Turning to the case-law we find it decided (1) that, if a person takes land and at once sublets it, he will be a middleman and will not under the present law acquire a right of occupancy in such land; (2) that if a ryot, who has acquired a right of occupancy in land, sublets such land, he does not by so doing forfeit his right of occupancy; but (3) he cannot by so doing alter the nature of his holding and convert it into an undertenure. Applying these principles, it will appear that the reclaiming lease-holder, who never himself cultivated and who sublet before he had held for twelve years, never was a ryot with a right of occupancy. He was and is a middleman; but what are the rights of a middleman, is not laid down in the law and must be very uncertain. If such lease-holder reclaimed and cultivated part of his lot and let the rest of it, are his position and his rights different in respect of the two portions? Can he be a ryot with a right of occupancy as to the former portion—unable to put off this character and convert himself into anything else but a ryot—and as to the latter portion a middleman with undefined rights and liabilities? This uncertain and inconsistent state of the law—built up of isolated cases dealing with individual rights, which were the complement of the rights of other persons not before the Court and not therefore duly considered—has led to much profitless litigation, and if allowed to continue must lead to still less satisfactory results. We think it therefore very expedient that the rights of the above classes of persons should be defined, and that some rules should be laid down, which will enable the Courts to say in all cases, who are tenure-holders or undertenure-holders, and who are ryots having a right of occupancy.

No clear line of distinction in the present law between Ryoti Holdings and Tenures or Undertenures § 20. After the fullest consideration of the whole subject, it appears to us impossible to discover any principle of distinction between ryots and tenure-holders or undertenure-holders, which will hold good universally or even in the large majority of cases. If cultivation be taken as the test whether the interest of a particular tenant is a tenure (or undertenure) or a ryoti holding, a talukdar, tenure-holder or undertenure-holder may cultivate land forming part of his taluk, tenure or undertenure, while the person commonly called a ryot may have sublet his entire holding and may not himself cultivate a single square foot. It is impossible therefore to say that, under all circumstances, the person who cultivates is a ryot, and the person who does not cultivate is a tenure-holder. If the receipt of rents from persons in the actual occupation of the land be considered the essence of a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, then we find ryots also subletting and receiving rents from their tenants in actual occupation. If hereditability be tried, the ryot's interest, the ryot's holding is hĕritable as well as the taluk. Is transferability the test? The ryot's jumma, independently of Acts X of 1859 and VIII of 1869, is commonly transferable by custom. Is saleability for its own arrears set up as the true distinction? The landlord of his own option brings ryots' holdings to sale in execution of decrees for rent, while a tenure or undertenure is not subject to the special law for the sale of undertenures for the recovery of arrears of rent due in respect thereof, unless it is so saleable by the title deeds or established usage of the country. If the quantity of rent paid by the tenant be supposed to be the point of distinction, then in Rungpore the rent of a jote varies from one rupee to half a lakh of rupees; while in other districts the rent of many taluks is but a few rupees. It is true that a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder is not liable to enhancement upon the grounds applicable to a ryot having a right of occupancy; but this distinction stops here, for the existing law does not define the grounds upon which the rent of a tenure or undertenure can be enhanced.

Quantity of land included in a single demise selected as the ground of distinction between Ryoti Holdings and Tenures or Undertenures.

§ 21. Under these circumstances we have come to the conclusion that the quantity of land included in a single demise will afford the most reasonable ground of distinction in the case of the class of tenants under discussion. Although at the present time, and under the altered condition of agricultural society, actual cultivation is no longer the essence of a ryoti tenure, we think that the original conception of a "ryot" was that he entered on the land for the purpose of cultivating it or bringing it under cultivation, either by his own personal labour, or by that of his servants or followers, or by means of persons who would occupy portions of the land, giving him in return a share of the produce according to the custom of the country, and afterwards a money rent when it suited both parties to make this arrangement. A ryoti holding being created in this manner, it did not cease to be such because the ryot subsequently sublet (there being nothing either in his contract or in the custom of the country to prevent him from doing so), and practically converted himself into a middleman, which is only another name for a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder. This process of conversion is going on, and has long been going on in every district of Bengal. That, while undergoing this process, there should be some doubt as to how far the tenant was to be governed by the incidents of the ryoti condition which he is leaving, or by those of the tenure condition to which he is approaching, is only natural. It is not possible so to adapt legislation as to make exact provision for this transition state: but looking at what we take to be the true conception of a ryot, and finding it impossible to ignore the custom of subletting, we think it reasonable to say that, whether a tenant subsequently sublets the whole or part of the land demised to him, it is not easy to presume that he had any intention of assuming the position and status of a ryot, if the quantity of land included in the original demise was so large that it could not be cultivated by a single tenant with such means and assistance as are usual in the country.

§ 22. We have therefore enacted (section 11) that, notwithstanding any custom or contract to the contrary, every person to whom more than one hundred standard bighas of land have been let by a single demise, otherwise than for a term or year by year, shall be deemed to be a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder within the meaning of sections 8, 9, and 10. If the lessor were a proprietor, the lessee will be a tenure-holder; if the lessor were a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, the lessee will be an undertenure-holder of the first, second degree, and so on. We have made possession necessary to complete the demise in order to avoid the risk of litigation, which, in this country, is so common when persons, out of possession but relying on titles that have to be established in courts of law before they can be enforced, grant leases to persons who are prepared to speculate in law-suits. We have made these provisions applicable to tenancies created as well before as after the commencement of the Act. We have further declared that every such tenure or undertenure, which has been held for twelve years, shall be permanent and transferable. The quantity of land selected for the purposes of these provisions is of course an arbitrary quantity; but we think it reasonable to draw the line at one hundred bighas, having regard to what has been said above. It may be well to observe that, although the person who holds more than one hundred bighas is made a tenure-holder (or undertenure-holder), whether he or his landlord wishes it or not, the person who holds one hundred bighas or less may be a tenure-holder or a ryot, as he and his landlord wish and agree.

Person to whom more than 100 bighas let by one demise to be a Tenure-holder or Undertenure-holder.

§ 23. We must content ourselves at this stage with stating the rule, which we propose to apply for distributing tenants such as those whom we have described under the heads of ryots and tenure-holders or undertenure-holders. The effect of this rule cannot be clearly shown or fully understood until we have explained the sections of the Bill which deal with the position and define the rights of ryots, and to these we shall come presently in due course, after noticing the provisions of Chapter I, which deals with tenure-holders and undertenure-holders. The present law provides that no dependent talukdar or other person, possessing a permanent transferable interest in land intermediate between the proprietor of an estate and the ryot, who holds his talook or tenure, otherwise than under a terminable lease, at a fixed rent which has not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, shall be liable to enhancement of such rent, anything in section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793 or in any other law to the contrary notwithstanding. We have retained these provisions, Provisions of Chapter I as to Tenure-holders and Undertenure-holders.

Those who have held at a fixed rent not changed since Permanent Settlement, not liable to enhancement.

substituting the words "tenure-holder or undertenure-holder" for the words above italicised. We have further made it clear that the Permanent Settlement intended is in all cases that of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, made in 1793; and not, as regards any district or area subsequently settled, the Permanent Settlement of such district or area.

Presumption of holding at fixed rent since time of Permanent Settlement from evidence of holding at such fixed rent for twenty years.

§ 24. We have also retained the presumption provided by the existing law that, when the rent of a tenure[4] is proved not to have been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of the suit, it shall be presumed that such tenure has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, or it be proved that such rent was fixed at some later period. It has been decided that this presumption may be rebutted by evidence of the creation of the tenure at some period subsequent to the Permanent Settlement, and we have introduced words to this effect into the section of the Bill. It has been pressed upon us that this presumption bears very hardly upon zemindars; that, if a tenure-holder succeeds in proving payment of rent for twenty years at the same rate, it is very difficult, if not impossible, for his landlord to rebut the presumption, which upon this is raised by the Act; that it thus becomes dangerous to allow tenure-holders to remain undisturbed paying the same rent for twenty years; and that zemindars are in consequence forced into litigation, lest their rights should pass away sub silentio. We have considered these arguments, and they have failed to convince the majority of us that a case has been made out for altering the law, especially now that more that twenty years have elapsed since the statutory presumption was created. If the law were now changed, the change would destroy titles which have become perfected by the presumption. The zemindar has it in his own power, by preserving a proper record of transactions affecting tenures not entitled to the benefit given by the presumption, to prevent prejudice to his own interests in the future. Looking at the question from another point of view, it is very much more difficult for a tenure-holder to prove a title from the time of the Permanent Settlement, than for the zemindar to prove that the tenure was created, or the rent fixed at a later period, or that the rent has been changed on one or more occasions since the Permanent Settlement. We have made one exception to the general operation of the presumption, that is to say, in the case of tenures in an estate not permanently settled. We have provided that these shall not be protected upon the expiry of a temporary settlement, unless the right to hold them for ever at a fixed rate of rent has been expressly recognized in settlement proceedings by a Revenue authority empowered by Government to make definitively or confirm settlements.

Exception in the case of tenures in estates not permanently settled.

Section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793. Dependent Taluks held from time of Permanent Settlement protected from enhancement save in special cases.

§ 25. We have retained the provisions of section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793—namely, that a dependent talukdar who has held his taluk since the time of the Permanent Settlement is not liable to enhancement except upon proving (1) that the proprietor under whom he holds is entitled to enhance either (a) by the special custom of the district, or (b) by the conditions under which the taluk is held; or (2) that the talukdar, by receiving abatements from his rent, has subjected himself to the payment of the increase demanded, and that the lands are capable of affording it: but we have extended these provisions to tenures and undertenures, and have added two Explanations. The number of tenures or undertenures, which can now be affected by those provisions and which have not fallen within the protection of the law explained in the two previous paragraphs, is probably very small. The first Explanation, taken from a decided case, is that, in order to entitle to the benefit of the section it is sufficient to show that a tenure was in existence at the time of the Permanent Settlement, and could have been registered in the Collector's office, even though it was not actually registered. The second Explanation is that an abatement of rent granted for land taken under the provisions of The Land Acquisition Act, 1870, is not an abatement within the meaning of the section, or, in other words, that the fact of having received such an abatement will not render a tenure-holder liable to enhancement of rent. We shall notice other points connected with the enhancement of rents of tenures, when we come to discuss the general question of enhancement.

§ 26. We have enacted that all permanent tenures shall be heritable, devisable, capable of being transferred by sale, gift or otherwise at the discretion of the holder, answerable for his personal debts and subject to the process of the Civil Courts We have here merely stated what we believe to be in accordance with the accepted usage of the country. We have included in the Chapter which treats of tenures so much of the old Regulation VIII of 1819, as relates to the legal incidents of a patni taluk. We have here made no change, but we have expressly declared a patni taluk to be devisable, in order to obviate any doubt which might arise upon this new enunciation of the old law.

Permanent tenures and undertenures declared heritable, devisable, transferable, &c

§ 27. Chapter II of the Draft Bill is concerned with ryots who are entitled to hold lands at fixed rates of rent. We have here reproduced, without any very material alteration, the existing law, which is closely analogous to the law applicable to tenure-holders who have held since the time of the Permanent Settlement—making it clear here also that what is intended is the Permanent Settlement of 1793. We have added a few Explanations, which embody the result of decided cases, declaring, in the first place, that, when rent is payable in kind, a fixed proportion of the produce is a fixed rate within the meaning of the law; and in the second place, that the operation of the rule as to holding at a fixed rate is not affected by the fact of the land having been demised to different persons, or transferred, or separated from other land which with it formed a single holding, or amalgamated with other land into one holding, so long as the rate of rent has not been altered by any of these transactions. The observations made above in § 24, as to the twenty years' presumption are applicable to the case of this class also. We have further provided, in accordance with the decided case, that this presumption may be made even though the ryot do not plead in express terms that the land has been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement at a rent which has not been changed since that time, if only there is nothing in his statements inconsistent with its having been so held. We have here also made an exception similar to that explained above in § 24 to meet the case of lands in temporarily settled estates.

Law as to Ryots entitled to hold at Fixed Rates, reproduced without material alteration.

§ 28. We now come to Chapter III, which treats of ryots who have acquired a right of occupancy. We have provided (section 19) that, subject to the provisions of section 11 (see above § 22), any ryot, who for a continuous period of twelve years has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, land, and paid rent for the same, has a right of occupancy in such land. The words "as a tenant" have been introduced to show that holding or occupation as a trespasser will not create the right. We have seriously considered whether the acquisition of a right of occupancy should not be limited in all cases to the actual cultivator of the soil. Having examined the subject in all its bearings, we have come to the conclusion that such a rule, if laid down, would exercise a disturbing influence, the immediate benefit to be derived from which appears doubtful to some of us, and the ultimate consequences of which none of us can pretend

A Right of Occupancy in land how acquired.

Trespasser cannot acquire.

Actual Cultivation not necessary to its acquisition to forecast with any reasonable certainty. If all korfas or under-ryots were converted into ryots having or able to acquire a right of occupancy, some of us think that the rate of rent for occupancy ryots would be forced up to such a point, that a right of occupancy would be valueless, as it would become necessary to convert the superior ryot into a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, and to take the present korfa rates of rent as the measure of the rates to be hereafter payable by the occupancy ryot. We have therefore decided to make no material change in this respect in the present law, which gives the right of occupancy to a ryot who "cultivates" or "holds," merely substituting for "cultivates" the more precise expression "occupies and cultivates." The term "holds" will of course include, as now, a ryot who has sublet in bhaŋjote or otherwise. We may observe that the law, as thus expressed, is in harmony with what we have stated to be our conception of the term "ryot" (ante § 21).

Ryot must continue to pay rent, as well as hold or occupy.

§ 29. We have made it necessary that the ryot should continue to pay the rent, as well as to hold or occupy the land. This appears to us to be just and fair; and it follows the rule laid down by the Privy Council in the somewhat analogous case of land which is wholly submerged by a river, the property in which will continue to belong to the former proprietor, if he continues to pay revenue therefor, so that he will be entitled to land formed again on the same site. We have followed the present law in providing that, in the computation of the twelve years, the time during which his father or any other person, from whom a ryot has inherited, has held the land may be added to the time during which the ryot has himself held; but that, in the case of a transfer otherwise than by inheritance before the completion of the twelve years, whether with or without the consent of the landlord, the time during which the transferrer has held may not be added to the time during which the transferree has held, unless the landlord has expressly consented in writing that it shall be so added. According to the decisions, the two periods cannot be added together to make up the period of twelve years. We have modified this by saying that they may be added when the landlord expressly consents in writing. Following the Case-law, we have provided that a ryot is not precluded from acquiring a right of occupancy by the fact that the landlord under whom he has held for the whole or part of the twelve years had no title; or by the fact that such landlord was a coparcener.

Calculation of time when same ryot has not held or occupied during the whole twelve years.

Right of Occupancy may be acquired under landlord who has no Title, or who is a Coparcener.

§ 30. In order to obviate doubts that may arise, and some of which have arisen upon the present law, we have expressly declared by way of explanation that a right of occupancy may be acquired (1) by a person holding immediately under a mukarraridar or istemrardar; (2) by a person holding immediately under the tenure-holder created by the Act (section 11) when more than one hundred bighas have been let under a single demise; (3) by a person occupying land immediately under a ryot having a right of occupancy, when the land is held otherwise than for a term, or year by year; and (4) by a person occupying khamar, nijjote, or sir land immediately under a proprietor, when such land is held otherwise than for a term, or year by year. The first of these four cases is new: a majority of us think that the interest of a mukarraridar or istemrardar so far partakes of the nature of a tenure, that the person holding immediately under him should be allowed to acquire a right of occupancy. The second case is necessary to complete the status of what we may call the "statutory tenure-holder." The third and fourth cases merely follow the existing law, as interpreted by the Courts.

Cases of possible doubt in which it is expressly declared that a Right of Occupancy shall be acquired.

§ 31. We have also thought it expedient to state by way of explanation certain cases in which a right of occupancy cannot be acquired. A proprietor, tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, mukarra- ridar, istemrardar, or ijarahdar cannot acquire a right of occupancy in land which forms a portion of his estate, tenure, undertenure, mukarrarí holding, istemrari holding, or ijarah, respectively. Although an ijarahdar cannot as such acquire a right of occupancy in land included in his ijarah, yet he will not lose a right of occupancy previously acquired in land, merely because such land is included in a subsequent ijarah. A right of occupancy cannot be acquired in land held for a term or year by year under an occupancy ryot; or in khamar, nijjote, or sír land held for a term or year by year under a proprietor. Finally, a tenant may not acquire a right of occupancy, if at the time of being first let into possession he have made with his landlord a written and registered contract that no such right shall be acquired. As to this last case we may observe that, although we think it inadvisable to prevent parties altogether from contracting themselves out of the operation of the Act, we think it desirable to require in all cases the clearest evidence of their intention to do so.

Cases in which a Right of Occupancy cannot be acquired.

§ 32. We have defined (section 20) the legal incidents of a right of occupancy—and first of all we have declared it to be transferable by private sale or gift, and devisable by will; and we have enacted that the consent of the landlord shall not be necessary to the validity of any such transfer or devise. It is not necessary to recapitulate here the arguments for and against transferability which have been fully stated in the Appendix to the Digest. We think it sufficient to say that, having carefully considered these arguments, a majority of us are in favour of transferability. But, although we allow the ryot to sell his holding, we prohibit him from mortgaging it. We think that this will most effectually prevent the ryot and his holding from falling into the hands of the mahajan; and that the danger, which some persons apprehend, of mahajans becoming the owners of occupancy holdings, while the quondam ryots will remain on the land in a degraded condition of serfage, will thus to a considerable extent be obviated. We believe that a ryot, whom no persuasion will induce to sell his land, can very easily be led to borrow a few rupees upon the security of it for a wedding or a sradh, or for some purpose of emergency. A bad season, sickness, or not uncommonly his own improvidence prevents him from repaying the loan, which is rapidly swelled by interest. He thus gets more and more into the mahajan's hands; and the hope of extricating himself and recovering his position finally disappears altogether, the result being that the mahajan gets a decree, brings the holding to sale, and purchases it himself for much less than its real value.[5] A mahajan, who will readily lend a little money on a ryot's holding in the hope of ultimately realizing a very considerable profit by foreclosing his mortgage, will have no desire to purchase the same holding at anything like a reasonable price with the intention of becoming a capitalist farmer. In order to render effectual the prohibition against mortgaging, we have enacted that any such mortgage shall be void to all intents and purposes, and that no Court of Justice shall take cognizance thereof or give effect thereto in any judicial proceeding whatever (section 20, clause (d)): and we have further enacted that a right of occupancy, though saleable in execution of a decree for its own rent, shall not be saleable in execution of any other decree (section 20, clause (a)).

Legal Incidents of a Right of Occupancy.

Transferability.

Occupancy Holding may not be mortgaged.

§ 33. We have declared that a right of occupancy shall be heritable according to the law of inheritance to which the tenant is

Occupancy Holding heritable according to the law of inheritance of the ryot:

[5] Because the sale is held at a distant Court-house and not on the spot, where the value of the holding is known; and because persons are unwilling to compete with the man of money, who has a lien on the holding. If the provision of the last Code of Civil Procedure, which forbids the decree-holder to bid without the special leave of the Court, were so applied in these cases as to make it the mahajan's interest that outsiders should bid, there is little reason to doubt that better prices would be realized.

subject, but that no division of the holding or of the rent shall be made so as to be binding on the landlord without his written consent (section 20, clause (c)). This is merely an authoritative enunciation of what is accepted as customary law. When a ryot, who has a right of occupancy, dies leaving no heirs and having made no will, we have enacted that the landlord shall be entitled to take possession of the land. This also is in accordance with the present practice.

Lapses to landlord on death of ryot without heirs.

§ 34. As an occupancy holding has been made transferable and saleable in execution of a decree for its own rent, the necessary consequence is that a ryot ought no longer to be ejected from such a holding for non-payment of rent. We have accordingly enacted (section 20, clause (e)) that no ryot may be ejected from land in which he has a right of occupancy, whether for non-payment of rent, or other cause not being a breach of a stipulation in respect of which such ryot and his landlord have contracted in writing that the ryot shall be liable to ejectment for a breach thereof. When a ryot is ejected on account of a breach of any such stipulation, we have provided that he shall be entitled to compensation for improvements under certain provisions which will be noticed hereafter. Mr. O'Kinealy is strongly opposed to forfeiture for breach of the conditions of a lease; and would allow equitable relief in all cases in which the landlord is not actually endamaged, or the security for his rent impaired. Courts of Equity have always regarded conditions for forfeiture with disfavour, proceeding on the principle that they are intended to secure the payment of the rent and to prevent injury to the landlord's reversion; that, while the landlord is entitled to avail himself of his legal right to effectuate these ends, he ought not to be permitted to go further and use it for purposes of oppression or harsh or vindictive injury. Mr. Field so far agrees with Mr. O'Kinealy as to think that the point ought to be considered, if the Bill comes before the Legislature in its present shape.

Ryot may not be ejected from occupancy holding for non-payment of rent or other cause.

Forfeiture for breach of conditions of lease.

§ 35. We have enacted (section 21) in accordance with the opinion of the majority that, when the rent payable by a ryot for an occupancy holding is paid in kind, and the ryot receives no assistance from his landlord towards producing the crop, such rent shall not exceed fifty per centum of the gross produce in the case of staple crops; that in the case of special crops, if the landlord and tenant have contracted in writing for any particular share of the gross produce, such contract may be enforced, but in the absence of any such contract the landlord shall not be entitled to recover any other or greater rent than twenty-five per centum of the average annual value of the gross produce. These provisions, as drafted, will operate upon existing rents payable in kind so as to reduce them in those cases in which more than half the gross produce in now taken. Mr. Dampier is opposed to any interference with existing rents. In many parts of Behar and elsewhere the landlord now receives nine-sixteenths of the gross produce. Mr. Dampier and Baboo Pyari Mohun Mukherji consider this proportion to be so well-known and so prevalent, that it should not be altered by the Bill, at least so far as concerns existing tenancies. It appears to the other members of the Commission that one-half the gross produce is the very largest portion that a landlord should be allowed to take; and they regard the impoverished condition of the ryots, from whom more has been taken, as a strong argument for putting in force a rule which should have been suggested to landlords by that moderation and forbearance, which were made express conditions of the Permanent Settlement. Mr. O'Kinealy would limit the maximum rent payable in kind by an occupancy ryot to 40 per cent. or two-fifths of the gross produce.

Rent payable in Kind not to be more than half the gross produce in the case of Staple Crops.

Rule in case of Special Crops.

§ 36. The distinction between tenure-holders and ryots in the present law is not very clear or very well marked, as we have had occasion to remark. We have, we hope, made it somewhat clearer and better marked in the Draft Bill. We are satisfied that it would not be possible to demarcate exactly the boundaries between these two interests without the risk of injury to vested rights, and possibly the further risk of making greater confusion than that which we have sought to remove. It may, however, be useful to point out certain points of distinction which arise upon the sections of the Bill in their present form. (1)—An occupancy holding may not exceed one hundred bighas in size: a larger area becomes a tenure or under-tenure by the operation of section 11. A tenure or undertenure may be of any size. (2)—When there is no occupancy right previously existing, a right of occupancy is acquired by holding or by occupying and cultivating. The law is silent as to the acquisition of such a right by contract. A tenure or undertenure can be acquired by contract; and this is the usual mode. It may also be acquired by holding for twelve years, but only in the case of land exceeding one hundred bighas in area and let otherwise than for a term, or year by year. (3)—Both the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder and the occupancy ryot can sublet. In the absence of a registered contract to the contrary, the undertenant in all cases acquires a right of occupancy against the former; but against the latter he acquires such right only when the land is sublet otherwise than for a term, or year by year. (4)—Both can sublet, but the rents of the undertenants of the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder cannot be enhanced so as to exceed twenty-five per cent. of the average annual value of the gross produce, while the rents of the undertenants of the occupancy ryot may be raised to any amount which they will pay and not give up the land, or, if such undertenants have acquired a right of occupancy, to thirty per cent. of such average annual value (section 23, clause (c)). (5)—The rents of both the tenure-holder (or undertenure-holder) and the occupancy ryot may be enhanced, but the grounds and limits of enhancement are different. (6)—Both may cultivate, but the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder acquires no right of occupancy by his cultivating. (7)—Both interests are heritable, but if the tenure-holder dies without heirs, his tenure escheats to Government; while, if the occupancy ryot dies without heirs, his landlord can resume the land. (8)—A tenure or undertenure can be taken in execution for any debt. An occupancy holding can be sold in execution only of a decree for arrears of its own rent.

Points of distinction according to the Bill between Tenures or Undertenures and Occupancy Holdings.

§ 37. By far the most difficult question presented for our consideration in preparing an amended Law of Landlord and Tenant for these Provinces is that of the enhancement of rent. As soon as the Legislature recognized a right on the part of any class of tenants to be protected against arbitrary eviction by their landlords, it became absolutely necessary to provide by legislation some means whereby the rents payable by such tenants may be settled and determined. It has been contended by some very able authorities that the only safe means of settling rents is by the unfettered action of the principle of competition, and that any attempt on the part of the Legislature to set aside this principle, and substitute for it any other principle, must be mischievous in its consequences to the community concerned. It is no part of our present duty to examine what general truth there may be in this contention as applied to those countries, whence have been derived the data upon which the existing system of Western Political Economy is based; but that this contention should not be accepted as applicable to the state of things in this country, and should not be allowed to influence our legislation upon the subject in hand, we entertain no doubt. In order to make the reasons for Enhancement of Rent the most difficult question for consideration: how this question has became a necessary one this opinion more easily intelligible, it is necessary to consider what Rent is in these Provinces—and this is a subject of some difficulty, owing in part to the inherent ambiguity of language, when the same term is applied to several things, the substance of which depends upon different conditions.

Different theories of Rent.

The Ricardo Theory.

§ 38. The theory of rent, first put forward at the close of the last century and revived some twenty years later by eminent Political Economists, is that rent is what land yields in excess of the ordinary profits of stock. It is assumed that no land will be cultivated which will not yield the ordinary profit derivable from capital employed in other undertakings. If land yields less than this, capital will not be employed in cultivating it; if it yields more, the excess will be appropriated by the owner of the land, who will otherwise withhold the use of this natural agent. As the prices of produce rise, the profits from capital employed in agriculture increase. Land, which in one year yields no excess over and above the ordinary profits of capital, may in the following year yield some excess, and so pay rent. Of all the land in cultivation that which is yielding no excess must necessarily be the worst, worst, i.e., as regards inferiority of soil or situation, or proximity to markets, or facility of communication, &c. When such worst land begins to yield an excess, to pay a rent, land of a still inferior class will be cultivated and will then be the worst land in cultivation, superseding what has just commenced to pay rent. Thus the worst land for the time being under cultivation is the standard for estimating the amount of rent which will be yielded by all other land that pays rent. This theory presupposes capital, presupposes capitalist farming conducted with an immediate view to obtaining from capital invested in agriculture the ordinary rate of profit afforded by capital invested in other undertakings. It depends upon certain laws respecting profits, wages, prices, which, as one of the greatest Political Economists has pointed out, are true only so far as profits, wages, and prices are regulated by competition—only so far as the persons concerned are free from the influence of any other motives than those arising from the general circumstances of the case, and are guided as to those by the ordinary mercantile estimate of profit and loss. There are in these provinces no capitalist farmers. We do not include under this denomination persons who have embarked capital in producing for export silk, indigo, tea, or similar articles other than food. There is little or no capital employed in agriculture, unless we include under this term the commonest agricultural implements, the seed grain necessary to produce the next year's crop, the food necessary for the cultivator's subsistence till the next harvest, and it may be, a small stock laid by against the year of famine that is sure to come round in the cycle of seasons. The immediate object of cultivation is subsistence, not profit on capital. There is no wages fund: there are no labourers paid from capital. There are practically no manufactures, no non-agricultural industries, no great cities of work, where a surplus rural population can find employment. To such a state of things, to a community so circumstanced, the theory of Rent propounded by Mr. Ricardo and other Political Economists of the same school has no application; and any adjustment of the relations between landlords and tenants in these provinces, based upon this theory, must, we apprehend, involve serious risk of error.

Theory of Rent propounded by the more modern Political Economists.

§ 39. A more modern school of Political Economists, dissatisfied with the previous theory, would discard all reference to degrees of productiveness, would abolish the standard obtainable from the worst land under cultivation, as being misleading and practically useless to inform a disputing landlord and his tenants how much rent exactly each holding should pay; and would define rent simply as surplus profit—that is, the excess of profit after the repayment of the whole cost of production, beyond the legitimate profit, which belongs to the tenant as a manufacturer of agricultural produce. According to their analysis no landlord or tenant ever thinks of, or enquires after, the worst land under cultivation and which pays no rent, in order to ascertain what is the proper rent for any other land. But an intelligent tenant about to take land will carefully endeavour to inform himself—1*st*, as to the quantity and quality of the produce that he can fairly reckon on obtaining from the land; 2*nd*, as to the expenditure necessary to raise this produce; and, 3*rd*, as to the price which this produce will realize when raised. In order to ascertain the first particular, he will consider the quality of the soil, the climate, the water-supply, the possibility of improvement by manuring or other means, &c. To inform himself on the second point, he will see if the soil is light and friable or heavy and stiff, and so on—whether his plough will require two horses or four—whether the manure necessary to good cultivation is to be had in the vicinity or must be brought from a distance—what is the rate of wages for local labour, &c. With respect to the third item he will inquire as to the best neighbouring markets and the prices usually there current, and he will have to consider the distance of the land from the market and the cost of conveying the produce from the fields where it is grown to the mart where it can be sold. Having ascertained all these particulars, the intending tenant will be in a position to calculate the balance of profit which he may expect to have left to him after defraying the cost of cultivation, and this will determine the rent which he can pay for the use of the land. Thus rent depends upon the prices realized by agricultural produce compared with the cost of its production; or, in other words, rent exists because a selling price is found, which yields a surplus, an excess of profit beyond what the tenant requires. This theory is a very much more practical one than the former one, but it also proceeds upon the supposition that capital is employed, that money wages of labour are paid, that the produce is converted into money, that an account is kept of outgoings and incomings, and an accurate balance struck. It can have no proper application where all these circumstances do not exist.

§ 40. Let us now see what is the state of things in this country, what are the conditions to which any possible theory of Rent must be fitted in order to make it suitable to the people. We know that according to ancient and established usage the dues of Government from the land in India have from time immemorial consisted of a certain proportion of the annual produce of every bigha. Such was the rule in the time of the old Hindú Rajas, when Government in all or most cases collected these dues direct from the cultivators. The Mahomedan Government retained this rule with some modifications of detail in carrying it into effect. It is not very material whether the proportion of the produce so taken by the State be called rent, or revenue, or a tax; nor is it necessary to our present purpose to determine whether the property in the soil belonged to the State, or to the cultivators, or in coparcenary to both. Once land was cleared and brought completely under cultivation, this proportion of the produce was taken in every case. The ryots cultivated for subsistence, not with any immediate view to profit. Whether more land should be taken into cultivation depended, not upon whether profits had risen, but upon whether the land already in cultivation was sufficient to raise food for the people. The State demand in no way depended upon profits, and was in no way regulated by any calculation of the total value of the produce and the cost of producing it. The proportion taken by the Government was determined by the Conditions to which any theory of Rent must be adapted in India.

Government itself; and, as the ryots were well off or the reverse according as Government took less or more, and left them more or less, the well-being and comfort of the people depended upon arbitrary discretion exercised with despotic power. We know from history that while the earlier Hindoo Rajas took only one-sixth, as much as a half was taken in later times; and, discretion continuing to be the measure of exaction, the very barest subsistence was in some places and on some occasions left to the cultivators of the soil. If any calculation was made for the purpose of fixing the Government demand, it was too often a calculation of what was the least that could be left to the cultivators to enable them to live and produce the next crop There are some who think that "custom," even in those days and in the absence of law authoritatively promulgated by a Legislative Department of the State, regulated the share of the produce taken from the ryots; but it has been well remarked that custom might equally well be pleaded in justification of every species of exaction and oppression.[6] Our predecessors in fact (to quote the language of the Board of Commissioners of 1818[7]), do not seem to have admitted as a principle any other general limit to the Government demand than the amount which the cultivators could afford to pay, and the established Government share too often exceeded this limit.

The Mahomedan System.

§ 41. Mahomedan law recognized only two persons as having an interest in the soil, namely the Government and the cultivator. There can be no doubt that the cultivators had rights in the land. What exactly these rights were has been warmly disputed; and we shall not attempt to define them or fix their limits. The ryots cultivated the land and paid khiraj to Government. This khiraj was a share, a proportion of the produce, which was paid either in kind or in the money which represented its commuted value which the Government itself fixed. As long as the khiraj was paid, the cultivators were left in possession of the land, though this possession as well as all the other terms of the relation depended upon the will of a despotic ruler. Failure to pay the khiraj had for its consequences punishment and the loss of all rights in the land. Such is the general outline of the relation between the two parties having an interest in the soil. Any attempt to express it in terms taken from a wholly different system of interests or rights, and embodying different collections of ideas must fail to convey an accurate conception of the Mahomedan system and may be misleading. If it be asked—is khiraj rent or does it include rent? the answer must be in the negative, if by the term "rent" is meant rent according to either of the theories of rent propounded by European Political Economists. It was no part of the Mahomedan system that any person should stand between the Government and the actual cultivators and intercept a portion of the khiraj paid by the latter; but partly from the difficulty, if not impossibility, of collecting the whole of the khiraj by State agency, when the boundaries of the empire were enlarged by conquest; partly from the fact that in some of the conquered provinces persons were found in possession of various rights superior to the cultivators, and it was difficult to get rid of these persons, while their services and local experience could well be utilized for the collection of the khiraj; and partly from other causes which it is not here necessary to detail,—there sprang up a middle class intermediate between the State and the cultivators, and who as contractors or farmers or having some pre-existent rights which the Mahomedan Government did not care to investigate or define, collected the khiraj of large tracts from the cultivators and paid it to Government. Being placed in a position of advantage,[8] the members of this middle class grew rapidly into importance, and in the decadence of the Mahomedan empire acquired considerable power. While using the whole authority of the State to exact by way of khiraj all that could be got from the cultivators, they used their utmost ingenuity to keep as much of this as they could for themselves, and send as little of it as possible to the Government treasury.

State of things how modified by the policy of the English Government.

§ 42. Such was the condition of affairs to which the East India Company succeeded; and one of the first problems presented to the new English Government for solution was the settlement and definition of the rights of this Middle Class. How this great question was debated; how it was determined by declaring the zemindars who composed this class to be proprietors; and how the wisdom of this determination has ever since been questioned—are now portions of the constitutional history of the Anglo-Indian Empire. The zemindars, being thus confirmed in their position, continued to collect the khiraj from the cultivators and pay it over to the State. The terms of the settlement and the influence of English ideas worked, however, some important changes. In the first place the Government limited and fixed for ever the amount of khiraj which it was to demand at the hands of the zemindars. The zemindars being declared to be "proprietors of the soil," "landholders," "landowners," it followed as a natural consequence from this and from the introduction of English ideas that the ryots have come to be looked upon as their tenants; the payments made to them by the ryots in kind or in money came to be regarded as rent; and the payments made by the zemindars to the Government were termed revenue. When the governing race, with whom rested the executive power and the administration of justice, approached the subject of the relation of zemindars and ryots with those ideas of the English law of Landlord and Tenant formulated in the Regulations and present to their minds, the result, almost inevitable, was that the former state of things underwent considerable change.[9]

Ryots had rights at the time of the Permanent Settlement, although they were not then fully ascertained or defined.

§ 43. That at the time of the Permanent Settlement the ryots had rights, was admitted then and has never since been denied, at least by persons possessed of information on the subject. These rights were, however, very uncertain and indefinite.[1] That they were so, is not surprising, when we reflect upon the arbitrary nature of the preceding Government, upon the want of exact rules of law, and the non-existence of a trained judiciary proceeding by fixed methods of enquiry and determination. The Government of 1793 were unable to ascertain and define these rights fully and accurately. The most able members of that Government felt and expressed their inability to do so with the means of information then at their disposal.[2] They were also apprehensive lest enquiries into these rights should excite suspicion in the minds of the zemindars that the assessment of the revenue was not really meant to be permanent:[3] and they indulged a strong hope that

[8] This must not be understood to convey the idea that all these persons were novi homines. Many of them were Rajas or otherwise men of position and family before the Mahomedan conquest.

[9] To show the influence of English ideas we may refer to Mr. Shore, whose view of the position was so clear and able. Although he "admitted, on the ground of precedent, the right of the Government to interfere in regulating the assessment upon the ryots," he objected "to the policy and propriety of this interference without evident necessity." "The regulation of the rents of the ryots," he observed, "is properly a transaction between the zemindar or landlord and his tenants, and not of the Government; and the detail attending it is so minute as to baffle the skill of any man not well versed in it." Minute of the 18th June 1789, para. 433.

[1] "With respect to the ryots, their rights appear very uncertain and indefinite."—Mr. Shore's Minute of the 18th June 1789, para. 388.

[2] See the Minute of the Earl of Mairn, dated 21st September 1815, paras. 143-144.

[3] "It may be urged that, unless Government intends to raise the revenues of the lands in future, any further knowledge of the value of them beyond what we at present possess is unnecessary; and to demand the accounts of it would only tend to excite suspicions in the zemindars that the present assessment would not be permanent. The Court of Directors are themselves satisfied upon this point, and discourage the idea of local investigation into the value of the lands, directing that when the zemindars and ryots would, like landlords and tenants in England, adjust all matters in dispute between them by contract. But, although the Government of 1793 did not then fully ascertain and define the rights of the ryots, it saved these rights in express terms, and reserved to itself the power to ascertain and settle them at any future time at which it saw fit to do so.[4] The exercise of this power inherent in Government is of course in no way dependent upon this express reservation, the value of which consists in its being a deliberate recital and acknowledgment of the existence of such rights at that point of time.

And these rights were expressly saved

Right to have proportion of produce payable by ryot determined by Government § 44. Whatever difference of opinion there may be as to the other rights which belonged to the ryots in 1793—and at this distance of time it is natural that there should be differences of opinion about what, being then uncertain, was not at the period made definite, and much of the evidence of which has since perished in the lapse of nearly a century—we think that there can be no doubt as to one right—the right, that is, to have the proportion of the produce payable by the ryot determined by Government. Such, beyond dispute, had been the practice of the Hindoo and Mahomedan sovereigns[5]; and the Government of 1793, though it created the zemindars "proprietors," using a term which seemed to convey the absolute disposing power of an English landlord, never intended to destroy this right or to abdicate the function cast upon it by the ancient law of the country.[6] The existence of any rights of possession in the ryots would have been incompatible with an arbitrary power in the zemindars to fix the rents; and thus both the necessity of the thing and the ancient law of the land required that this power should be exercised by the Government.

Such rents as are payable by the ryots to the zemindars could not properly be left to be settled by competition, and have not been settled by Custom.

§ 45. We entertain no doubt that the ryots of 1793 possessed substantial rights: but even if they had no rights whatever, we think that Government could not consistently with the proper discharge of its functions, leave the settlement of what we shall now call the rents payable by the ryots to the uncontrolled influence of competition.[7] There is in these provinces no capitalist farmer tribute of each zemindar is fixed, he shall remain undisturbed in the administration and enjoyment of his estate, and be assured that, as long as he pays his stipulated revenue, he shall be subject to no scrutinies or interposition of the officers of Government, unless where a judicial process may become necessary to adjust claims between him and tenants, or talúkdars, or partners of the same zemindari."—Mr. Shore's Minute of 18th June 1789, para. 473. I of 1793. Revenue letter of 15th January 1819, para. 89, where it is said:—"It is also a circumstance which is not to be overlooked that, although so many years have elapsed since the conclusion of that settlement, yet no resort has been had to the exercise of the power we then expressly reserved of interfering for the purpose of defining and adjusting the rights of the ryots. We conclude that the supposed difficulty or impracticability of the operation was the cause of this non-interference." See also Revenue letter from Bengal, dated 17th July 1818, paras. 146-148.

[6] "In regard to proprietary right to the land, the recent enquiries had not established the zemindar on the footing of the owner of a landed estate in Europe, who may lease out portions, and employ and dismiss labourers at pleasure; but on the contrary had exhibited, from him down to the actual cultivator, other inferior landholders, styled talúkdars and cultivators of different descriptions, whose claim to protection the Government readily recognized, but whose rights were not, under the principles of the present system, so easily reconcileable as to be at once susceptible of reduction to the rules about to be established in perpetuity. These the Directors particularly recommended to the consideration of the Government, who in establishing permanent rules were to leave an opening for the introduction of any such in future, as from time to time might be found necessary to prevent the ryots being improperly disturbed in their possessions, or subjected to unwarrantable exactions. This, the Directors observed, would be clearly consistent with the true practice of the Mogul Government, under which it was a general maxim that the immediate cultivator of the soil, duly paying his rent, should not be dispossessed of the land he occupied; 'and this,' they further observed, necessarily supposes that there were some limits by which the rent could be defined, and that it was not left to the arbitrary determination of the zemindar.'—Here follows the passage quoted in the previous Note.—Fifth Report.

"We consider it equally a principle interwoven with the constitution of the different Governments of India, that the quantum of rent is not to be determined by the arbitrary will of the zemindar."—Revenue letter from Bengal, dated 7th October 1815.

[7] The late Mr. John Stuart Mill defined cottier tenure as embracing all cases without exception in which the labourer makes his contract for land without the intervention of a capitalist farmer, and in which the conditions of the contract, especially the amount of rent, are determined not by custom between the landowner and the labourer; the produce of the land is divided between two classes, the landowners and the labourers, the latter sustaining the character of capitalist to the limited extent to which capital enters into the question at all. In such a state of things rents can be settled only by (1) custom, or (2) by competition, or (3) by law. Custom has not as yet settled rents in the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, owing in part to the disturbing influence of our own legislation, especially the Revenue Sale Law; and their settlement cannot be left to the slow operation of a principle, which has hitherto failed, and of the future efficacy of which there is no present prospect. Then as to competition—while population is sparse and land is plenty; when the supply of cultivators is limited and the demand for them active—the ryots have the best of the position, and can secure favourable terms. As population increases, the tables are gradually turned, and where cultivation of the soil is the only means of subsistence, the ultimate effect of unrestricted competition must be that the landowners can dictate their own terms to the ryots, who must either accept them or starve.[8] The whole agricultural population are thus reduced to a condition of misery and degradation but by competition. In a very instructive chapter of his work on Political Economy, in which he draws a parallel between the tenure of land in Ireland and India, he says:—"The produce, on the cottier system, being divided into two portions, rent and the remuneration of the labourer, the one is evidently determined by the other. The labourer has whatever the landlord does not take; the condition of the labourer depends on the amount of rent. But rent, being regulated by competition, depends upon the relation between the demand for land and the supply of it. The demand for land depends on the number of competitors, and the competitors are the whole rural population. The effect therefore of this tenure is to bring the principle of population to act directly on the land and not, as in England, on capital. Rent in this state of things depends on the proportion between population and land. As the land is a fixed quantity, while population has an unlimited power of increase, unless something checks that increase, the competition for land soon forces up rent to the highest point consistent with keeping the population alive. The effects therefore of cottier tenure depend on the extent to which the capacity of population to increase is controlled, either by custom, by individual prudence, or by starvation and disease."

"It would be an exaggeration to affirm that cottier tenancy is absolutely incompatible with a prosperous condition of the labouring class. If we could suppose it to exist among a people to whom a high standard of comfort was habitual; whose requirements were such that they would not offer a higher rent for land than would leave them an ample subsistence, and whose moderate increase of numbers left no unemployed population to force up rents by competition, save when the increasing produce of the land from increase of skill would enable a higher rent to be paid without inconvenience—the cultivating class might be as well remunerated, might have as large a share of the necessaries and comforts of life on this system of tenure as any other: they would not, however, while their rents were arbitrary, enjoy any of the peculiar advantages which metayers on the Tuscan system derive from their connection with the land: they would neither have the use of a capital belonging to their landlords, nor would the want of this be made up by the intense motives to bodily and mental exertion which act upon the peasant who has a permanent tenure. On the contrary, any increased value given to the land by the exertions of the tenant would have no effect but to raise the rent against himself either the next year or at farthest when his lease expired. The landlords might have justice or good sense enough not avail themselves of the advantage which competition would give them; and different landlords would do so in different degrees. . . . . The only safeguard against these uncertainties would be the growth of a custom insuring a permanence of tenure in the same occupant without liability to any other increase of rent than might happen to be sanctioned by the general sentiments of the community. . . . . When the amount of rent is not limited either by law or custom, a cottier system has the disadvantages of the worst metayer system. . . . . When the habits of the people are such that their increase is never checked but by the impossibility of obtaining a bare support, and when this support can only be obtained from land, all stipulations and agreements respecting the amount of rent are merely nominal The competition for land makes the tenants undertake to pay more than it is possible they should pay, and when they have paid all they can, more almost always remains due." It would seem to follow that if custom or the habits of the agricultural population are not strong enough in such a community to keep rents within such a limit as will allow a reasonable standard of comfort for the cultivators of the soil, the Legislature ought to impose such a limit; and that, failing this, a state of wretched cottierism must be the result when the pressure of population has reached a certain point.

[8] The difference between Behar and the Eastern Districts of Bengal appears to illustrate remarkably these two stages of competition. At the time of the Permanent Settlement Government, while declaring its right to do so, forbore to determine the rents payable by the ryots to the zemindars, and in fact left them to be settled by the parties themselves as best they could. (See Revenue Letter of the 15th January 1819, paragraphs 46-54.) In Behar the population had come to press closer upon the land than in Eastern Bengal. The landowners accordingly had the advantage in the former province, and were able to maintain the system of payment in kind and push rents up to a point which leaves the cultivator but a bare subsistence; while in the latter part of the country, unreclaimed land being abundant and cultivators scarce, the ryots had the advantage and were in consequence able to procure land on very favourable terms. Thus various tenures at low rents came into existence in the Eastern Districts, to which we find nothing similar in Behar. It must not, however, be supposed that these tenures, if rents be left to unrestricted competition, will act as a complete barrier to the normal tendency. The tenure-holders have rapidly become middlemen, and, where population has begun to press on the land, have sub-let. The sub-letting has in many places reached several degrees. It may be that the existence of these intervening interests, which are readily bought and sold, and the possession of which is much coveted, will exercise a healthy influence in creating a better standard of comfort; but, although the condition of things at their present stage appears fair, it is impossible not to dread a decline into cottierism hereafter, especially as there are no checks upon which must seriously reflect upon the Government under which such a state of things has come to pass. The land of a country belongs to the people of the country: and, while vested rights should be treated with all possible tenderness, no mode of appropriation and cultivation should be permanently allowed by the Ruler, which involves the wretchedness of the great majority of the community, if the alteration or amendment of the law relating to land can by itself or in conjunction with other measures obviate or remedy the misfortune.

Theory of Rent applicable to Bengal and Behar.

§ 46. Whether then the question be examined in the light of the ancient constitutional law of the country, or with reference to the high duty and obligation devolving upon Government to promote the happiness and prosperity of the people, the conclusion is the same, namely, that the ruling power ought to determine the rents payable in these provinces by the ryots to the zemindars. In this view the appropriate theory of Rent is, not that it is the surplus profit of capital applied to agriculture, or that it depends immediately upon, or is regulated by, the profits of capital; but that it is such a proportion of the produce of the soil, deliverable in kind, or payable in money, as the Government may from time to time determine shall be delivered or paid by the cultivators to the zemindars or those to whom the zemindars have transferred their rights. If it be asked on what principle Government should determine this proportion—what share shall be considered fair and equitable—our answer is—such a share as shall leave enough to the cultivator of the soil to enable him to carry on the cultivation, to live in reasonable comfort, and to participate to a reasonable extent in the progress and improving prosperity of his native land.

In applying this principle, no single standard possible for all parts of these Provinces.

§ 47. When we come to apply this principle to the solution of the question before us, the first reflection that occurs to us is, that there is not presented to us a tabula rasa on which we may inscribe a single rule or set of rules which shall be of uniform application. The progress of nearly a century has created relations of persons and conditions of things, to sweep away which for the purpose of establishing an ideal normal standard would involve an interference with vested rights and a disturbance of existing associations, which would irritate the feelings of those concerned, and render the remedy worse than the disease. Were we to set up any single average standard of comfort for the whole agricultural population of these provinces, we might find that, while it placed the Behar ryot in a position of ease calculated by the sudden change to engender sloth rather than energy, it fell short of the existing requirements of members of the agricultural community in some other parts of the country. The inequalities in existing rents are due to causes which have their roots in the past history of the best part of a century. The density or sparseness of population in different districts; the quantity of unreclaimed land available to meet the requirements of a growing community; the energy of particular landlords; the proximity or distance of courts or Magistrates able to repress this energy, when it exceeded the bounds of law; the force of resistance offered by the ryots, varying widely in different parts of the country; the indolence of other landlords; the frequency of Government management; the irregular incidence of famine; the unequal opening up of the country by railways and roads, in respect of which all districts do not yet enjoy equal facilities; the action of the great rivers—these the increase of population. To show that this apprehension is not without foundation, we quote the following passage from a letter of the pleaders of the Rungpore Courts, written in 1876:—

"The demand for land is, indeed, very great, and as the cultivating class is steadily increasing the competition for obtaining land, and with it the rate of rent is also on the increase. So strong is the desire for land on the part of this class, that they sometimes bid for it at a rate of rent which would leave them no margin for profit. The zemindars in their turn do not fail to take advantage of this state of things to increase their revenue."

and other causes have produced imparities, of which we think that account must be taken in any endeavour to settle rents or the enhancement of rents by legislation. We are therefore all agreed that existing rents should be taken as the basis of operation; in other words, that no attempt should be made to replace these existing rents immediately by any new and uniform standard; and that, apart from the usual and recognized grounds of abatement, there exists no necessity for reducing rents generally in any part of the country. At the same time we think that, in regulating future enhancement, regard may reasonably be had to existing inequalities, and that landlords, who have already benefited more than other landlords by the favourable action of some of the causes above enumerated, are not entitled to an equal accession of advantage in the future.

§ 48. This brings us to the important question—can a simple uniform rule be laid down for enhancement? We think this question must be answered in the negative. The subject has been fully considered by able and practical minds upon more than a single occasion; and none of these deliberations has produced any simple, practicable, rule which, applied to all conditions and under all circumstances, will afford satisfactory results. In taking up the question anew, and seeking for such a rule, we have examined all that has been done by those who have preceded us in the quest, and we have made what further search we could in the light of their knowledge and experience; and the ultimate conclusion at which we have arrived is that no such rule can be devised or formulated.[9] It would of course be possible to lay down some rule, which, like Draco's Penal Code, might be embodied in a single section and apply to all cases; but, when it came to be put into operation, it would work so much injustice to both parties that each would be equally eager for its repeal.

No simple uniform rule of Enhancement possible.

§ 49. The uncertainty of agricultural experience is very great in every country, but probably in no country is it so great as in India. This increases the difficulty of providing against fluctuations of season by average calculations; and the consequences of failure in those calculations is terribly aggravated through the absence of capital, by drawing upon which the agriculturist is in other countries enabled to tide over an abnormal succession of bad years, hoping to replace what is so consumed by increased energy when circumstances are more favorable. The fertility of land depends in India, as in other countries, upon the nature of the soil and subsoil; and there are in these provinces numerous varieties of both, well understood by the ryots. In settlement proceedings all over India, from before Akbar's time down to the present period, we find these varieties mentioned and taken into account. Some soils are cultivated with much less labour than others; and this is a very important consideration, where so much has to be done by manual labour, where the race of cattle which supplements the exertions of man is deficient in muscle and vigour, and where the absence of capital and the nature of the country prevent the introduction and use of more effective agency. The rich alluvial chur[10] yields a bumper crop in return for the mere exertion of sprinkling the seed on its surface; while the stiffer soil of the higher mâts[11], baked during the burning months when the heaven is as brass and the earth as iron, and scarcely moistened by the tardy rains, is with difficulty turned up by the straining oxen and the toiling ploughman to be ready in time for the rice seedlings, which one by

Immense varieties in the subject-matter on which Rent depends

[9] "Rents vary in every village, not merely with the diversities of soil and crops, but also with reference to the caste of the cultivators. The inference to be drawn is, therefore, that no common rule can be laid down, and that the failure of past attempts to settle the matter is chiefly to be attributed to the desire which the public officers have had to render that simple and uniform, which is in its nature various, and to their impatience of the detailed investigation by which alone accuracy can be secured"—Resolution of Government of India, dated 1st August 1822.

one have to be planted out through the full expanse of every field. Assuming land to be unlimited in its supply, the average labouring family can in the former case cultivate more land and raise more produce than in the latter case. If half the produce be given as rent, it makes an enormous difference to those who have to subsist on the remainder, whether the half of a hundred measures be given or the half of three hundred. Where the size of the holding is not limited by the amount of labour necessary for cultivation, it may be limited by the pressure of population and the extent of uncultivated land still available. Thus, similar results are produced by different causes. Then, we have differences in situation almost infinite. Where rent is payable in money, part of the crop must be sold to obtain the coin with which the ryot may discharge his liability. If the mart is near, the labour and cost of carriage are inconsiderable, and the ryot can easily go to market when prices are most favourable; but these become a serious item, when the produce has to be carried over roadless plains and across unbridged nullahs to a distant and uncertain staple. Some fields are near the village and the threshing-floor, and no sooner is the crop ripe than it is garnered, while others lie in a distant mát and their produce has to be carried on bullocks' backs or men's heads, many an ear falling by the wayside, to where it can be threshed and winnowed, and this perhaps after the thieving birds and hungry cattle, or it may be the wild hogs from the neighbouring jangal have sadly diminished the husbandman's profits, while he is waiting his turn for the busy oxen or the help of his neighbours. Here the water is deficient for the amun paddy, and there the aus is drowned by an unforeseen inundation. In one part of the country land is sufficiently plentiful to allow a fourth to lie fallow every year, while in another part the soil never gets rest, and there is no manure to keep up its strength, even the droppings of the cattle being collected and dried for fuel. In one pergunnah, the adult population are healthy and strong to labour; in another, the climate is so bad that one-third on an average are down with fever and ague, and the remaining two-thirds in various stages of convalescence lack the physical vigour necessary to successful toil. In one district the cultivators of the soil have to support but one set of landlords; in another, they have half a dozen or even more, middlemen under different names and with various rights having come between the zemindars and the ryots. These are some of the many causes upon which depend the numerous inequalities and variations[1] in the subject-matter with which rent is concerned in these provinces. No simple rule of uniform application can allow for all these: and, unless they are allowed for and taken into account in individual cases, there cannot be fair and equitable rates of rent, for, in order to be really so, they must be fair and equitable in the concrete as well as in the abstract. The conclusion then to which we feel guided upon the whole subject of settlement of rents and enhancement is, that the safest course for the Legislature is to lay down certain broad lines upon which the officers of Government (whether in the Judicial or Executive Department) shall proceed in this matter—at the same time providing certain positive checks, which experience has shown to be necessary in order to prevent sudden and great changes in the respective conditions of landlords and tenants in Bengal.

General conclusion upon the above premises

Existing substantive law of Enhancement of Rent

§ 50. We pass from this analysis and discussion of the general subject to the particular provisions which we believe can safely and beneficially be made for the enhancement of rent in these provinces. It will be convenient to state in the first place the existing law upon this important matter. (1) There are no express provisions for the enhancement of the rent of Tenures or Undertenures; and the want of a definite enactment on this point has undoubtedly given rise to much expensive litigation. (2) The rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy can be enhanced upon any one or more of the following three grounds, viz. (a) that the rate of rent paid by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the places adjacent: (b) that the value of the produce or the productive powers of the land have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot: (c) that the quantity of land held by the ryot has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him. As a necessary preliminary to the enhancement of the rent of an occupancy ryot, a notice of enhancement must be served on him before the close of the year preceding that for which the enhanced rent is claimed, and the failure to serve such notice is fatal to the demand of enhancement. (3) In the case of ryots not having a right of occupancy, that is, all ryots who have held for less than twelve years, there are no express provisions for enhancement, and the practical result is that, if any such ryot refuses to pay an enhanced rent demanded of him, he is evicted by his landlord; though, if he is allowed to remain in possession, more than a reasonable rent cannot be recovered from him.

Proposed rules of Enhancement for Tenures and Undertenures

§ 51. Taking these three branches of the subject in order, we have in the first place provided for the enhancement of the rent of Tenures and Undertenures, by enacting that in any case in which such rent is liable to enhancement (there are cases in which it is not so liable) it may be enhanced up to the limit of the customary rate payable by persons holding similar tenures or undertenures in the vicinity, or, where no such customary rate exists, up to such limit as to the Court shall appear fair and equitable but so that the profit of the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder shall not (in the absence of certain special circumstances to be noticed hereafter) exceed thirty per centum of the balance which remains after deducting from the gross rents payable to him the expenses of collecting such rents—see section 9 of the Bill. It may be observed that according to the rule contained in section 8 of Regulation V of 1812, ten per cent. of the balance just mentioned was allowed to the tenure-holder. This section was repealed by Act X of 1859, but by some oversight, no provision was substituted by this Act, though the principle as being fair and equitable in itself and usual by reason of the provisions of the Regulation was on several occasions acted upon by the Courts after that Act was passed. It appears to a majority of us after careful consideration that the limit of ten per cent. is too low and we have accordingly allowed a higher limit, namely, that of a maximum not exceeding thirty per cent. in ordinary cases.[1] We have provided for the special and well-known case of jangalburi holdings by enacting (section 12) that, when more than one hundred bighas of land have been demised for reclamation purposes, more than half being at the time unreclaimed, and the whole having been subsequently reclaimed, the rent of the tenant may not be enhanced so as to leave him a profit of less than twenty per cent. of the net balance abovementioned, and the Court may allow him such profit in excess of twenty per cent. as to it appears fair and equitable. In order to prevent these new provisions from working hardship by any sudden and great change, we have annexed the following checks—(a) the enhanced rent shall not in any case be more than double the previous rent: (b) the Court may direct that the enhancement shall take effect gradually or, in other words, that the rent shall increase yearly during any number of years not exceeding five, until the limit of the enhancement allowed has been reached: and (c) that rent once enhanced shall not be altered for ten years unless on account of alluvion or diluvion—(section 9 of the Bill). We have further settled a doubtful question by expressly enacting (section 8) that, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, every tenure-holder and undertenure-holder shall be liable to pay additional rent for land gained by alluvion, and shall be entitled to abatement of rent for land lost by diluvion. We here follow a principle, recognized by the Government in dealing with the cognate subject of revenue, and in accordance with justice, equity, and good conscience. We have elsewhere (section 18) applied the same principle to ryots entitled to hold land at fixed rates. We think it unconscionable that, when the land has ceased to exist, out of which issues the benefit in which landlord and tenant participate, the tenant, in addition to losing his own share of this benefit, should have to make good the landlord's share, thus conferring upon him the advantage of insurance without the payment of a premium. Then, as it is reasonable that he who seeks equity should do equity, it follows that the tenant, who has been relieved from the payment of rent for land which he has ceased to enjoy, should pay rent for additional land added to his enjoyment. We shall have occasion to return to the question of enhancement of the rent of Tenure-holders and Undertenure-holders in connection with another portion of our subject.

Grounds of Enhancement of Rent of Occupancy Ryots retained, but an attempt made to improve them.

§ 52. Coming now to the second branch of this portion of the subject, namely, the enhancement of the rent of Occupancy Ryots, we have after due consideration decided to retain substantially the grounds of enhancement to be found in the existing law. We have, however, endeavoured to benefit by the experience of the last twenty years so as to make these grounds clearer and more readily intelligible to the parties affected by them. In doing this we have found it expedient to split up the second ground into two. As re-arranged in section 22 of our Draft Bill, the grounds of enhancement now stand thus:—

(1) that the rate of rent paid by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity;

(2) that the quantity of land held by such ryot has been shown by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him;

(3) that the productive powers of the land held by such ryot as compared with such powers at the time when the rent was fixed, or at any subsequent time, have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot and from causes not merely temporary or casual;

(4) that the prices of produce in the locality, or at the usual markets, as compared with similar prices at the time when the rent was fixed or at any subsequent time, have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, and from causes not merely temporary or casual.

The first of these grounds corresponds with the first ground in the present law; the second, with the third; and the third and fourth with the second. We shall make some observations as to each in the above order.

First ground of Enhancement, that rent paid is below the prevailing rate, presents no real difficulty § 53. In the first ground we have substituted the words "in the vicinity" for "in the places adjacent." We think that the proof will be facilitated by enlarging the area, from which the materials for evidence may be taken. We have added some Illustrations to indicate the meaning of the words "the same class of ryots" In other respects this ground of enhancement has not presented any difficulties; and the cases do not show that, so far as it is concerned, any amendment of the law is very urgently required. The idea of a pergunnah rate of rent, a prevailing rate paid by tenants of the same class within a certain tract of country, has long been familiar to the people, and where such a rate is generally known and acknowledged, a landlord has seldom, in the absence of other disturbing circumstances, to put a ryot into court in order to get him to pay rent according to this rate. The germ of dispute and litigation does not lie here. The landlord, who seeks to put an individual ryot on an equality with his brethren, has public opinion generally in his favour, for human nature in Bengal, as elsewhere, is envious of an individual better off than the rest of the community, and takes pleasure in the assertion of the principle of equality when violated by the superior condition of a neighbour. It is when the landlord seeks to raise the rate for all ryots, when all are threatened with a common misfortune, that unanimity for self-defence and combination against the general enemy rule the village counsels, and leave the zemindar no hope of success without some such coercion as the law permits.

Enhancement on the ground of greater quantity of land being found on measurement to be in ryot's possession. This is not Enhancement, properly speaking Cases under this head distributable into two classes.

§ 54. The second ground is, in our opinion, misnamed a ground of enhancement. If the quantity of land held by a ryot is found upon measurement to be greater than the quantity for which he has been paying rent, and if he is compelled to pay rent for the excess, the whole rent payable by him is increased, but the rate of rent payable is not increased, and the term 'enhancement' might well be confined to this latter increase. The cases under this head may, broadly speaking, be divided into two classes. The first class includes cases of encroachment—where the ryot has encroached upon the uncultivated or unoccupied land of his landlord and has surreptitiously enlarged his holding. These cases are of less frequent occurrence in the more settled parts of the country, where there is little or no waste, where the fields are tolerably well demarcated by ails or low boundaries, about a foot and a half high, and every field has a well-known owner. In less populous districts, where cultivation is in patches, and a considerable portion of land lies fallow or waste, the opportunity and temptation to encroachment are greater, and the bonâ fide cases of this class are consequently more numerous. Under the second class come those cases in which there is little pretence for saying that any encroachment has really taken place, but a measurement or the threat of a measurement is used as a means of obtaining an increase of rent, which the landlord thinks he ought to have and which he sees no other way of obtaining. There is a dispute about the proper length of the measuring pole, and the landlord, having made the measurement with a pole of his own choosing, hopes to get this dispute settled in his favour; or he trusts to various well-known devices of the measuring Amin to make the land more than it really is. Even where the landlord is too honourable to resort to such practices, his amlah make rich gains out of a measurement; and the ryot, who would refuse to satisfy their cupidity would find the area of his holding considerably enlarged in the measurement papers, while, if he can pay sufficiently handsomely, he finds no difficulty in getting it untruly understated. Then it may be that rent has not usually been paid at so much per bigha, the practice being for a jama or holding, roughly described as containing so many bighas, to be let at a lump sum; and the landlord taking this rough description as an accurate one calculates the rate of rent, and being able to show that the holding contains more land than is shown by this rough description claims extra rent for the excess. The absence of written leases makes this too commonly possible. We have endeavoured to provide for some of these cases by Illustrations. The best remedy for the perversion of this portion of the law will be by rendering the results sought to be achieved by such perversion more easily achievable in a legitimate manner and upon the grounds legitimately applicable.

§ 55. The third ground of enhancement is that the productive powers of the land have increased. Now they may have increased (1) by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, (2) by the agency or at the expense of the landlord, or (3) without the agency or expense of either. In the first case the ryot is not liable to have his rent enhanced; such is the effect of the words "otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot." If the ryot has improved his holding, has rendered his land more productive by expending his labour or capital upon it, the benefit of the improvement will be his and his alone. Thus the law encourages thrift and industry by guaranteeing the enjoyment of their fruits to the persons who exercise these qualities. Between the second and third cases the present law makes no distinction, and it gives the whole of the increase to the landlord, except in cases of customary rents, in which the rule is limited by the principle of proportion enunciated in the Great Rent Case. In our Draft Bill (section 23) we have given the whole of the increment in the second case to the landlord, for the same reasons for which the existing law gives it to the ryot in the first case. As to the third case, it may fairly be said that, however just it may be to give the whole increase to the landlord, when the whole of it is due to his agency or expenditure, the justice of doing this is not so apparent where the landlord has contributed nothing to bring about this increase, and in this respect he and the ryot stand upon equal ground. If it be admitted that the ryot has certain rights, has a certain interest in the land as well as the zemindar, why, it may be asked, should not the former as well as the latter participate in the benefit which accrues to the common property from external sources, over which neither has any influence or control? Accepting the justice of this argument, we have thought it reasonable and equitable in this case to divide the increment equally between the landlord and the tenant as a general rule. It may however be observed that, when the increment exceeds the old rent, the effect of one of the positive checks which we have provided, namely that no enhanced rent shall be more than double the former rent, may be that the ryot will receive more than half of the benefit (see clause (b), section 23 of the Bill). In order to ascertain the measure of the increase, it is necessary to take some point of time in the past between which and the present the comparison may be made. The want of a definite rule on this portion of the subject has been greatly felt. We have provided that the present, i.e. the increased productive powers of the land may be compared with the productive powers of the same land as they were when the rent was originally fixed, or as they were at any subsequent time. The first part of this rule requires no explanation and no comment. A comparison between the productive powers as they now are and the same powers as they were when the rent was first fixed is fair to both parties; but the principle cannot be left depending upon a rule so limited, because in a large proportion of cases the productive powers of the land at the time that the rent was fixed cannot be ascertained. It may have been so long ago that no living evidence is now forthcoming; or it may be that some such evidence is to be had, but that it is utterly unreliable, being merely oral testimony, given long after about that which at the time received no particular attention, and partaking of the usual worthless nature of such evidence. In any such case, if the principle of comparison is to be put in force at all, it becomes necessary to compare the present with a point of time subsequent to that at which the rent was originally fixed. If the productive powers at such subsequent time were less than when the rent was first settled, the calculation will be to the ryot's disadvantage, as the increase upon the original productive powers will appear greater than it really has been. If on the other hand the productive powers at such subsequent time were greater than they originally were, the increase will appear less than it really has been, and the ryot will be benefited to the detriment of the landlord. As a matter of fact, we think that neither contingency is very likely to have happened to any great extent in the majority of cases, and that no great injury is likely to be done to either party. We are agreed that when enhancement of rent is allowed on the ground that the productive powers of the soil have increased, there ought to be a reasonable prospect that the causes to which such increase is due are likely to be permanent in their effect and not merely temporary and casual; and we have added to this ground of enhancement words to this effect.

Cause of increase of productive powers ought to be not merely temporary or casual

§ 56. The fourth ground of enhancement is that the value of the produce has increased. It appears to us that this ground of enhancement is altogether distinct from an increase in the quantity of the produce due to an improvement in the productive powers of the soil. We have in consequence entirely separated these two grounds. In stating this fourth ground, we have, in the first place, substituted the term "price," which is equivalent to money value, for "value," which includes other values besides money-value. We have thus made the language more precise without altering what we understand to have been the intention of those who framed Act X of 1859. The price of agricultural produce has increased enormously in these provinces during the last twenty or thirty years. This increase is due to two principal causes. In the first place, even while the relative value of the precious metals which are used for the coinage of a country remains the same, there is a constant tendency[3] for the money-value or price of agricultural produce to rise, as population increases and improvement progresses. The Province of Bengal has been rapidly progressive in every way during the last century of peace and security. Population has increased. A large and still expanding export trade has brought the demand of other countries to bear upon prices in addition to the enlarged demand of the province itself. In the second place the coinage consists of silver, and the relative value of silver has been gradually decreasing. The price or money value of produce has therefore risen. We are of opinion that the landlord should have a share in the increase of price due to the above two causes. It is not possible to separate the respective effects of these causes and so calculate how much of the increase is due to each. The landlord ought, however, according to our view, to participate in the benefit arising from each. The first cause, i.e., the general progress of the community, makes the land more valuable as a natural agent for the production of food. The increase of value, if not taken by the State—and the effect of the Permanent Settlement is that the State does not take it—must go to those whom the law allows to keep all that interest in land which constitutes property in land. Now the persons, who in these provinces have this property in the land under the existing law, are the zemindars and the ryots, not the ryots only. Therefore the zemindars, having a share in that complete interest which constitutes property, ought to have also a share in that increase of value which is an accession to that interest The effect of the second cause is to diminish the value of the rent payable in silver in relation to all commodities, which the landlord can obtain for the money which he receives as his rent. This money therefore represents a smaller share of the produce than it did before the relative value of silver fell. It is but equitable, therefore, that the money rent of the landlord should be increased so as to make it represent a share of the produce equal to what it represented when the rent was originally fixed. Then there are other considerations. The benefit accruing from the operation of the first cause is limited by the quantity of the produce which the ryot sells or barters away. In respect of the portion retained for consumption by himself, his family and his cattle, and for seed, there is no direct benefit from the rise in price, because this portion does not come into the market. Here the first cause differs from the second, and it differs also from the third ground of enhancement, under which the excess quantity of produce obtained from the increased productive power of the soil represents so much clear benefit. From this analysis it will appear that the component elements of this ground of enhancement are sufficiently complex; and, looking at the above considerations, it is not very easy to say how the increment arising from increase of price ought to be divided so as to make the division fair to both parties.

Examination of increase of Price.

[3] Political Economists lay down the proposition that while the rate of profit and interest has a downward tendency in a progressive community, rent (i.e. in their sense of the term 'rent') on the contrary tends to rise incessantly—that in fact all progress in wealth and population tends to a rise of rents—See Mill's Political Economy, Vol. I., p. 386; Systems of Land Tenure in Various Countries p. 221. Where capitalist farming prevails, any fall in the usual rate of profit and interest must operate directly to increase rent: but, apart from this cause, rent increases in a progressive community. An advancing population has a tendency to create a larger demand for food, and the price rises in consequence.

§ 57. Here, as in the case of the third ground, it is possible to conceive that the increase of price may be brought about (1) by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, or (2) by the agency or at the expense of the landlord, or (3) without the agency or expense of either. In the first case, as the law now stands, the rent of the ryot is not liable to enhancement. He receives the full benefit of the increase in price which he has himself brought about. That is the effect here also of the words "otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot," and we do not propose to alter this. At the same time it is not easy to suppose a case in which the ryot could effect an increase in the price of the produce solely by his own agency or at his own expense. In so far as better prices may be due to improved means of communication, which have been effected by the Road Cess or Public Works Cess funds, we have provided that the ryot shall pay so much less enhanced annual rent as is equal to the annual sum which he has contributed to these funds. In the second case, or where the increase of price is due entirely to the zemindar's agency, or has been brought about altogether at his expense, it appears to us on the whole to be reasonable that he alone should receive the entire benefit. A case of this sort might occur where a zemindar had opened a new hât and improved the means of communication between it and the lands of his estate. In the third case, which is by far the most common, the case, that is, of an increase of price brought about by neither the zemindar nor the ryot, but by general causes, the reasoning used above (§ 55) in respect of the similar case arising upon the third ground of enhancement appears to have equal application. Having given the whole subject in its diversified details what consideration we have been able, a majority of us think that the fairest general rule here also will be to divide the increment equally between the landlord and tenant. Messrs. Mackenzie and

Increase of Price may be due to the agency (1) of the ryot, or (2) of the landlord, or (3) of neither. Who should receive the benefit in each case

O'Kinealy would in this case, as well as in the analogous case under the third ground of enhancement, give two-thirds of the increment to the ryot, and the remaining one-third to the landlord.

§ 58. As to the period of past time between which and the present the comparison should be instituted, and as to the causes of the increase being not merely temporary or casual, the remarks above made upon the third ground of enhancement apply. Then as to the markets, the prices of which should govern, we have provided that the prices in the locality or at the usual markets are to be taken. There ought to be sufficient evidence of these prices procurable from the local mahajans and their books or from other sources. We have further facilitated the proof by providing for the preparation and publication of annual official Price Lists, the object and use of which we shall explain hereafter.

Comparison to be made between prices of what times and places.

§ 59. The next question which has engaged our attention in connection with this part of the subject is the very important one of the species of produce which shall be taken for the calculation of prices. Shall these prices be calculated for all the crops actually grown on the lands, as well for special crops requiring special care and cultivation, as for the ordinary food crops of the district. During the period antecedent to British rule it was usual to vary the rent with the crops cultivated. Section 56 of Regulation VIII of 1793 enacted that, "where it is the established custom to vary the pottahs for lands according to the articles produced thereon, and while the actual proprietors of land, dependent talukdars or farmers of land and ryots in such places shall prefer an adherence to this custom, the engagements entered into between them are to specify the quantity of land, species of produce, rate of rent, and amount thereof, with the term of the lease and a stipulation that, in the event of the species of produce being changed, a new engagement shall be executed for the remaining term of the first lease, or for a longer period if agreed on; and the event of any new species being cultivated, a new engagement with the like specification and clause is to be executed accordingly." It can well be understood that a despotic Government or its more despotic subordinates observed carefully any circumstances that would enable the cultivators to pay more than had previously been obtained from them. Where the share of the State was taken in kind, a less proportion was always accepted for special crops in consideration of the greater care and expense necessary to their production. Where the share of the State had been commuted to a money payment, very high rates were imposed on the lands on which special crops were grown. These rates were too often regulated more with reference to the aggregate value of the gross produce, which was very considerable, than upon a due allowance for the cost of production, which was a very much larger item in proportion than in the case of ordinary crops. In reasonably good years the ryot was able to pay and make a good profit; then came a year of failure, it may be when he had made a larger venture than usual, and the little capital vanished, while the high rates had to be paid, and perhaps the mahajan's assistance had to be called in for this. The memory of the year of failure survived, kept green by the mahajan's long surviving claim, while the years of success from which little or nothing was saved were soon forgotten. It thus happened that the exaction of very high rates for fields devoted to special cultivation discouraged and retarded agricultural improvement. It may be well to draw here a distinction between higher rates for superior land capable of producing superior crops and therefore suited for these special crops—such rates being paid without direct reference to the particular crops actually produced from year to year—and higher rates assessed with direct reference to the crops annually grown. The latter are sure to run much higher than the former, and in a bad year the loss and the cause of it are felt more distinctly. This distinction and the bad effects of levying a high rate directly on the crop were understood many years ago. As early as 1792 the Government wrote as follows in the Revenue Despatch of the 12th December of that year:—"Apprehending that the present great demand for sugar and the consequent rise in the price of it might induce some of the landholders to exact from their ryots an enhancement for the ground appropriated to the cultivation of the cane; and, as such shortsighted policy would have discouraged the extension of the cultivation of it, and consequently prevented the establishment of a trade in sugar between this country and Europe, we thought it advisable to issue a notification to the landholders, prohibiting any enhancement of the rent of the sugarcane lands, upon the ground of its being repugnant to the usage of the country as well as detrimental to their own interest and that of the State at large." We find the Directors writing out in 1837 to the following effect:—"It is the productive power of the land, and not its actual produce, that should be taken as the guide in making the assessment. By this mode the best description of encouragement is given to the cultivator to extend cultivation and raise crops immediately beneficial and profitable to himself, and such a system, we have on a former occasion observed and are still of opinion, would not ultimately be found detrimental to the interests of the State." We do not therefore propose to interfere with any existing classification of lands based on their superior quality or capability of producing special crops, but we think that, in regulating enhancement of rent on the ground of rise of prices, account should be taken of the ordinary or staple crops only. A different rule would in our opinion tend to discourage the cultivation of new and valuable species of production, and so prevent agricultural improvement. By allowing the Board of Revenue to declare from time to time, what shall be taken to be the staple crops for particular areas, an opportunity will be afforded of making any new crop a staple as soon as its cultivation has been thoroughly and generally established. As to special crops, such as betel-leaf, tobacco, sugarcane, and such like, we think that, as they are grown only occasionally or in small quantities, and require particular attention and involve special expenditure, they ought not to be considered in settling enhanced rents. We may further observe in support of this view that, in commuting the Tithe into a money payment in England, staple crops only were taken into account, the staples selected being wheat, oats, and barley.

Prices of what Crops to be taken as the basis of calculation

Question of what landlords shall be allowed to enhance rents.

§ 60. With reference to the question of what landlords should be allowed to enhance rent, we were much impressed with a suggestion that ijarahdars should not be allowed to enhance the rents of the ryots holding land within the area of their ijarahs. On careful consideration it has, however, appeared to a majority of us that, as the zemindar's proprietary interest may by law be leased either for a term or in perpetuity, it would not be quite consistent to say that the lessee may not take one particular portion of this interest, if the zemindar chooses to convey it. In proposing a procedure for the enhancement of rents, we have, however, felt ourselves at liberty to say that a mere lease-holder, of whose interest less than ten years remain unexpired, shall not have equal facilities in this respect with landlords having a permanent interest. To take away from zemindars under all circumstances the right of giving their ijarahdars authority to enhance rents would be to take from them something which they already have, would curtail the proprietary interest in the form in which it has existed since the time of the Permanent Settlement, and might interfere with vested rights. In giving a new facility however we see no reason why it should not be withheld from a class, whose existence does not contribute to the welfare of the agricultural community.

§ 61. Having thus indicated the broad substantive principles which should in our opinion regulate the enhancement of rent, we turn to the positive checks which we think should be applied in order to prevent hardship as the result of the operation of these principles. And first we have provided that, when enhancement is allowed on the ground that the productive powers of the soil have increased, or on the ground that prices have risen, the enhanced rent shall in no case be more than double the former rent. It usually happens that the causes which here create the basis of the increase are gradual in their operation, and the cultivator gradually gets accustomed to the enjoyment of the increase. To have to give up and hand over to his landlord any part of what he has appropriated and learned to regard as his own, seems hard to a person, who, like an uneducated cultivator, is more prone to consider the present grievance than the past benefit which he has been enjoying. If so much is suddenly taken as to effect a sensible change in his position and standard of comfort, a feeling of injury is excited, which it is impossible to say has not some foundation in reason. If an European were required at a few months' notice to pay four times the rent which he had been in the habit of paying for his house, he would resent it as an intolerable grievance; and if he were compelled to keep the house and pay the quadruple rent, he would regard it as legalized tyranny. Now a ryot may not be positively compelled to keep his land, but he cannot give it up because it is to him the means of subsistence, and he feels as much bitterness as the European at being forced, upon a few months' notice, to pay treble or quadruple his former rent. We think it reasonable therefore that no ryot's rent should be advanced per saltum to more than double: and as there may be cases in which even this increase would involve very great hardship, we have further allowed progressive enhancement, that is, by a gradual yearly increase for any number of years not exceeding five until the limit of the enhancement allowed has been reached. We have allowed progressive enhancement in all cases in which the Court or the Collector sees fit—cases, that is, falling under all four grounds of enhancement. The double limit we have restricted to the third and fourth grounds. If a ryot has been paying less than the prevailing rate for his land or if he has encroached and has been cultivating excess land without paying rent for it, the circumstances may be such that a very large and sudden increase would involve hardship or even put it beyond his power to pay, and so his rent may well be raised gradually to what he ought to pay; but there is not any argument that we can see in support of the limit of double rent not being exceeded in these cases. Indeed in the case of encroachment, it would be a positive encouragement to wrong-doing on a large scale, as all the land taken beyond a certain quantity would be acquired rent-free. We have enacted (section 23 clause (c)) that, when the rent of an occupancy ryot is enhanced upon the first, third or fourth ground, the enhanced rent shall not be more than one-fourth of the average annual value of the gross produce; or, when such occupancy ryot holds under another ryot who has a right of occupancy, not more than three-tenths of such average annual value. A proposition that in no case should the rent of a non-occupancy ryot exceed forty per cent. or two-fifths of the annual average value of the gross produce was lost by a single vote. Finally, we have provided that when rent is enhanced on the third or fourth ground, and a Table of Enhanced Rents prepared by the Collector, such Table shall be binding on both parties for ten years. This will not prevent enhancement of rent for land gained by Enhanced rent in certain cases not to be more than double the former rent. Positive checks upon Enhancement.

Progressive Enhancement.

alluvion or abatement of rent for land lost by diluvion during this decennial period: and upon this subject the remarks already made (§ 51 above) are applicable.

Right to enhance how far allowed to be affected by contract.

§ 62. How far the right to enhance given by the law should be allowed to be affected by contract between the landlord and tenant is a point upon which we have found it desirable to lay down a two-fold rule. We have provided (section 24) that, when a ryot holds under a written lease for a term certain which has not expired, his rent shall not be liable to enhancement during such unexpired term. We have also expressly provided that there shall be no enhancement when a ryot and his landlord have contracted that such ryot's rent shall not be enhanced. It may be thought that in the latter case, and indeed in the former case also, unless the language of the writing was extremely vague, the ryot is sufficiently protected. But we have thought it well, here as elsewhere, to leave as little as possible to construction, and to use express language so as to avoid doubt.

Procedure for Enhancement. Importance of this part of the subject.

§ 63. We now come to consider the procedure by which effect may be given to the above recommendations concerned with the substantive law. We entirely agree in the view advanced by the then Government of India in their Revenue letter, dated 7th October 1815:—"Whatever rights the ryots may be declared in theory to possess, the practical benefits arising from any measure of that sort will be very limited, until means shall be devised, on the occurrence of disputed claims, of ascertaining with accuracy and facility the rent which they should individually pay, and an authority created for deciding on all such cases with the utmost promptitude." In treating this part of the subject also we have found it expedient to consider the four grounds of enhancement separately. Before, however, proceeding to analyze the subject in connection with these grounds it will be important to mention that we have dispensed with the notice of enhancement which is required by the present law, and which was also required by the old Regulations in force before 1859. Such a large percentage of enhancement cases have failed because it was not found that the notice had been served, or because the notice was defective in form, that it has appeared to us highly expedient to do away with a detail, the practical result of which has been to delay and impede a decision of the real question at issue between the parties. We have accordingly made the institution of the enhancement suit to be notice to the tenant. Under the existing law, the enhancement notice must be served, in districts or parts of districts where the Fasli year prevails in or before the month of Jeyt, and in districts or parts of districts where the Bengali year prevails in or before the month of Pous. The very proper and reasonable object of this is, that the ryot may know the fact of increased rent being claimed in such time as will enable him to relinquish the land before the end of the agricultural year, if he is unwilling to hold it at an increased rent. If the notice is not served in or before the month of Jeyt or Pous, it will not affect the rent of the following year. We have effected the same object by requiring the plaint, in order to affect the rent of the following year, to be presented, in districts in which the Fasli or Umli year prevails, in or before the month of Baisakh, and in districts in which the Bengali year prevails, in or before the month of Aughan, i.e. one month earlier than the time for service of the present notice. This will enable the summons in the suit to be served at or before the time at which the notice is now served, and the tenant will therefore have an equal facility to relinquish the land before the close of the agricultural year, if he is unwilling to continue to hold it at an increased rent—(section 96 of the Draft Bill).

Notice of Enhancement dispensed with. Reasons for the change

First ground of Enhancement—Cases concerned with, may be conveniently tried by what tribunal

§ 64. Directing now our attention to consider the subject of procedure with reference to the grounds of enhancement singly, and taking the first ground in order, viz., that the rate of rent paid by the ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity—this is a ground upon which a zemindar in the great majority of instances finds it necessary to proceed against a few individual ryots merely. There is no reason why the Civil Court should not try the questions which have to be decided between the parties; and, as the lands in each case must be different, there is a certain advantage in trying the individual cases separately. Even where the cases exceed a few, as the prevailing rate must be paid by the majority, the ryots against whom the zemindar requires to proceed must yet be a minority of the whole number. Here, if there be no real dispute as to the prevailing rates, and if the question is as to the applicability of these rates to the particular lands held by each ryot, the cases are well tried separately by the Civil Court. If on the other hand there is little dispute as to the nature and classification of the lands held by each ryot, and the main question at issue in all the cases is the prevailing rate, both economy of agency and efficiency of decision are secured by bringing all the cases before a single tribunal at the same time. The question of what is the prevailing rate in the vicinity is more likely to be satisfactorily decided upon all the evidence which the zemindar and all the ryots concerned can produce, than upon fragments of the same evidence in isolated cases, which, if decided upon the evidence in each respectively produced (as they should be), may have to be decided in different and perhaps contradictory ways. We have therefore thought it desirable to give the Collector a concurrent jurisdiction with the Civil Court in cases depending upon the first ground of enhancement. It may then be asked how we propose, with reference to the above remarks, to bring before each tribunal the cases most proper for it to try. It is not very easy to do this completely and exactly, as must be manifest from the nature of the tests; but, so far as it is possible to accomplish it, we have endeavoured to do so by allowing the landlord to choose his own tribunal in the first instance, and then providing for a transfer of the cases, if numerous, from the Civil Court to the Collector (section 130 of the Draft Bill) if the landlord has in the first instance chosen the former tribunal. If the cases are few and isolated, and the landlord selects the Collector as his tribunal in the first instance, we do not see that the tenant is likely to be prejudiced. In cases of concurrent jurisdiction it is usual to allow the plaintiff to select the tribunal. In the first instance this is necessary; then, where a transfer from one to another tribunal is permitted, the defendant can move for such transfer. When the cases are first instituted before the Civil Court, or partly in the Civil Court and partly before the Collector, any tenant can move the Civil Court to act under section 130, and so can have all the cases brought before the Collector. When the cases are instituted before the Collector in the first instance, we see no advantage to either party in transferring them to the Civil Court, and we have not provided any way of doing so.

Concurrent jurisdiction give to the Civil Court and the Collector.

Concurrent jurisdiction given also in cases depending upon the second ground of enhancement

§ 65. Cases proceeding upon the second ground of enhancement—namely, that the quantity of land held by the ryot has been shown by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent was previously paid by him—can be tried equally well by the Civil and Revenue Courts. We have here also given a concurrent jurisdiction to these tribunals; and much of what has just been said applies. The cases which would be conveniently tried together by the Collector are cases in which the ryots on an estate collude together and refuse to point out the plots of land held by them individually. For example, a purchaser of an estate at a sale for arrears of Government revenue may find that the sum total of the quantities of land given by the ryots individually as in their possession falls very far short of the area of the estate. He may proceed to make a measurement, and find that this will help him in no way, because the ryots will not point out the fields occupied and cultivated by each of them. We may observe, in order to make this more intelligible to persons not acquainted with the country, that a ryot's holding very seldom consists, like an English farm, of contiguous fields lying within a ring fence, but is made up of plots, often mere strips of land, in different places, on different sides of the village, each ryot having a portion of the good and inferior land and of each of the soils suited for particular species of cultivation. An auction-purchaser, who buys at a revenue sale or at a sale in execution, receives no assistance from the former proprietor, who regards him as an usurper. The ryots, either dreading an enhancement of rents or regarding the opportunity as a favorable one to throw off some of the burdens imposed by their late landlord, understate the quantity of land held by each of them. Under such circumstances, single suits brought against individual ryots and tried separately are infructuous, whereas, when a complete measurement of the estate is made, the quantity of land in the possession of each ryot is known accurately, and the excess beyond what he was previously paying rent for can be assessed. We are here assuming that the new landlord is able to ascertain the rent previously paid by each ryot, and the quantity of land for which it was paid. There are, however, cases in which an auction-purchaser is unable to obtain this information. We shall hereafter come to the consideration of these cases, for which also provision has been made.

Concurrent jurisdiction given to the Civil Courts and the Collector in cases depending on the third ground of enhancement.

§ 66. The third ground of enhancement is that the productive powers of the land have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot. Here also we have given the Civil Court and the Collector concurrent jurisdiction. These are not, as a rule, isolated cases. It is not easy to conceive any cause which could render the holding of an individual ryot more fertile than previously, without simultaneously affecting the holdings of neighbouring ryots in a greater or less degree. An inundation bringing with it a fertilizing alluvial deposit; a canal supplying water for irrigation; a system of drainage converting a water-clogged soil into rich cultivation; an embankment protecting crops from being drowned and villages from being immersed—these and other possible causes of increased fertility within the meaning of the rule must affect considerable tracts and more than a few cultivators. If the majority of those affected accept the enhanced rates of rent claimed by the landlord, a prevailing rate will be obtained and the landlord can proceed under the first ground of enhancement. If a majority will not accept the enhanced rents claimed, or if the minority who decide to litigate includes a considerable number of persons, the cases can with advantage be tried together, as the cause of the increase of the productive powers of the soil is common to them all, and it is desirable to have the whole of the evidence on this point brought together and considered together.[4] When the landlord does not himself select the Collector's Court in the first instance, the provisions of Section 130 of the Draft Bill afford a facility for bringing the whole of the cases and the whole of the evidence before this tribunal.

[4] Section 30 of The Code of Civil Procedure provides that, where there are numerous parties having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such parties may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend in such suit, on behalf of all parties so interested, notice being given by public advertisement or otherwise to such parties. We are not aware that any attempt has ever been made to sue a number of ryots occupying different holdings, making them co-defendants in a single suit in the Civil Court on the ground that they were all jointly concerned in the question of a prevailing rate or an increase of productive powers.

§ 67. We now come to the fourth and the most important of the grounds of enhancement, namely, that the price of the produce of the land has risen. This is a general cause affecting the length and breadth of the land, and concerning every person in the receipt of rent from the cultivators. Upon the fullest consideration, a majority of us think that the Civil Court does not here afford the best machinery for adjusting the enhanced rents which ought to be paid by the ryots to their landlords. In the first place, the method of the Civil Court is to apply a general principle to particular instances. This general principle is usually postulated. It may be contained in a written law, or in a custom, or may have to be extracted from a number of decided cases. However this may be, the Court does not create the principle for the occasion. Its modes of procedure are not suited for doing this, are indeed rather opposed to doing it well or successfully, as they (generally speaking) exclude res inter alios actæ, and confine their attention to what has taken place between the parties themselves. To this rule there are some exceptions, the Court sometimes dealing with a considerable number of persons, who have the same interest in the suit; but none of these exceptions extends so far as the creation of a new general principle applicable to the whole community or a very considerable class in the community. The authority which makes new general principles or rules is the Government acting in civilized countries in the Legislative Department. The method of doing this is, not to make every individual in the state a party to a formal proceeding and take all the evidence produced by those in favour of, and by those opposed to, the measure—this would be impossible—but to propound the proposed general rule, formulated by persons of supposed superior knowledge and experience, to debate it in public, and to give any class or individual likely to be affected by it an opportunity of making a representation for or against the proposed measure through the proper channel. While we think that, on the one hand, the Civil Court is not well calculated by its form of proceeding to make a new general rule for the whole agricultural community or for a portion of that community resident in a district or considerable area, we also think that, on the other hand, the general principle, the general rule which ought to be supplied to the Civil Court for application to particular cases, cannot well be made by the Legislature, because the general principle required is not a simple one adapted for uniform and universal application, but a complex one to be varied in its application to particular districts or portions of districts according to the circumstances existing at the time of its application. These circumstances are capable of being ascertained only by local investigation, and this may be materially assisted by taking evidence in judicial form. The range of inquiry is, in other words, too wide for the Civil Court; too limited and varied for the Legislature. We think then that the general rise of prices, which should regulate the enhancement of rent over a considerable tract of country, can best be ascertained and determined by some machinery intermediate between the Legislature and the Judiciary, partaking of the nature of each, but confined to the forms of neither. We have made the Collector the mainspring of this machinery, arming him with judicial powers to take evidence, when information can thus best be obtained; assisting him with a staff of subordinates in the working out of details; and subjecting his conclusions to the test of the greater experience and authority of the superior officers of the Revenue Department. We think that with this machinery it ought not to be impossible to ascertain the general rise of the prices of staple commodities during a number of years in a given tract, and apply the measure of enhancement so obtained to the particular cases of individual ryots. We shall come presently to the procedure by which we have attempted to guide the Collector in the performance of the duty thus laid upon him.

Civil Court not suited for dealing with cases depending on the fourth ground of enhancement

Equal facilities for Enhancement not afforded to mere farmers and landlords having a permanent transferable interest.

§ 68. It will be convenient to mention here what landlords we think should be allowed to take proceedings to enhance in the Civil Court or before the Collector. We have classified landlords for this purpose under two heads—first, landlords having a permanent transferable interest; second, landlords having a farming or lease-hold interest in the lands of which the rents are payable to them. Regarding the Collector's tribunal as an increased facility for enhancement, we have thought it inexpedient to afford this increased facility to landlords of the second class in every case. We have accordingly allowed landlords of the first class only to go to the Collector with cases depending upon the first and second grounds of enhancement, while we have left the Civil Court open to both classes for these cases. The landlord of the first class may go to either tribunal on the third ground of enhancement, but the landlord of the second class, the mere farmer or lease-holder, though the Civil Court is open to him in all cases, may not call in the agency of the Revenue Authorities, unless a period of not less than ten years of his interest remains unexpired. Upon the fourth ground the Civil Court is open to neither class of landlords; but he, whose interest is permanent and transferable, may always go to the Collector, while the farmer or lease-holder may not proceed before this Officer or in other words may not enhance rents at all upon this ground unless a period of not less than ten years of his interest is unexpired—see section 95 of the Draft Bill.

Proceedings in the Civil Courts to enhance rents.

§ 69. When a landlord desires to proceed in the Civil Court, in the first instance, to enhance the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy, he must present a plaint in the usual way. If enhancement is claimed on the first ground, this plaint must state (1) the quantity of land held by the ryot, and when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class; (2) the rate of rent actually paid for such land or for each class of such land; and (3) the alleged prevailing rate which the plaintiff claims instead of the rate actually paid. When enhancement is claimed on the second ground, the plaint must state (1) the quantity of land for which rent was perviously paid by the ryot and, when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class; (2) the amount of rent paid for such land and the rate or rates at which such rent was calculated; (3) the quantity of additional land for which plaintiff claims additional rent; (4) the amount of additional rent claimed for such additional land; and (5) the total rent claimed, that is to say, the total of (2) and (4). When enhancement is claimed on the third ground, the plaint must contain the same particulars as (1) and (2) just specified, and must further state (3) the cause and extent of the alleged increase in the productive powers of the land; and (4) the enhanced rent or rates of rent which the plaintiff claims to receive in consequence of such increase. These particulars will, we trust, enable the Court to comprehend clearly what it has to try, and the defendant in each suit to understand the case which he has to meet.

Particulars to be given in plaints.

General provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure applicable to the trial of Enhancement Suits.

§ 70. Plaints in enhancement cases are to be dealt with by the Civil Courts under the general provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure. The abbreviated procedure contained in Chapter XVIII of the Draft Bill will have no application to such suits (section 98). In any case in which enhancement is decreed, the enhanced rent shall be payable from the commencement of the year following that in which the plaint was presented to the Court. We have also provided that the Civil Court shall have full power to decide upon the landlord's right to enhance, and upon the fairness of the enhanced rent demanded, and may declare the landlord entitled to such enhanced rent or to any less rent which may be found to be fair and equitable; and shall decide all questions relevant to the enquiry directly raised between the parties so as to avoid, as far as possible, a multiplicity of suits. We have endeavoured to explain the intended application of this principle by some illustrations taken from decided cases. Certain recent decisions upon the subject of res judicata now make it more important than ever that material issues directly raised between the parties should be definitively tried, instead of its being left to doubt in subsequent litigation, what the result may have been of such issues having been raised and left undecided.

Procedure before Collector applicable to three classes of cases.

§ 71. Coming now to the details of the Enhancement Procedure provided in the Bill for the Collector, we think that there are three general classes of cases, to meet which more particularly this procedure should be directed, viz.—

I.—Where the dispute is mainly about rates, and there is reason to believe that, if the rates were once authoritatively settled for different classes of land, the landlord and his tenants would find no real difficulty in arranging what rent each ryot should pay according to these rates:

II.—Where the dispute is not only about rates, but also about the quantity or quality of the land held by each ryot or about both; and nothing but the preparation of a detailed Jamabandi or Rent-roll can settle all matters in controversy between the parties:

III.—Where the landlord, being a new purchaser at a revenue or execution sale, is unable to ascertain the previous rents payable by the tenants, or the exact lands held by them, or both. Here there may possibly be no enhancement, and the purchaser may be content to collect the rents payable to his predecessor, if he can only discover for certain what those rents were.

We proceed to show how the Procedure which we have provided is adapted to meet the requirements of each of these three cases. Before doing so, we may remark that the landlord who applies to the Collector for enhancement is termed The Applicant; and that the application is to be made to the Collector of the District in which are situate the lands, or any portion of the lands to the rent of which The Applicant is entitled. When the lands are situate in two or more districts included in the same Commissioner's division, such Commissioner, and when the lands are situate in two or more districts not included in the same Commissioner's division, the Board of Revenue, may, for any sufficient reason, direct that any such application be transferred to any other Collector within whose Collectorate any portion of the lands is situate. The first portion of this provision follows The Code of Civil Procedure, under which a suit for immovable property may now be instituted in any district in which any portion of such property is situate. It is expedient that the superior Revenue Authorities should have a power of transfer, when from considerations of convenience or for other reasons it is desirable that an application should be dealt with by the Collector of one rather than the Collector of another district.

Application for enhancement to be made to Collector of what district.

In the first case The Applicant will ask for a Table of Rates.

Meaning of "Table of Rates."

§ 72. In the first of the three cases put above The Applicant will ask the Collector to prepare a Table of Rates for the estate, tenure or undertenure, in respect of which the application is made. We have defined a "Table of Rates" to mean "a table or schedule which exhibits the classes of land in an estate, tenure, or undertenure according to the classifications usual in the locality, and the rates of rent payable for each class. When enhancement is claimed on the first or second ground, such Table must exhibit the prevailing rates payable immediately before its preparation; and, when enhancement is claimed on the third or fourth ground, such Table shall exhibit such prevailing rates and shall further exhibit the enhanced rates allowed by the Collector upon such grounds respectively." The Applicant is required (section 101) to file with his application a copy of the Table of Rates which he alleges to be fair and equitable, and according to which he claims to collect enhanced rents from the occupancy ryots; and he must further distinctly specify in his application the grounds upon which he claims to enhance rents and when these grounds came into existence. The copy of the Table of Rates so filed and the grounds so stated make up a complete statement of The Applicant's case; and it is important to bear in mind that this case is concerned with the occupancy ryots generally of the estate, tenure, or undertenure, and not with the particular circumstances of these ryots individually.

Application to include what particulars.

§ 73. It will be convenient to make here a few remarks about the distribution of land into different classes. We believe that such a distribution according to a more extended or more limited classification prevails in every estate; and that it is well known to, and well understood by, the ryots. The "established rate" of rent generally payable for each class is also well known; and, in the majority of instances, where no discord and no disputes have perturbed the clear waters of truth, can without much difficulty be ascertained. Our colleague, Baboo Peary Mohun Mukherji, who has had considerable practical experience in his own and his father's estates, tells us that the classification of the land is carefully made when a village is measured, and that all disputes as to the class in which any particular plot of land should be placed are then settled with the aid of the Village Mandals. He says that every landlord, who has any pretensions to good management, is careful to have his estate measured: and that the measurement papers (chiṭa) then furnish him with a record not only of the areas of the ryots' holdings, but also of the quantities of each class of land included in each holding. He furnishes us with the following specimen classification:—

Classes of land, and Rates of rent.

Example of classification of land.

		Per bigha. Rs.
I.	Soona land, Awul or First Class at	5
	Ditto Duim or Second Class at	4
	Ditto Seyam or Third Class at	3

Soona land is the higher and better land not liable to inundation and produces Aus paddy, pulses of kinds, potatoes, sugarcane and indigo.

		Per bigha. Rs.	A.
II.	Sali land, Awul or First Class at	4	0
	Ditto Duim or Second Class at	3	0
	Ditto Seyam or Third Class at	2	8
	Ditto Chaharam or Fourth Class at	1	8

Sali land produces amun paddy, sesame, múg and jute:—

III.—Danga or high arable land at Rs. 6 per bigha; produces sugarcane, potatoes, brinjals and indigo.

IV.—Land on which bamboos are produced, at Rs. 5 per bigha.

V.—Land on which fruit-trees and vegetables are grown, bagat, at Rs. 5 to Rs. 8 per bigha.

VI.—Land on which mulberries are grown, at Rs. 6 per bigha.

VII.—Land on which betel leaves are grown, at Rs. 15 per bigha.

VIII.—Bastu or homestead land, at Rs. 10 per bigha.

IX.—Udbastu or land adjoining the bastu land, at Rs. 7-8 per bigha.

X.—Doba or small hollows, where fish are caught in the rains, at Rs. 2 per bigha.

XI.—Ghaskar or pasturage, at Re. 1 per bigha.

This classification gives us eleven different classes of land, two of which again contain seven sub-classes.

§ 74. The Applicant having stated his case, the next step is for the Collector to ascertain what the ryots have got to say in reply to it. To this end he has a copy of The Applicant's Table of Rates posted up at the Mal Kachahri of each village to which the lands belong, or at some conspicuous place in such village, or upon such lands, and also has it proclaimed by beat of drum that such copy has been so posted up, together with a notice calling upon the ryots to appear within one month and agree to the rates specified in such copy or state their objections, if any, thereto. If all the ryots accept the rates, the Collector will record the fact, and there is an end of the matter. If, on the contrary, the ryots or any of them object to the rates, it will be the duty of the Collector to proceed to prepare a Table of those rates which he finds to be fair and equitable. He will duly consider the case set up by The Applicant and the objections made by the ryots, and will take such evidence and make such inquiries as he may find necessary; and, having done this, he will draw up a statement of his proceedings, and will therein state the grounds upon which he allows or disallows the rates claimed by The Applicant or any of them, or allows lower rates in substitution therefor.

Publication of Applicant's Table of Rates with notice to ryots to agree or state objections within one month.

Proceedings when ryots appear and assent or object

§ 75. If enhancement is claimed on the first ground, namely, that the ryots are paying a rate of rent below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity, the Collector will ascertain the prevailing rates payable in the vicinity for classes of land similar to those in the estate, tenure or undertenure, with which his proceedings are concerned. He will confine himself to this general point. If any particular ryot contends that he does not belong to the same class of ryots or that his land has not similar advantages with the class of lands, respectively, which are selected from the vicinity for comparison, the Collector will decline to enter upon these individual questions. If upon the publication of the Table of Rates The Applicant and the ryots are unable to settle matters between themselves, The Applicant will have two courses open to him, as will be shown hereafter. He can proceed in the Civil Court to enforce the Table of Rates against the ryots individually, or he can ask the Collector to prepare a Jamabandi. In either of these proceedings the ryots will have a full opportunity of stating their individual cases, and having them duly considered. Similarly, if enhancement is claimed on the second ground, namely, that the quantity of land held by the ryots has been shown by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid, the Collector will ascertain and declare the prevailing rates payable for each class of land, but he will not determine how much excess land is in the possession of any particular ryot, or to what class such excess land belongs. These are questions to be settled, when The Applicant proceeds further to enforce the Table of Rates against the ryots individually.

Or on the second ground

§ 76. If enhancement is claimed on the third ground, namely, that the productive powers of the lands held by the ryots have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of such ryots, the Collector will have to ascertain the extent of the increase with reference to the terms of the law. Having ascertained this, he must then determine what rates are fair and equitable for these improved lands instead of the old rates. Taking for example the Soona land according to the classification given above in § 73, if he finds that the productive powers of the land have been increased fifty per cent., the new rate for Improved First Class Soona will be	...	5+2½=7½ per bigha.

for Improved Second Class Soona will be	...	4+2 =6 ,,
for Improved Third Class Soona will be	...	3+1½=4½ ,,

If any particular ryot contends that his land, owing to its exceptional situation or other cause, has not been benefited to the same extent as other land, the Collector will not enter into this question, which must be left for determination in the proceedings taken to enforce the Table of Rates against the ryots individually. Finally, if enhancement is claimed on the fourth ground, namely, that the prices of produce have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, the Collector must ascertain the extent of the increase with reference to the terms of the law, and dividing such increase according to the provisions of the Act, must determine the new rates, which shall be fair and equitable. Taking for example, the Sali land according to the classification given above in § 73, if prices have doubled, and if the increase has occurred without the agency or expense of either the landlord or the ryot, the increment is to be divided equally, and the landlord will get half of it. The new rate will therefore be—§ 77. The Collector having prepared the Table of Rates will publish it with a notice intimating to The Applicant and the ryots that any objections, which he or they desire to make to the rates, must be made within one month by a written petition presented to the Collector. If any such objections are made, the Collector will consider them and amend the Table, if he see fit. He will then submit the Table of Rates with his proceedings and any petitions of objection, that may have been presented, to the Commissioner, or through the Commissioner to the Board of Revenue. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time direct what cases shall be finally revised by the Commissioner or the Board, regard being had to the total amount of rents involved, or to the area of the lands or the number of the ryots affected. The Board or the Commissioner, as the case may be, may direct and await further proceedings or inquiries, may hear any person affected by the proceedings, may allow or reject any of the objections made, and may revise, amend, or alter the Table of Rates (section 104).

Table of Rates when prepared to be published, with notice that objections may be made within one month.

Collector's proceedings to be submitted to Superior Revenue Authorities; who have full power to revise, amend or alter

§ 78. The Table of Rates, as finally sanctioned by the Board or the Commissioner, will be binding upon The Applicant and the ryots and will be conclusive to this extent, that the rates therein specified are the fair and equitable rates payable for the classes of land specified in such Table by ryots having a right of occupancy. The Applicant will not, however, be able to recover rent from any individual ryot according to the rates specified in the Table until it has been proved in a further proceeding or the ryot has admitted, that the lands held by him are lands of the same classes as those shown in the Table. It has been asserted by persons of experience and ability that, if rates were once settled by authority, landlords and tenants would soon be able to adjust their differences. If there is anything in this assertion, as soon as the Table of Rates is authoritatively promulgated, The Applicant will be able to settle with the majority of the ryots, whose lands will in all probability fall within the classification of the Table, and who will therefore have nothing to hope from a continuation of the contest. The residue will either have or conceive themselves to have just reasons for refusing to pay rent according to the Table of Rates. One may contend that he belongs to an old family or superior caste, who have always held their lands at a more favourable rate than the other ryots, less (say) by two annas or four annas in the rupee. Another may allege that his grandfather or great grandfather was in the service

Probability that it will enable the landlord and his tenants to come to terms amongst themselves of the zemindar, and obtained his holding at lower rates with a promise that a difference should always be made in his favour. These allegations may be supported by the fact that the persons making them have been holding at lower rates than their neighbours. A third may aver that, owing to peculiarities of situation, his land has always been recognized as forming a sort of middle class not shown in the Table, paying more than Second Class Sali, but less than First Class Sali. A fourth may set up the plea that his fields lie on the edge of the mât or plain, and are liable to damage by cattle, in consequence of which he has always paid something less than the regular rate of the class to which these fields belong. A fifth may contend that, the enhancement being claimed on the third ground, he was let into possession a couple of years ago, after the cause of the increase of the productive powers had produced its results, that he paid a large salámi or fine in consideration of getting good land at a low rent, and that in justice and equity he cannot be bound by the Table of Rates. A sixth may raise a similar objection, when enhancement is claimed on the fourth ground. Where these averments are just and reasonable, a prudent landlord will make a timely concession, and by agreeing to something less than the published rates will satisfy those ryots who have a claim to exceptional consideration; and thus The Applicant may be enabled by the publication of the Table of Rates to come to terms with all his ryots.

If parties fail to come to terms, two courses open to the landlord.

§ 79. If, however, the ryots make unreasonable objections on the one hand, or the landlord will not yield to reasonable claims on the other hand, there are two courses open for the settlement of these individual grounds of dispute (section 106). The Applicant may proceed in the Civil Court to enforce the Table of Rates against his ryots, and any number of ryots not exceeding ten may be made co-defendants in any such suit. The Table of Rates will be here conclusive to the extent already pointed out, but it will place the landlord in no better position as regards the burden of proof in other matters than if he had not gone to the Collector, but had in the first instance resorted to the Civil Court. Each individual ryot will thus have a full opportunity of bringing forward his own case and of procuring the decision of the Court thereupon. The other course open to The Applicant is to apply to the Collector for the preparation of an Enhanced Jamabandi, and this he may do at any time after three months (this affords time for an amicable settlement) and within one year from the date of the Table of Rates being finally sanctioned. From the exposition of the proceedings in preparing an Enhanced Jamabandi which follows, it will appear that here also the ryots will have a full opportunity of having their individual pleas heard and decided.

Application for an Enhanced Jamabandi in what cases.

§ 80. The Applicant may ask the Collector to prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi of the estate, tenure, or undertenure in respect of which the application in made, (1) by his original application, or (2) by a supplementary application, after he has obtained a Table of Rates and has failed to settle with some or all of his ryots We have defined (section 100) a "Jamabandi" to mean a table or schedule, which exhibits—

Meaning of a "Jamabandi"

(1) the names of the ryots in an estate, tenure, or under-tenure;

(2) the quantity of land, or, where such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class, held by each ryot;

(3) the total rent payable by each ryot for the total land of each class held by such ryot; and

(4) the grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

Meaning of an "Enhance Jamabandi."

We have defined an "Enhanced Jamabandi" to be a Jamabandi which, in addition to the above particulars, further exhibits—

(a) when enhancement is allowed on the first ground,
  (5) the prevailing rate of rent allowed for any class of lands instead of the rate previously payable;
  (6) the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and
  (7) the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

(b) when enhancement is allowed on the second ground,
  (5) the additional land of each class proved to be in the possession of each ryot;
  (6) the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and
  (7) the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

(c) when enhancement is allowed on the third or fourth ground,
  (5) the enhanced rate of rent allowed for each class of land;
  (6) the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and
  (7) the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

It will be obvious at a glance that a Jamabandi or Enhanced Jamabandi, unlike a Table of Rates, deals with the particulars connected with each individual ryot.

Application for an Enhanced Jamabandi what to include.

§ 81. The Applicant, who asks for an Enhanced Jamabandi, must with his application present a copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, which he alleges to be fair and equitable, and according to which he claims to collect enhanced rents from the ryots; and he must further distinctly specify the ground or grounds upon which he claims to enhance the rent of each ryot specified therein. The entry of any ryot's name in this copy will be an admission by the landlord that such ryot has a right of occupancy. The Enhanced Jamabandi presented by The Applicant will be published in the same manner as the Table of Rates (ante § 77) on the land, with a notice to the ryots to appear within one month and assent individually to the entries concerning each of them, or state their objections, if any, to such entries. Any ryot may here put forward by way of objection every thing connected with his own particular case.

Enhanced Jamabandi to be published with notice to ryots to appear and assent or object to the entries concerning them.

Procedure if all the ryots assent.

§ 82. If all the ryots concerned agree to all the entries in the copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi presented by The Applicant, the Collector shall make an order declaring such Jamabandi to be binding upon The Applicant and the ryots for ten years, subject, however, to enhancement for alluvion and abatement for diluvion. If any or all the ryots object, or if they do not appear and assent, the Collector will proceed to prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi for the estate, tenure, or undertenure. In order to do this, he must first obtain the information necessary to prepare a Table of Rates in those cases in which such a Table has not been already prepared, and he must then apply these enhanced rates to the cases of particular ryots, dealing with the peculiar circumstances of each case, and the objections, if any, made by each ryot.

Procedure if all or any of the ryots object.

Collector to draw up a statement of his proceedings. Enhanced Jamabandi when prepared to be published.

§ 83 When the Collector has concluded these proceedings, he will draw up a statement thereof and prepare the Enhanced Jamabandi (section 109), which will then be published with a notice intimating to The Applicant and the ryots that any objections, which he or they may desire to make to the rates or entries in such Enhanced Jamabandi, must be made within one month after such publication by a written petition to be presented to the Collector. If any objections are made—and it may be observed that these objections may be on all points connected with each ryot's individual case—the Collector is to deal with them In order to satisfy himself of the correctness of such objections or otherwise, the Collector may take such further proceedings as appear necessary, and may therein exercise the same powers as he was competent to exercise in the original proceedings; and he may make any order which he deems proper, either cancelling, amending, or otherwise altering any such rate or any such entry, or rejecting such objection. Any landlord or ryot affected by such order may, if dissatisfied therewith, prefer an appeal to the Commissioner within thirty days, and the Commissioner may upon such appeal, after or without further inquiry, make such order as to him appears proper (section 110). The Enhanced Jamabandi finally prepared after all the objections are disposed of will be binding on the landlord and the tenants for ten years, subject to enhancement for alluvion and abatement for diluvion. In order to prevent ryots, who pay their rents to The Applicant according to the Enhanced Jamabandi, from being harassed by suits brought by rival landlords, we have enacted (section 111) that no ryot, who is compelled to pay rent to The Applicant according to the Enhanced Jamabandi, shall be liable in a suit for mesne profits to any third party claiming to be entitled to such rent, but any such suit shall be maintainable against The Applicant alone.

Appeal to Commissioner.

Protection of ryots who pay rent to The Applicant under the Enhanced Jamabandi.

§ 84. We now come to the third class of proceedings, namely, proceedings to obtain a Settlement Jamabandi, which we have defined to be a Jamabandi prepared by the Collector upon the application of a landlord, who is unable to ascertain the ryots liable to pay rent to him, the rents payable by such ryots, or the plots of land in respect of which such rents are payable by each of such ryots. We have already (ante § 65) alluded to the difficulties under which a purchaser at a public sale labours when he endeavours to take possession of an estate which he has purchased. The former owner intrigues with the ryots to put obstacles in his way. Either the object of the purchaser is to make a profit by enhancing the rents, or this object is imputed to him. The old proprietor withholds all information and all papers. The ryots understate their rents and produce fabricated receipts, purchased from former gomashtahs, or perhaps even signed by the old proprietor in the hope that the purchaser will repent his bargain and make overtures to get rid of it. The quantity of land in each holding is untruly stated, or all information is refused. If the purchaser attempts a measurement, no one will say to whom the plots or fields belong. Individual suits cannot be brought, for the purchaser has not sufficient information to draft a plaint in a single case. All this may happen, not only when the new landlord is a purchaser at a Revenue sale or at an Execution sale, but also in the case of a succession, when some person, who undoubtedly has the law on his side, is opposed by the female or other members of the family of the late owner, who conceive that they have rights which ought to be respected.

Proceedings to obtain a Settlement Jamabandi.

Cases to which this Procedure is applicable.

§ 85. The Applicant who, under this state of things, applies to the Collector for a Settlement Jamabandi must in his application set forth the circumstances under which he is unable to ascertain the ryots liable to pay rent to him, the rents payable by such ryots, or the plots of land in respect of which such rents are payable. The Collector, if satisfied that The Applicant is really unable to ascertain these particulars and that, in consequence, proceedings for the preparation of a Table of Rates or an Enhanced Jamabandi could not be inaugurated or would be useless, may proceed to prepare a Settlement Jamabandi. The first step towards doing this is the issue of a notice calling upon the ryots in the estate, tenure or undertenure to appear within one month and state the plots of land held by each of them, together with the class, quantity, and boundaries thereof, the rent previously paid for such land, and the rent which they are each of them willing to pay.

Applicant for Settlement Jamabandi to set forth the circumstances in his application.

If ryots do not furnish required particulars, or if Applicant object to particulars furnished, Collector to proceed to ascertain and determine what matters.

§ 86. If within one month after the publication of this notice the ryots appear and give the particulars required of them, and The Applicant assents to these particulars the Settlement Jamabandi will be drawn up accordingly. If they do not appear and furnish the particulars required of them, or if they furnish particulars which The Applicant objects to, the Collector will proceed to ascertain and determine—(1) who are the ryots liable to pay rent to The Applicant; (2) what are the lands for which such rents are payable; (3) what rights such ryots have in such lands; and (4) what are the rents or rates of rent, either in excess of the former rents or rates or otherwise, which The Applicant is entitled to receive from such ryots for such lands (section 113). When the Settlement Jamabandi is completed, the Collector will publish it in the same way as an Enhanced Jamabandi, with a similar notice to the ryots concerned. The Collector will deal with any objections that may be made by individuals; and, if dissatisfied with his orders, they can appeal to the Commissioner.

§ 87. Having thus explained the main features of the proceedings before the Collector in the three classes of cases for which we have attempted to legislate, we shall now notice certain general provisions common to all three. And, first, we have allowed any number of landlords to join in an Application, specifying the proportions in which they are willing to pay the costs; but the Collector may, if he see fit, direct that separate proceedings be held in respect of any estate, tenure, or undertenure, or specific area belonging to any Applicant (section 115). As to the considerations which should guide the Collector in making such an order, the causes which afford grounds of enhancement sometimes affect considerable areas with scarcely any perceptible difference in their effects. This is notably so in the case of a rise in prices. Economy in the employment of the necessary agency and in making the necessary inquiries will be effected by including in a single investigation a number of landlords and tenants who have the same stake in the questions to be settled. In preparing a Table of Rates, where the particulars of individual cases have not to be inquired into, a larger number of persons can safely be included in the proceedings than in preparing an Enhanced Jamabandi or a Settlement Jamabandi, where the particulars of individual cases have to be dealt with. Two or more undertenures within the same tenure, or two or more tenures within the same estate, may well form the subject of a single investigation; while tenures situate within different and distant estates, and affected by different circumstances, ought to be treated separately. The great object in every case should be, not to make the inquiry too unwieldy, and not to attempt to treat together areas, which are not susceptible of similar treatment.

Any number of landlords may join in an application. Collector may direct separate proceedings, if he see fit.

Considerations which should guide the exercise of this discretion.

Collector may, if he see fit, endeavour to bring about an Amicable Compromise.

§ 88. We have provided (section 116) that, in any case in which an application is made to him, the Collector may, if he see fit, before proceeding to determine or settle the matters in dispute, endeavour to bring about an amicable compromise between The Applicant and the ryots; and that, if any such compromise is brought about, the Collector shall draw up a formal record of its terms, and such record shall be binding upon all persons mentioned therein. We have borrowed these provisions from the expired Agrarian Disputes Act, VI (B. C.) of 1876.

Deposit of money upon the requisition of the Collector to meet the expenses of the proceedings.

§ 89. We have provided that The Applicant shall from time to time, when so required by a written notice, deposit such sum of money as the Collector may estimate to be necessary to carry on the proceedings. When there is a single Applicant, and he fails to comply with such a requisition within fifteen days after its being made, the Collector may order the proceedings to abate; or he may in his discretion receive the deposit after the fifteen days have expired.

Where there are more Applicants than one, who have joined in respect of different estates, tenures or undertenures, the Collector may receive so much of the amount as is required for any particular estate, tenure or undertenure, and proceed with the inquiry so far as it is concerned, making an order of abatement as to the other or others in respect of which no deposit has been made. When the Applicants are coparceners, one may deposit the whole amount required and recover from any other coparcener the share which should have been deposited by him. When an order has been made that the proceedings do abate, no fresh enhancement proceedings may be instituted for ten years (section 118).

Consequence of failure to deposit.

§ 90. We have enacted (section 121) that the Collector may in his discretion, at any stage of his proceedings, exercise all or any of the powers of a Civil Court in respect of summoning, causing the attendance of, and examining witnesses, whether parties to the proceedings or not, and in respect of causing the production of documents, and giving or apportioning costs: and the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure applicable to these matters shall apply to a Collector exercising such powers. We have also provided that a Collector may, with the consent of the parties, refer any matter to arbitration, and that the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure concerned with arbitration shall be applicable.

Powers exerciseable by a Collector for obtaining evidence in the course of his proceedings.

Reference to Arbitration.

§ 91. In order to facilitate inquiries into the increase or decrease of prices, as a ground of enhancement or abatement of rent, we have provided (section 122) that the Collector of every district shall prepare annual Lists of the Prices, at harvest time, of the staple crops appointed by the Board of Revenue for districts or other areas (see clause (c) of section 23). These Price-Lists will be prepared under rules made by the Board in order to secure uniformity, and will be published annually in the Calcutta Gazette. We have declared that any Price-List so published shall be relevant in any proceedings under Chapter XV, and shall be primâ facie evidence of the price of such staple crops during the year, and in the district or area for which it has been published. The areas for which these lists will be drawn up will be determined by the Board of Revenue upon the recommendation of the Collector. The prices at certain fixed marts should be taken, the same marts being always adhered to. The price of produce in the field where it is grown varies according to the distance of the usual market and the necessary cost of carriage thereto. The price in different markets varies according to their proximity to larger markets or ports of export, and the facilities for carriage to such ports or markets. By taking always the prices of the same markets, the normal variation, as affected by external and general, as distinguished from local and particular, causes, is more likely to be obtained.

Annual Price-Lists to be prepared by Collectors of districts and published in the Calcutta Gazette.

To be primâ facie evidence in Enhancement Proceedings.

§ 92. We have provided (section 123) that the Collector may in his discretion, at any stage of the proceedings, make a measurement of all or any of the lands with which such proceedings are concerned, and may make an order, which shall be duly published, directing the ryots to be present at such measurement. Any ryot who, after the publication of such order, fails to attend and point out his land, shall be estopped from contesting the correctness of the measurement made or any of the proceedings held in his absence. If after due inquiry the Collector is unable to make a measurement or ascertain the names of the ryots or other persons holding the lands, he may declare such lands to be at the absolute disposal of the zemindar. If any ryot appears within fifteen days after the Collector has recorded such a declaration and shows reasonable cause for his previous non-appearance, the Collector may, upon such terms and conditions as to him appear proper, alter or rescind his previous declaration. If no such reasonable cause is shown, the Collector may make an order, refusing to alter or rescind Power of Collector to make Measurement and direct the ryots to be present.

Consequence of non-attendance such declaration; and from such order an appeal will lie to the Commissioner. These provisions will be found useful and necessary in the third class of proceedings, namely, those held for the preparation of a Settlement Jamabandi. It is to be observed that they are not new, similar provisions having been enacted by Act VI (B.C.) of 1862, and being still found in Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869.

Any person may be invested with powers of a Collector for the purposes of the Act.
Deputy Collector may exercise powers subject to control of Collector.

§ 93. We have provided (section 124) that the Lieutenant-Governor may invest any person with the powers of a Collector for the purposes of Chapter XV, and may give such directions as appear convenient for dividing between such person and the Collector of the district the work arising under the Act; and that any Deputy Collector may, subject to the control and supervision of the Collector of the district or of any person so invested with the powers of a Collector, exercise (with some few exceptions) all or any of the powers vested in a Collector by Chapter XV. The Collector is empowered to exercise this control and supervision either of his own motion or upon petition by any one alleging himself to be aggrieved. We have provided that the Collector may, subject to rules to be made by the Board of Revenue, appoint such Ministerial and other Officers as may be required to make such inquiries, and to do all such things as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the Act.

Appointment of Ministerial Officers, &c.

Rules as to the Cost of the proceedings.

§ 94. Upon the termination of the proceedings, the Collector will draw up an account of the total cost. If the amount deposited by The Applicant covers this cost and leaves a balance, such balance will be refunded. If there is a deficiency, it will be recoverable as a Public Demand. In the cost of the proceedings will be included (a) the salary and allowances of the Collector or Deputy Collector by whom the proceedings have been conducted; (b) the salaries of the Ministerial Officers; and (c) all contingent and other expenses actually incurred. A discretion is given to Commissioners and Collectors to direct, when rejecting an objection or appeal, that the immediate costs thereof be paid by the person making such objection or appeal, or by any party who opposes the same. When The Applicant in proceedings for an Enhanced Jamabandi is found entitled to enhanced rent, the Collector may award to him costs payable by the ryots, but no ryot shall be liable to pay as costs a greater sum than one year's enhanced rent; and such costs may be made payable by instalments. Unpaid costs are recoverable as arrears of rent (section 128). Every person affected by the proceedings is declared to be entitled to a certified copy of the Collector's statement, and of any Table of Rates, Enhanced Jamabandi, or Settlement Jamabandi prepared by the Collector, such copy to be made at his expense. A ryot is entitled to receive a certified copy of so much of any Jamabandi as concerns himself upon payment of a fee of four annas which will cover all charges.

Certified copies

Transfer of cases instituted in large numbers, by Civil Court to Collector.

§ 95. We have provided (section 130) that, when any considerable number of cases has been instituted in a Civil Court by one or more landlords against ryots holding land in the same locality, and it appears to such Court desirable that all such cases should be disposed of by the Collector, the Civil Court may make a recommendation to this effect to the District Judge to which such Court is subordinate: and the District Judge may, if he see fit, transfer such cases to the Collector, who shall proceed thereupon as if an application had been made to him in the first instance. The object of this provision is to secure economy of judicial power, when landlords, instead of applying to the Collector, bring a number of separate suits against individual ryots; and also to obtain the advantages of a general inquiry into matters in which a number of persons are interested.

§ 96. As a substitute for the expired Agrarian Disputes Act, 1876, we have enacted (section 131) that, if the Collector of a district is of opinion that, in consequence of a serious dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace having arisen upon the subject of rent in a considerable area of his district, it is expedient that proceeding should be taken to settle the rents payable by the ryots to their landlords within such area, he may record his reasons for entertaining this opinion, and may forward them through the Commissioner for the consideration of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Lieutenant-Governor, if satisfied of the expediency of taking such proceedings, may authorize such Collector to proceed of his own motion to settle such rents; and the Collector shall then proceed, as if an application had been made to him by the persons concerned.

Power of Collector to act suo motu for settlement of rents

§ 97. Such is the procedure which we have devised for the enhancement and settlement of rents. According to its provisions the Collector is bound to take action upon an application presented to him. It is very probable that, if these provisions become law, additional agency will be required in the Revenue Department. How far this requirement can be met by reduction in the department of the Civil Courts rendered possible by diminished pressure in that quarter, it is not easy to anticipate, and is probably not within the sphere of our duties to forecast. We think, however, it will be well to mention what alternative courses we consider possible, if it be thought undesirable to give immediate effect to the scheme in its present shape and in its present entirety. First, the provisions of the Enhancement Chapter (XV) might be not brought into general operation at once, but might be made extendible to any particular district by a notification to be published in the Gazette. Secondly, the preparation of a Table of Rates only might be made compulsory upon the Collector, the application of this Table to individual cases being imposed upon the Civil Courts. Thirdly, the Collector's agency might be called in only when the District Judge certified to its being desirable in consequence of a considerable number of cases being instituted from any portion of the district. Fourthly, landlords might be restricted from using the Revenue Courts for less than a particular and considerable number of cases.

Alternative courses, if the introduction of the previous scheme in its entirety be thought likely to involve too great and sudden an increase of Revenue Agency.

§ 98. We have provided (section 132) that cases for the enhancement of the rent of tenures and undertenures shall be instituted and conducted in the Civil Courts, and that all the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to them. The plaint here also must, in order to effect the rent of the following year, be presented at least four months before the expiry of the year. The Court has full power to decide all questions arising between the parties, and may declare the landlord entitled to the enhanced rent claimed, or any less rent that may be found fair and equitable.

Cases for enhancement of the rent of Tenures and Undertenures to be instituted in the Civil Courts.

§ 99. We have provided that, subject to those provisions which make a Table of Rates or an Enhanced Jamabandi binding for ten years, a ryot having a right of occupancy is entitled, on any one or more of the following grounds, to an abatement of the rent payable by him in money, namely:—

Occupancy Ryot entitled to Abatement of Rent on what grounds.

(1) on the ground that the quantity of land held by such ryot has been shown by measurement to be less than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him;

(2) on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by such ryot, as compared with such powers at the time when the rent was fixed, or at any subsequent time, have decreased from some cause beyond the ryot's control, and not merely temporary or casual;

(3) on the ground that the prices of produce in the locality or at the usual markets, as compared with similar prices at the time when the rent was fixed or at any subsequent time, have decreased from some cause beyond the ryot's control, and not merely temporary or casual.

The above three gounds are the converse of the second, third, and fourth grounds of enhancement. The first ground of enhancement finds no such converse, and we have here retained the existing law under which an occupancy ryot is not entitled to claim an abatement of the rent previously paid by him on the ground that such rent is higher than the prevailing rate paid by ryots of the same class for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the places adjacent.

Suits for Abatement of Rent by Occupancy Ryots in what Court to be instituted;

§ 100. A suit for abatement of rent by an occupancy ryot may be instituted (1) when abatement is claimed on the first or second of the grounds stated in the last paragraph, in the Civil Court or before the Collector; (2) when abatement is claimed on the third of these grounds, before the Collector only. But no such suit can be instituted before the Collector unless ten ryots at least join in bringing it: and we have declared that ten or more ryots paying rent to the same landlord may join in bringing any such rent, even although their holdings are separate and distinct. Suits for abatement of rent on account of diluvion or other cause brought by tenure-holders or under-tenure-holders must, when maintainable, be instituted in the Civil Court; and the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure are applicable thereto.

by Tenure-holders or Undertenure-holders where to be instituted.

Ryots who have held land for three or more but less than twelve years. Chapter IV the result of a compromise.

§ 101. Chapter IV treats of ryots who have held land for three or more but less than twelve years. This Chapter is the result of a compromise between different views entertained by Members of the Commission. Messrs. Mackenzie[8] and O'Kinealy are in favour of reducing from twelve to three years the period necessary to acquire a right of occupancy. Messrs. Dampier and Field would in this respect make no change in the law of 1859, believing that the number of persons likely to be benefited is not so large, or the amount of benefit likely to be conferred so great, as to compensate for the unsettling of present ideas, the disturbance of existing rights, and the consequent litigation that would probably be the result of such a new provision. In the view that there is no necessity for any change in the direction indicated, the two last mentioned Members of the Commission would prefer to have Chapter IV struck out of the Bill altogether. We proceed to notice the provisions of the Chapter.

[8] Mr. Mackenzie's views are thus stated in the following paragraphs of a Note, dated 20th January 1880, submitted by him to the Commission, and which will be found in our proceedings.

"I have already shown that the framers of Act X considered that every resident ryot had a right of occupancy, and that it was not intended to injure his position in any way. I have urged that his position has been injured by the 12-years' clause of that Act, and in this opinion I have the support of the majority of Revenue officers throughout Bengal. It is no sufficient remedy to say that the new Bill will not infringe on any term of prescription recognized by local custom. We want an easy means of determining when a ryot may or may not be arbitrarily ejected. If it is impossible now-a-days to say that no 'resident' ryot shall be so ejected, because village residence and village tillage do not now run together, then I say take the spirit of the old law and protect every ryot who gives reasonable proof of his intention to cultivate permanently the lands on which he is settled. Three years' tillage seems to afford such reasonable proof. This was the term proposed in the original draft of Act X as conferring rights of occupancy on resident ryots in lands not previously in their occupancy and for which they had no pottah."

"I cannot admit the force of Mr. Field's objections to this. I do not see that such a provision would lead to litigation. On the contrary it would prevent the litigation sure to arise, if Mr. Field's proposal to leave everything to local custom is adopted. It would go far to do away with the erroneous idea that by occupying for 12 years a man is entitled to be charged a lower rent than his neighbour for the same class of land. It does not limit injuriously the zemindars' rights, for it simplifies their relations with their ryots and puts the question of enhancement upon a uniform basis for the great mass of the ryots without distinction of class. It is desirable on political grounds, for it recognizes the title of the great body of the cultivators to the quiet possession of their fields. In so doing, and taken in connection with the proposal that the State should directly regulate enhancement, it widens the basis of agricultural prosperity, diminishes risks from famine, and tends to create a substantial tenant right without detracting from the value of that property which the zemindars have by prescription (though to a great extent in the teeth of law and justice) acquired, and of which it would now be folly to attempt to deprive them."

Mr. Mackenzie is not in favour of Chapter IV, if every cultivator, who has practically shown himself to be a settled or resident cultivator by three years' occupation is protected against arbitrary ejectment so long as he pays the established rates of the neighbourhood for occupancy ryots.

Mr. Field's views are embodied in his Note of the 13th January 1808, which will also be found with the proceedings.

§ 102. It is provided (section 26) that a ryot who, for a continuous period of three or more, but less than twelve years, has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, or has as a tenant held, land other than khamar, nijjote, or sir land let on lease for a term or year by year, shall not be evicted from such land by the landlord thereof otherwise than (a) for non-payment of rent; or (b) for a breach of some condition of his lease which expressly provides that eviction shall be the penalty of such breach; or (c) for refusal to pay an increased rent demanded by his landlord. A demand for increased rent is not limited by any of the provisions of the Bill, but notice of such demand must be given to the ryot at least three months before the end of the year. If the ryot after receipt of such notice elects to continue in possession of the land, he will be liable for the higher rent demanded. If he is unwilling to keep the land at the higher rent demanded, he can give his landlord notice of his intention to relinquish it, and he will be entitled to receive as compensation for disturbance one year's rent at the higher rate demanded by the landlord. If the landlord fails to pay such compensation within the first month of the ensuing year, the ryot shall be entitled to hold on at the old rent.

Three years' ryots protected from eviction except in certain cases.

Demand of enhanced rent.

Such ryot, declining to keep land at higher rate demanded, entitled to Compensation for Disturbance.

§ 103. Any such ryot, who is evicted on any of the three grounds abovementioned, is also declared to be entitled to receive compensation for any improvements made by him upon the land at any time while he cultivated or held it. We have defined the term "improvements" to mean works by which the cultivation of land has been lastingly facilitated, or the productive powers of land have been lastingly increased, and to include—

Such ryot, if evicted on any of the above three grounds, also entitled to Compensation for Improvements.

(a) the erection of a dwelling-house and offices suitable for the habitation of a cultivating ryot;

(b) the making of tanks, wells, and other works for the storage, supply, or distribution of water for agricultural purposes;

(c) works for the drainage of land, or for the protection of land from floods or from erosion or other damage by water;

(d) the reclaiming, clearing, or enclosing of land for agricultural purposes;

(e) the renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or alterations therein, or additions thereto;

(f) the planting of fruit trees.

§ 104. The landlord and tenant may agree on the amount and mode and time of payment of this compensation for improvements. If they cannot agree, the Civil Court may determine the amount, and in so doing shall take into consideration the following principles:—

Civil Court may assess compensation for Improvements, if parties cannot agree.

(a) The amount of the ryot's compensation in respect of an improvement shall be the sum laid out by the ryot on the improvement with a deduction of a proportionate part thereof for each year while the tenancy endures after the year of tenancy in which the outlay is made, and while the improvement continues unexhausted.

(b) In determining the amount of compensation in respect of an improvement, there shall be taken into account in reduction thereof any sum reasonably necessary to put the same into good repair or condition.

(c) Any deterioration of the holding caused by the act of the ryot shall be taken into account.

Decree to be made for amount of Compensation.

The Civil Court, having determined the compensation, shall make a decree for the amount. If such amount does not exceed fifty rupees, the decree will be final and conclusive (section 30).[6]

Three years' ryot may claim Abatement of rent, and, if landlord refuse, may relinquish land and claim Compensation.

§ 105. We have provided (section 31) that a ryot of the class now under notice may claim abatement of the rent payable by him in money on any of the grounds on which an occupancy ryot may claim abatement; and that, if the landlord is unwilling to allow the abatement to which such ryot is found to be entitled, the latter may relinquish the land and claim compensation, the measure of which shall be one year's rent at the rate from which the landlord declined to allow an abatement.

Ryots who have held land for less than three years.

§ 106. Chapter V treats of ryots who have held land for less than three years, and to these it is not proposed to give any special privilege or protection. They hold at the will of the landlord, but they may not be evicted otherwise than through the Court and upon a reasonable notice. No such ryot may sue for determination of the rent which he is to pay in future or for abatement of rent: this follows the decisions, and is the natural result of his position as a tenant-at-will. A landlord desiring to eject any such ryot must serve him through the Civil Court with a notice to quit at least three months before the expiry of the year preceding that in which he desires to resume possession of the land. If the ryot does not give up the land from the first day of the year next ensuing after service of notice, the landlord may within three months bring a suit to evict him; and, when such a suit has been instituted, the time during which the ryot continues to hold on cannot be added to previous time, so as to give the ryot the advantage of the improved position conferred by the Act on ryots, who have held for more than three years. If a decree for ejectment is ultimately passed against the ryot, he is further made liable for the full letting value of the land for the time during which he has wrongfully retained possession, and for any damages sustained by the landlord in consequence of being kept out of possession of the land (section 34). We have made the same provisions applicable to a ryot, who having been let into possession for a term less than three years refuses to give up the land upon the expiry of such term, and has not the consent, express or implied, of his landlord to hold over. We trust that these express provisions upon points as to which the present statute law is silent, and for which the decisions have not provided a sufficient guide in the case of ryots not having a right of occupancy, will be found equitable and calculated to prevent litigation in future.

Eviction of such ryots

Ryot let into possession for a fixed term of less than three years, and holding over without permission.

Three years' ryot not liable to enhancement without notice, unless he has made a written agreement to pay higher rent.

§ 107. In order to settle another point which has occasioned some difficulty in the case of ryots not having a right of occupancy, we have provided (section 35) that a ryot, who has held for less than three years shall not be liable to pay a higher rent unless he has made a written agreement to do so, or unless a notice demanding such higher rent has been served on him at least three months before the expiry of the year preceding that for which such higher rent is demanded. Such notice must set forth the grounds upon which such higher rent is demanded, but these grounds are not to be limited by anything in the Bill. If the ryot is unwilling to pay the higher rent, he may relinquish the land. If he does not relinquish it, he will be liable to pay the higher rent, but not so as that he shall pay more than double the former rent. Following the case-law we have enacted, by way of explanation, that when any such ryot is served with a notice to quit or pay a specified increased rent, and he elects to remain in possession of the land, the tenancy cannot be treated as determined, and the notice must be taken as a notice to pay the higher rent thereby demanded.

[6] In drafting these provisions as to compensation, we have utilized The Oudh Rent Act, XIX of 1868, sections 22-26; The North-Western Provinces Rent Act, XVIII of 1873, sections 44-47; The Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Act, 1870, 33 and 34 Vic., Cap. 46, sections 3-14; and The Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1875, 38 and 39 Vic., Cap. 92.

§ 108. The majority of us are of opinion that it is expedient to legislate upon the subject of land used for building houses and similar purposes, as well in agricultural villages as in towns. We believe that the non-agricultural population has increased and is increasing, and that even away from towns and cities there is, in rural villages, a considerable number of persons who, though holding no land used for agricultural purposes, occupy and in many cases have for years occupied, a site for their dwelling-house. The trading class, whom it is desirable to encourage, the mahajan, the shop-keeper, require land for their houses, shops and golahs or granaries. The zemindar in some places receives a higher rent for the land, bastu, udbastu, used for these purposes; and the construction of a new village or the extension of an old one has usually been a recognized source of legitimate profit. We think it reasonable to protect the zemindar on the one hand in the enjoyment of this source of increased income where it exists, and the tenant on the other hand from the contingency of arbitrary eviction. A successful tradesman or handicraftsman has usually a great desire to erect a pukka or brickbuilt house, but the difficulty of getting a good title to the piece of land required for the site deters him from expending his money, lest he should afterwards be ejected. In cases of ejectment leave is usually given to remove the materials; but in the case of a newly constructed brick-built house this is somewhat of a mockery. We believe that nothing contributes more to raise the standard of comfort amongst a community than the erection and use of comfortable dwellings, and we have accordingly endeavoured to afford facility and encouragement to this improvement as well amongst the agricultural as the non-agricultural class.

Legislation upon the subject of land used for Building Purposes.

§ 109. We have in the first place provided that, in the case of land used or let to be used for agriculture, horticulture, pasture or other similar purpose, a ryot may not, without the permission of his landlord, use any portion of such land for building or any other purpose inconsistent with that for which it was previously used or let to be used; but that a ryot may, without his landlord's permission, erect upon his holding a brickbuilt or other dwelling-house suitable for the use and occupation of himself and his family, together with such out-houses and offices as may be necessary thereto. The effect of this will be that, although a ryot will be authorized to erect a suitable and comfortable residence for himself, and will be protected if he does so, he will yet have no right to erect a pucca shop or manufactory on his land, or convert his holding into building sites for houses to be occupied by third parties. If a new town or village springs up, and arable land is required for building purposes, the right-of-occupancy ryot cannot appropriate the whole of the increased value which would be given to the land by its being used for building purposes, for without the landlord's permission he cannot use it for these purposes. The landlord is equally unable to appropriate the whole of this increased value, for, as the ryot is in possession and cannot be evicted, he cannot let the land to a third person who may desire to build upon it. As therefore building operations cannot be commenced without the consent of both landlord and ryot, and as it is for their mutual benefit that some arrangement should be made for the division of the increased value, it is reasonable to expect that self-interest will lead to the making of such an arrangement, the result of which will be that both the persons, whose united interests constitute property, will share in the increase of value (see section 36 of the Draft Bill).

Ryot may erect brick-built or other suitable residence upon his holding for his own use.

but may not use the land to build houses for third parties.

§ 110. If the ryot, without obtaining the permission of his landlord, begins to change the use of the land, the landlord may serve Procedure if ryot changes the use of the land without the landlord's permission; and landlord is diligent in asserting his rights him with a notice requiring him to desist. If the ryot does not attend to this notice, the landlord may then go to the Civil Court and obtain a mandatory injunction. If the ryot does not obey this injunction, he may be ejected by the Civil Court, and may be required to pay, by way of damages, a sum sufficient to restore the land to its former condition. Messrs. Mackenzie and O'Kinealy object to the ryot being made liable to ejectment, but a majority of us consider this sanction advisable. It is to be observed that, if the ryot claims to be entitled on other grounds to change the use of the land, he can put this claim forward as a defence to the landlord's suit for a mandatory injunction. Having thus afforded him an opportunity of contesting the justice of the landlord's position, we think it not unreasonable to say that if, having paid no attention to the landlord's notice in the first instance, he further persists in treating the Court's injunction with contempt, he may be ejected (section 38 of the Draft Bill).

Procedure where landlord sleeps over his rights.

§ 111. Owing to the uncertain state of the law, many ryots entertain a bonâ fide belief that they may build as they please upon their land. We have therefore provided that, when a ryot begins to change the use of his land, and his landlord not being diligent in looking after his property delays to serve him with notice to desist and to follow it up by obtaining a mandatory injunction, even if such an injunction is afterwards obtained, the ryot shall not be liable to eviction, and he shall be entitled to compensation for loss sustained by him in consequence of his having to remove any buildings or works erected by him before he received notice to desist. This, it will be observed, is a different case from that which follows, and where the ryot is able to show that his landlord was aware of what he was doing, and being aware stood by in silence and allowed him to expend his money on building or other works. It may be said that, if this Bill be passed, the state of the law will no longer be uncertain, and the ryot will be aware that he has no right to build except for his own residence; that, therefore, if he builds in violation of the law, it is not reasonable to give him compensation for taking down a building which he has erected without a shadow of right. To this it must be replied that, in these matters of private right depending upon civil enactment and not involving a violation of the law of nature, we think that the maxim—Ignorantia juris non excusat—has been pushed too far. Whatever presumption there may be in these provinces that an educated zemindar knows the laws made by Government and published in the Gazette, this presumption is very much less in the case of the illiterate ryot. In this view we make a great difference between the case of the landlord who in this matter is watchful of his rights and prompt to enforce them, and the case of the landlord who is remiss and inattentive in the management of his property.

Landlord estopped from objecting to the use of the land being changed in certain cases.

§ 112. But there is a third case, namely, where the landlord, being aware that the ryot has begun to change the use of the land, makes no objection and allows him to go on expending his money on building or other work. In this case, and also where the landlord has for two years given no notice to desist—and here it is immaterial whether he was or was not aware—we have provided that the landlord shall be estopped from afterwards objecting to the change in the use of the land. To those who regard a ryot having a right of occupancy from the stand-point of the English law of Landlord and Tenant, we shall not be surprised if some of these provisions appear objectionable; but, if the ryot be admitted to have certain rights in the land, the judgment pronounced upon them will be different.

§ 113. When land has been customarily used, or has been let to be used for building or for any purpose other than agriculture, horticulture, pasture or the like, we have provided that a tenant, who has been in the immediate possession thereof for the full period of twelve years, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, acquire a right of occupancy therein and shall not be liable to be ejected. We have, however, thought that this provision should not be made retroactive; and no time antecedent to the commencement of the Act can therefore be reckoned in the computation of the twelve years required to create this right of occupancy. The interest so acquired has been declared to be heritable, transferable, and devisable, and also liable to sale in execution of any decree of the Civil Court. If the tenant does not pay his rent, the landlord may bring the land, together with any buildings thereupon, to sale in execution of any decree obtained for arrears of such rent (section 41 of the Draft Bill). We have further provided that the rent of any such holding, if not enhanced during the previous ten years, may be enhanced so as to be equal to the rent paid by other tenants for land in the neighbourhood having similar advantages and used for similar purposes, or so that it may be equal to five[7] per centum of the market value of the land (section 42). We trust that those provisions will in course of time settle the mutual rights of landlords and tenants of land occupied with buildings.[8]

Right of Occupancy may be acquired in land used for Building or other similar purposes. Nature and incidents of this Right of Occupancy.

§ 114. Whether the doctrine of Merger applies in the Mofussil is a question upon which the decisions of the highest tribunals are not of one accord. Any doubt as to the state of the law on a point like this is certain to create litigation, which can be prevented by making the law clear and indubitable. In a country where there are so many interests intermediate between the zemindar at the top and the cultivator at the bottom, it is especially important that it should be known exactly what consequences ensue when the zemindar or the owner of any intermediate interest acquires the interest immediately subordinate to his own. We have provided (section 43) that when by purchase at a private or public sale, or by gift, succession, or will, the proprietor of an estate becomes the owner of a tenure in such estate, such tenure shall, unless such proprietor can show that he had a contrary intention, be presumed to be merged in the proprietary interest and extinguished by the fact of the same person being owner of the estate and the tenure. The same provision is made applicable to the owner of any superior interest acquiring the interest immediately subordinate thereto (section 44). We have here followed the principle of equitable Merger which is governed by the intention (if it be a just and fair intention) of the person in whom the two interests unite, and by the purposes of justice. Having regard to the frailty of oral evidence in this country, we have, however, cast upon the person in whom the interests meet the burden of showing an intention to keep them separate by producing a duly registered deed declaratory of such intention, and by proving that a copy of this deed was published upon the land included in the tenure or undertenure. This evidence of intention is required when three months have elapsed from the date of the Merger. This interval will afford sufficient time for consideration and for the execution of the deed in those cases in which it is decided to prevent the Merger.

Doubts as to the applicability of the doctrine of Merger removed by express provisions.

§ 115. We have provided that there shall be no Merger when the superior interest belongs to several coparceners, some but not all of whom acquire the interest immediately subordinate. Any other rule would be productive of confusion, regard being had to the peculiar Cases in which Merger shall not take place.

[7] Here as elsewhere in the Bill the figures inserted should be regarded as tentative merely, to be changed for good reason shown by those who criticize the Bill.

[8] The present state of the law in Bengal and the North-Western Provinces as to land used for Building and other Non-agricultural purposes will be found summarized in Mr. Field's Note of the 24th December 1879, which has been placed with the proceedings of the Commission.

nature of coparcenary. We have enacted that the presumption of Merger shall not arise in the case of a minor until he becomes of full age, or in the case of a person of unsound mind until he becomes of sound mind. As the presumption is made to depend upon intention, it cannot reasonably have effect until the person, in whom the interests meet, is capable of a legal intention. It would be inequitable that, apart from the provisions of law as to the avoidance of incumbrances by the sale of a tenure or undertenure for arrears of its own rent, persons having a lien upon the inferior interest, or holding as tenants under the former owner of such interest, should be prejudiced. We have accordingly provided for the protection of such persons and their rights.[9] The question of Merger, when Government acquires an estate and the paramount title and proprietary interest thus meet in the person of Government, has already been referred to in paragraph 5 above.

Protection of persons having a lien upon, or holding as tenants under, the inferior interest

§ 116. The registration of transfers of tenures and undertenures in the sarrishta of the superior landlord, is a subject which has on more than one occasion received the attention of the Legislature. Since the earliest times a record has been kept in the Collectorate of the transfers of revenue-paying estates, in order that Government might be apprized as to who is the person for the time being liable to pay the revenue. When patni tenures were created, their incidents were in many respects assimilated to those of revenue-paying estates. We may take, for example, the liability to sale for arrears, the avoidance of incumbrances by such a sale, and further (which is pertinent to our present subject) the registration of transfers. The proprietor was required, upon a fee being paid and security being given, to register all transfers and otherwise give effect to them by discharging the transferrer from personal responsibility and accepting the engagements of the transferree. Act X of 1859 required all dependent talukdars and other persons possessing a permanent transferable interest in land intermediate between the zemindar and the cultivators to register in the sarrishta of the zemindar or superior tenant, to whom the rents of their taluks or tenures were payable, all transfers of such taluks or tenures or portions of them by sale, gift or otherwise, as well as all successions thereto and divisions among heirs in cases of inheritance. The zemindar or superior tenant was further required to admit to registry, and otherwise give effect to all such transfers when made in good faith, and all such successions and divisions, and, if he refused to do so, an application could be made to the Collector who was empowered to inquire and, if he saw fit, make an order for registration. Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869 reproduced so much of these provisions as required the tenant on the one hand to register, and the landlord on the other hand to admit to registry; it omitted any provision for compelling the landlord to admit to registry, no doubt because it was thought unnecessary to make any such express provision, when the cognizance of all cases arising out of the relation of landlord and tenant was transferred from the Revenue to the Civil Courts. The right being declared, the Civil Court could afford a remedy.

Registration of Transfers of Tenures and Undertenures.

Provisions of the former law on the subject.

§ 117. When a patni tenure was sold in execution of a decree and the purchaser did not within one month register his purchase, the zemindar was empowered to send a sazawal and attach the tenure; and so also, if a purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent failed for one month to furnish security when required by the zemindar. In other cases, however, the landlord had no means of compelling the transferee to register; and non-registration in the case of private transfers

Failure of the former law, because Landlord

[9] The present state of the law of Merger will be found summarized in Mr. Field's Note of the 19th December 1879, annexed to the proceedings of the Commission.

soon became usual. Two causes contributed to this. First, the landlord was by law entitled to a fee upon registration of the transfer of a patni tenure; and the payment of such a fee was customary in the case of other tenures and undertenures. The payment of this fee was avoided by not registering the transfer. Secondly, the habit of holding land bénami was facilitated by secret private transfers. Persons unacquainted with the customs of this country may ask how the transfer could be kept secret when the transferree has to pay the rent. The answer is to be found in a practice very prevalent in this country. Rent is ordinarily received from any one who brings it, but the receipt is granted in the name of the person, whose name stands in the landlord's books. Thus a receipt may be given in the name of a man who died forty years ago, the payment being stated therein to be made marfat, guzrat, i.e., by, or through the person, who actually brought the money. This practice, which appears to us to be a very mischievous one, constantly leads to litigation, when a balance of rent remains unpaid after the sale of the tenure, or when for other purposes it is necessary to ascertain the real owner of the tenure.

had no means of compelling the registration of Transfers except in a few cases.

§ 118. Turning now to the provisions of the Draft Bill, we have enacted (section 46) that every succession to, or transfer of, a tenure or undertenure or any portion thereof, or of an occupancy holding shall, within three months after such transfer or succession, be registered in the Sarrishta or Rent-office of the landlord to whom the rent of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding is payable. It may possibly be that the period of three months here allowed is too short, and that six months would be a more proper period. The landlord is required to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to every such transfer or succession, but no landlord is required to give effect to any division or distribution of the rent, nor shall any such division or distribution be valid against him without his consent in writing. We have defined the term "transfer" to mean a transfer by private sale, gift, or exchange, or by sale in execution of a decree; and we have defined "succession" to mean devolution by will or by inheritance. We have declared the landlord entitled to a fee upon every registration of a transfer or succession, such fee to be two per centum of the annual rent, but not to be less in any case than one rupee, or more than one hundred rupees (section 47). We have provided that, in every case of transfer not being a transfer by sale in execution of a decree, the transferrer shall cease to be, and the transferree shall become, personally liable for the rent from and after the date of application for registry. This applies to cases of private transfer, which must be known both to the transferrer and the transferree, who thus have it in their power to regulate their liability for the rent falling due subsequent to the transfer (section 48). If no application is made for the registration of the transfer, the transferrer remains liable for the rent, and the landlord is not bound to recognize the transfer (section 49). It is thus made the interest both of the transferrer and of the transferree to have the transfer registered—of the former, that he may escape liability for future rent—of the latter, that he may be able to assert his rights as tenant. When the transfer is by sale in execution of a decree for arrears of the rent of the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, the transferree or purchaser becomes liable for the rent from the date of the confirmation of the sale by the Court. Here, as the sale is made at the instance of the landlord, he must be presumed to be aware of it, and it would be unreasonable to hold the late tenant responsible for the rent after the confirmation of the sale. When the transfer is by an execution sale not being a sale for arrears of rent, the landlord does not necessarily know of the sale. The tenant, Provisions of the Draft Bill as to the Registration of Transfers of Tenures, Undertenures, and Occupancy Holdings.

whose interest is sold in execution, must be presumed to know of the proceedings before and after decree, and we have therefore imposed upon him the duty of giving the landlord notice of the sale, if he wishes to be absolved from personal liability for rent. In cases of succession we have declared the person succeeding to be, upon taking possession, personally liable for the rent from and after the death of the previous tenant. It will be remembered that in all these cases the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding can be sold for arrears of its own rent, and that the question of personal liability becomes important only when the arrears are not liquidated by the sale of the tenure, undertenure or holding.

Consequence of Non-registration of Transfer or Succession in the case of a Tenure or Undertenure § 119. The consequence of non-registration of a private transfer is, as we have just explained, that the former tenant is not discharged from his liability for the rent, and the landlord is not bound to recognize the transfer. The position of the latter is therefore not altered to his detriment. In cases of transfer of a tenure or undertenure by execution sale, and in cases of succession, we have provided that, if application is not made for registration within three months, the landlord may attach the tenure or undertenure and collect the rents, for any surplus of which over and above his own head-rent and the collection-expenses he is however liable to account. The attachment may be continued until the transfer or succession is registered, and, if the collections are insufficient to discharge the head-rent, the superior landlord may bring the tenure or undertenure to sale. If after the sale there is still a deficiency, he may proceed to make the transferree personally liable. Mr. O'Kinealy is opposed to extending the right of attachment to undertenures.

Consequence of Non-registration of a Transfer or Succession in the case of an Occupancy Holding.

§ 120. In cases of succession to occupancy holdings and of their transfer by execution sale, a somewhat different procedure is necessary, as they are usually cultivated by the occupier and in this case there are no rents to collect. We have accordingly allowed the landlord to attach the holding, when registration has not been applied for within three months, and cultivate it or let it for cultivation. If registration is not applied for before the expiry of the year next ensuing after the succession or transfer, we have provided that the holding shall be at the absolute disposal of the landlord. We think that, if the person succeeding or purchasing takes no steps to effect registration for more than a year, this may reasonably be taken as an abandonment of the holding—(section 51).

Time within which Registration must be applied for. After this time, Registration only on payment of ten times the fee.

§ 121. We have provided (section 46) that application for registration shall be made within three months after the date of the succession or transfer, and in this case the fee, to which the landlord will be entitled upon registration, is two per centum of the annual rent. If registration is not applied for within three months, we considered what the penalty should be for failing to apply within time. Forfeiture of the tenure or undertenure was suggested, but we are all agreed that this would be too severe, and a majority of us have finally decided that it will be sufficient to provide that the penalty for coming after the three months shall be the payment of ten times the ordinary fee, subject however to a minimum of ten rupees and a maximum of one thousand. The same rule applies to an occupancy holding after the three months and before the expiry of the year next ensuing after the succession or transfer by execution sale. Mr. O'Kinealy would not impose any additional fee by way of penalty, and would limit the sanction for non-registration to the landlord's not being bound to recognize the succession or transfer. Where a landlord without just cause refuses to register a transfer or succession, we have provided for a civil suit to compel him; and, if pecuniary loss has resulted from his refusal, the Civil Court may award damages to the person injured. We have enacted that the Board of Revenue may prescribe

If Landlord refuses to register, Civil Court may compel him and for any class of landlords a form of Register of successions to, and transfers of, tenures, undertenures and occupancy holdings: and that, when any such form has been prescribed, every person concerned in any such succession or transfer shall be entitled to a copy of the entry relating thereto on payment of a fee of four annas. Having regard to the large number of petty landlords in these provinces, we considered that we ought not to prescribe this Register for all landlords generally, while in large estates such a Register may be maintained with most of the advantages of a Court Roll in an English Manor.

may award damages

Board may prescribe form of Register of Transfers and Successions

§ 122. The only class of tenure-holders, who, under the existing law are required to give security for the payment of their rent, are patnidars. In every case of transfer of a patni tenure by private sale, gift or exchange, or by sale in execution of a decree, the transferee may be required to give substantial security to the amount of half the yearly rent; and, if such security be not furnished, the proprietor may refuse to register the transfer. We have reproduced these provisions relating to patni tenures; but it has suggested itself as a matter for consideration, whether similar provisions might not well be made for all tenures, undertenures, and occupancy holdings, which are made saleable in execution of decrees for their own arrears of rent. We have not before us sufficient materials to enable us to settle this question to our satisfaction, but we recommend that it be not lost sight of in any further discussion of the whole subject which may ensue upon the publication of this Report.

Security for Payment of Rent upon Registration of Transfer § 123. We have declared that the rent payable by a ryot shall be paid in four quarterly instalments falling due upon the 1st Asarh, the 1st Asin, the 1st Pous, and the 1st Cheit respectively. When the instalments of rent have been regulated by any agreement or custom, then the Asarh instalment shall be the total of the instalments payable according thereto during the months Beisakh, Jeyt, and Asarh; the Asin instalment shall be the total of the instalments payable in the months Sraban. Bhadro, and Asin; the Pous instalment shall be the total of the instalments payable in Kartik, Aghun, and Pous, and the Cheit instalment shall be the total of the instalments payable in Magh, Falgun, and Cheit. It will be important to ascertain whether these dates and months will be suitable for all districts in Bengal and Behar. When no such agreement or custom exists, the Collector is to determine what proportion of the whole rent shall be payable at each quarterly instalment, and is to publish throughout his district the proportions so settled. In the case of rent payable by tenure-holders and undertenure-holders, we have allowed the parties to contract as to the instalments most convenient to both parties—(section 55) Where no such contract has been made, such rent is to be payable, as ryots' rent, in four quarterly instalments. Any instalment of rent not paid before sunset of the date, on which it is due according to the above provisions, is to be deemed an arrear of rent and is to bear interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum. We have made it imperative upon the Courts to decree this interest, unless the tenant can show that he was prevented by causes beyond his own control, as for example by a total failure of the crops, from paying his rent at the proper time A majority of us consider that this is a reasonable concession to landlords, as we propose to take away the frequent instalments in which ryots' rent is now payable by usage or agreement, and to allow no interest for the interval between the dates on which rent is so payable and the new dates substituted by the Bill.

Arrears of rent and interest thereupon

§ 124. As to receipts for rent we have substantially adopted the provisions of Mr. Mackenzie's Bill. We have declared that every enant, who makes a payment to his landlord of rent or of any money recoverable as rent, is entitled to obtain thereupon and without delay a receipt for the amount so paid. The words in italics are new and include road-cess, sums payable under "The Bengal Embankment Act, 1873," under "The Bengal Survey Act, 1875" and other Acts, which have made certain sums recoverable as arrears of rent. We have not thought it desirable to prescribe any particular form in which receipts should be given, but we have prescribed the essential particulars which they must contain, viz. the date of payment; the amount paid, or, where rent is paid in kind, the quantity of produce delivered; the tenure, undertenure, holding or land, and the instalment and year, in respect of which the payment is made. The receipt may be in any form so long as it contains these essential particulars. We have further provided that every tenant is entitled to receive at the close of the year a statement of account showing the tenure, undertenure, holding or land for which the rent is payable; the annual rent payable; the amount in arrear at the beginning of the year; the payments made during the year; the portion of each payment credited to arrears and to current rent; and the amount in arrear at the close of the year. This is in fact the akhiri dakhilah, or final receipt usual in the country under different names, but with the particulars essential to enable the tenant to know his exact position towards his landlord. We have further enacted that the landlord shall keep counterparts of the receipts and the account-statements; and that he shall provide himself with forms of such receipts and account-statements with the counterparts attached, bound together in books containing not less than twenty-five each and consecutively numbered. We have allowed six months after the commencement of the Act for landlords to provide themselves with the necessary forms. After that time the omission or refusal to give a tenant on demand a receipt or statement of account containing the above particulars shall subject the landlord to the penalty provided for withholding a receipt for rent paid (section 57).

Deposit of Rent—Duties connected with, transferred from the Civil Courts to the Revenue Authorities.

§ 125. We have made important alterations and amendments in the law relating to the Deposit of Rent. In the first place we have transferred the duty of receiving these deposits from the Civil Courts to the Revenue Authorities, and we have allowed rent to be deposited not only at the Collectorate Treasury at head-quarters, but also at Sub-divisional Treasuries. We think that, where Sub-divisions have been established, the benefit of the sub-divisional system should be afforded to the people in this as well as other respects. Under the existing law there is only one case in which rent can be deposited, namely, when the tenant has tendered the rent to his landlord and the landlord has refused to receive it. We have retained this and have provided for two other cases—(1) when the rent is payable to coparceners, who have not appointed, and on behalf of whom the District Judge has not appointed, a common manager, and the tenant is unable to obtain their joint receipt;—(2) when, in consequence of a disputed succession or other cause, the tenant entertains a bonâ fide doubt as to who is entitled to the rent. We trust that the result of these changes will be, in the first case, to constrain coparceners to make proper arrangements for the collection of their rents; and in the second case, to check the unwholesome practice of litigating questions of disputed title by collateral issues raised in rent suits; and in both cases to save the ryots from much harassment. We are aware that the facility afforded to tenants of depositing their rent in cases of tender made and refused has been abused to a certain extent, rent being too often deposited without any tender having been made, and it being impossible to bring persons, who have made false statements, to punishment in consequence of the very general nature of the allegations inserted in their petitions. To prevent abuse of the law as amended, we have now provided that, in cases of tender, the deposit must be made within ten clear days from the date of the tender; and in other cases, within fifteen clear days from the day on which the rent fell due. The deposit is to be made by presenting a written application and with it a written declaration. In cases of tender this declaration is to set forth the date of such tender and the persons in whose presence it was made. In other cases, it is to set forth sufficient facts to enable the Revenue Authorities to judge whether the case falls within the provisions of the Act. The amount deposited must be the full amount of rent due up to date, with, in the case of a tender, the interest (if any) due thereupon at the date of tender. The officer in charge of the Collectorate or Sub-divisional Treasury is required to give a receipt for the rent so deposited, and this receipt is declared to have the effect of a legal acquittance.

Deposit of rent allowed in two new cases

Precautions against abuse of the law

Probable effect of these provisions in creating work at the Treasuries - Plan for reducing the possible pressure

§ 126. The effect of these provisions together with the provisions as to quarterly instalments of rent will be, that on four occasions in the year, during some ten or fifteen days, there will be a pressure of work at the Treasuries at Head-quarters and at Sub-divisions. This pressure may be very considerable upon the occurrence of abnormal circumstances, but as Local Authorities will be fully informed of the time of its possible occurrence, they can be prepared for it. We have endeavoured to abridge the work of issuing notices of deposits to the landlords, by providing that the Treasury Officer shall post in a conspicuous place in his Office a notification of such deposits having been made, addressed to the persons entitled to the rents. Refund of deposits

As most landlords of any position have agents or mukhtars about the Collectorate and Sub-divisional offices, the probable effect will be that such agents on seeing the lists of deposits will draw the money without delay, and that the trouble of issuing individual notices will be obviated. If no application for the money is made on the part of the landlord within fifteen days after such notification has been posted, the Treasury Officer shall within a further period of fifteen days after the expiry of the first-mentioned fifteen days cause a notice to be served upon him. The cost of serving this notice will be deducted from the amount of the deposit. This will make it the interest of landlords to inspect the lists of deposits and obtain the money before the notice is served. The rent deposited may be paid, in the case of a tender, to the person entitled to it; in the case of coparceners, upon their joint receipt or that of their common manager, when a common manager has been appointed; and in cases of disputed title, to the claimants upon their joint receipt, or to any of them who has obtained a decree establishing his title to the whole or part of it. If no payment be made for three years, the amount deposited may be refunded to the depositor upon his giving back the receipt given him at the Treasury for the money when deposited. This, of course, is not meant to interfere with the rules of the Account Department, which require the special order of the Accountant-General before deposits of more than three years' standing can be repaid. In order to meet cases in which, notwithstanding the deposit, the landlord has sued for the rent and has obtained a decree because the deposit was not made in accordance with the provisions of the law, we have enacted that before the expiry of three years the amount may be paid, upon the joint application of the depositor and the person entitled to the rent, in any manner requested in such application. This will enable the money deposited to be made available in satisfaction of the decree obtained for the rent improperly deposited.

Apportionment of Rent—No sufficient provision for, in the existing law

§ 127. Another fruitful source of litigation and harassment to the ryots is the want of sufficient provision for the apportionment of rent. When revenue-paying estates belonging to coparceners are partitioned between them by metes and bounds, "The Estates Partition Act, 1876" (VIII, (B.C.)) provides certain rules for the apportionment of the rent of tenants, whose lands fall partly within one share and partly within another. There are, however, no similar rules applicable when revenue-free land, or a tenure or undertenure in revenue-paying land, is divided, either in consequence of part being sold, or by reason of a partition between co-heirs which can be enforced in the Civil Courts. The objection to apportionment of rent is, that the tenant is thereby exposed to several suits for a thing which was originally entire, and that he ought not to be obliged to pay his rent in different parcels and to several landlords, when he contracted to pay in one entire sum to one person. This is an argument put forward wholly in the interest of the tenant, and we think that, if the convenience of the tenant alone is to be considered, any supposed advantage obtained by him in paying his rent in one parcel is in this country more than counterbalanced by the worry to which he is sure to be exposed, when his landlord's property is split up and his land falls within two or more of the shares into which it is divided. Any argument drawn from the convenience of the tenant is here in favour of apportionment rather than otherwise. Were this not so, we would yet agree with those who observe that apportionment of rent is required by the necessities of mankind, by the exigencies of families, by the demands of business; that the tenant can avoid a multiplicity of suits by punctuality of payment; and that it is difficult to see the reality of the hardship to which he is exposed, since he has to pay no more in the end than his stipulated or customary rent.

Advantages of Apportionment

Provisions of the Draft Bill as to Apportionment of Rent

§ 128. We have accordingly provided that when two or more persons become separately entitled to separate portions of an area of land which forms the subject of a separate tenancy, and such portions have been or can be divided by metes and bounds, such persons shall be entitled to have such rent apportioned, and after its apportionment to receive separately the shares of rent apportioned upon such portions respectively (section 62). We have further provided that the apportionment may be made by mutual agreement between such persons and the tenant; but, if they cannot agree, the Civil Court may, upon the application of any of them, proceed to make the apportionment, and may for this purpose direct a measurement of the whole or any portion of the land. We may observe that the facility afforded to tenants of depositing their rents in cases of disputed claim between their landlords will have the effect of constraining the latter in many cases to take steps for apportionment either by mutual accommodation or by proceedings in Court.

Every Tenure, Undertenure, and Occupancy Holding declared to be hypothecated for the rent thereof

§ 129. We have declared every tenure, undertenure, and occupancy holding to be hypothecated for its own rent, and that such rent shall be a first charge thereupon (section 64). We have then enacted that, when the rent is in arrear, the landlord shall not be entitled to resort to any other process for the recovery thereof, until he has first brought the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding to sale, either in a summary manner (in those cases to which the provisions of Chapter XVI are applicable) or in execution of a decree for rent. A very important change is involved in these provisions. As the law now stands, the produce of the land is, but the land itself is not, hypothecated for the rent. The hypothecation of the produce is part of the law of distraint which we have abolished. We think that by hypothecating the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding for the rent, by making the rent a first charge upon it, and by compelling the landlord to proceed in the first instance against the tenure, undertenure or holding, we shall, on the one hand, secure to the landlord punctual payment of his rent, or effectual facility in realizing it when not paid—regard being here further had to the Procedure-provisions of the Bill—and, on the other hand, protect the tenant from useless harassment. Realization of arrears of revenue or rent by the sale of the defaulter's interest is a principle now long established in the country and well understood by the people. That as a means it is successful, we know from experience of its operation in the case of revenue-paying estates, patni taluks, and other tenures. We have every reason to conclude that it will be equally successful in the case of occupancy holdings. Indeed, we are not without previous experience in respect of these also, many landlords, of their own option and as the readiest way of getting their rent, having brought ryots' holdings to sale in execution of decrees obtained for rent. The largest amount of rent which a landlord can sue to recover is about four years' rent. There are few occupancy holdings in fairly populated districts which are not worth four years' rent with the costs of getting a decree for it. If the landlord has any doubt on this point, he need not allow more than a single year's rent, or even than a single quarter's rent, to fall into arrear without suing for it.

Consideration of these provisions

§ 130. We hope that the procedure which we have provided will enable a landlord to obtain a decree without unreasonable delay. Having obtained his decree, he can at once proceed to sell the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding. It is well known that, if a ryot has the means of paying, there is no more effective way of making him pay than putting up his jumma or holding to sale. He will go to prison for a debt, if he is sure of having his land when he comes out. He will let his cattle be sold, for he may hope to purchase others as good in their place. But his land, whereon stands his homestead, where he was born and spent his childhood and boyhood, the fields which his father and his father's father cultivated, find for him no substitute, if they pass into the hands of strangers. As a means then of compelling the ryot to pay, who can pay, we believe that the advertised sale of his jumma or holding will be most effectual. It from misfortune or other cause the ryot is unable to pay, the sale is, as we have shown, almost certain to satisfy the landlord's claim for rent. In compelling the landlord then to proceed to the sale, we compel him to do what is for his immediate interest. But it may be said that the landlord may not wish to be hard on his ryot, may not wish to deprive him of his land, may be satisfied with part of the debt, and may be willing to wait for the rest until the ryot is in more fortunate circumstances, and that, if allowed to take the ryot's movables or put him in jail, he may accomplish this. We are not prepared to accept these arguments or take this view. We think that the threatened sale of his holding will have as strong a compulsory effect as putting him in jail; while the seizure of his movables will only leave him unable to carry on the cultivation. If the landlord desires to exercise mercy and forbearance towards an unfortunate ryot who does not pay, not because he will not, but because he cannot—let him stay his hand and not execute the decree. He is not bound to proceed to the sale of the holding. If the ryot can pay even part, let him take it and certify the payment to the Court. There is nothing in the law to hinder him from doing so.

Sale of a ryot's holding the most effectual way of making him pay if he can, and of realizing the rent, if he cannot

Examination of the question from the Landlord's point of view

§ 131. So much for the question from the point of view of the landlord's interest; let us now examine it from the point of view of the ryot's interest. We think that the dread of losing his land by a sale will operate to make the ryot more careful to pay his rent and not get into arrears. It may be said—why has not the fear of ejectment done this—why should the dread of a sale be more effectual than the dread of ejectment? To this we reply that, unless in the case of a ryot who has become really obnoxious to his landlord, and whom that landlord is determined to get rid of at any price, ejectment is not usually enforced; the ryot pays a trifling salámi or agrees to pay a little more rent, and either the decree for eviction is not executed or, if it is executed, he is allowed to resume possession. But, in the case of a sale, the land passes to a stranger, and return to possession becomes impossible. If the ryot is unable to pay his rent because of indolence or bad cultivation, it is for the interest of the community that the land should be sold and come into better hands. If, by the operation of the Hindoo or Mahomedan law of inheritance, the holding comes into the possession of a number of co-sharers who cannot agree, and owing to their dissensions and consequent bad management the rent gets into arrear, a sale and a transfer thereby to the hands of more efficient husbandmen will counteract the tendency of that law to create too minute sub-divisions. The fact of holdings being purchaseable, combined with the prevailing and general desire to invest savings in land, may encourage thrift. We know that in some parts of Eastern Bengal the holdings and undertenures there existing are a very favourite investment for savings, and that men save in order to purchase them. Then to look at the matter in another way, if the land is over rented, if it is worthless, or its area has been diminished by diluvion and the ryot is unable to bear the expense of a suit for abatement, or does not really care to keep the jumma, a sale is a ready means of getting the full value, the surplus over and above the rent being payable to the ryot. If, on the contrary, the ryot has improved the holding and desires to realize the value of his improvements, by allowing his rent to fall into arrear he can bring about a sale, the surplus proceeds of which over and above the rent due to the landlord will be paid over to him. We may observe that even now it is by no means uncommon to effect a transfer by a sale through the Court brought about by a wilful default, some purchasers thinking that in this way they get a better title.

Examination of the question from the Ryot's point of view

§ 132. We have so far discussed the proposed change mainly in connection with occupancy holdings, because we think that it concerns them chiefly. Although tenures and undertenures are not at present hypothecated for their own rent by any express provision of law, they are in a great measure practically so, this being the result of the decisions as to the landlord's right to follow the tenure or undertenure in execution of a decree obtained by him for rent; and the usual practice is to realize unpaid arrears by a sale either under the Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819) where it applies, or after decree in execution under the provisions contained in Act VIII (B.C.) of 1865, or Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869. The new provisions will therefore make no substantial change so far as tenures and undertenures are concerned. There are, however, two points which partake of the nature of an exception to this general statement and which may well be noticed here. We have provided (section 207(b)) that where a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding is put up to auction in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, and no bid is made for it, the decree-holder, i.e., the landlord, shall be required to bid for it, and if he refuses to do so, he shall not be entitled to proceed to execute his decree against the person or other property of the judgment-debtor. The object of this provision may be explained in a few words. A tenure-holder or undertenure-holder cannot relinquish his tenure or undertenure, in the same manner as a ryot can relinquish his holding. It may happen that a tenure or undertenure may become utterly worthless. One of the great rivers may cover it with sand, or it may be overrun with a noxious weed inimical to cultivation. As the law now stands, the unfortunate tenant may have to go on paying rent for an instrument of production which yields him nothing. If he does not pay, he is sued and a decree obtained against him. No one will bid for the tenure or undertenure, and so he and his other property are liable to be taken Proposed provisions will, generally speaking, make no real change so far as Tenures and Undertenures are concerned.

Two important amendments

Landlord compelled to purchase at sale, if no other person will in execution. If he is a person of substance, the landlord succeeds in getting rent year after year for what is utterly worthless. Under the provisions we propose to make, this can happen once, and not oftener. The landlord must bid and purchase, and this purchase relieves the tenant from further liability. This amendment of the present law is in the interest of the tenant; the following is in the interest of the landlord. We have enacted (section 211, (3)) that the landlord may be paid from the surplus sale-proceeds any rent which fell due before the sale and after the date upon which the latest arrear recovered by the decree became due—provided, however, that the decree-holder shall not under this rule recover any rent which he might have included in the suit in which he obtained the decree, and provided also that in no case shall he obtain rent for more than six months after the date of the final decree. In case of dispute as to any such rent being due, the Court is to decide. The effect of these provisions will be to prevent multiplicity of suits and to secure the landlord against loss of arrears, which are sometimes very difficult to recover by enforcing a personal liability, when the tenure or undertenure has been sold.

Shall Landlord's claim for rent rank pari passu with other debts or be allowed a preference?

§ 133. The draft of this section (64), as first prepared by Mr. Field, contained the following additional passage:—"If any such tenure or undertenure, or in any case in which a holding is so saleable, any such holding be brought to sale in execution of a decree for money, obtained by a person other than the landlord, such landlord shall be entitled to be first paid out of the sale-proceeds any rent which may be due to him in respect of such tenure, undertenure or holding; and the balance only of such sale-proceeds after such payment of rent shall be available for the liquidation of the decree-holder's claim or for distribution amongst creditors entitled to such distribution." A majority of us decided to omit these words in the Draft of the Bill, but we think that the matter of the words so omitted ought to be noticed, as, if the Bill comes before Council, a different opinion may prevail. According to the existing law a landlord's claim for rent has no preference: and, in the case of his tenant being declared an insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX of The Code of Civil Procedure, he can take only rateably along with the other creditors. We may observe that, according to the law of England, and also, we believe, of America, a landlord has no priority over other creditors; but, in order to prevent collusion between tenants and their judgment-creditors to defeat the landlord's remedy, it was enacted by the 8th Ann, Chapter 14, section 1, that no goods or chattels whatsoever lying or being in or upon any messuage, lands or tenements, shall be liable to be taken by virtue of any execution on any pretence whatsoever, unless the party at whose suit the said execution is sued out shall, before the removal of such goods from off the said premises, pay to the landlord or his bailiff all such sum or sums of money as are or shall be due for rent at the time of the taking of such goods or chattels, provided that the said arrears of rent do not amount to more than one year's rent.

8 Ann. Cap. 14 section 1.

When rent is payable to Coparceners and dissension prevails amongst them, their tenants are exposed to much harassment.

§ 134. A serious source of difficulty in the relations between landlords and tenants arises out of the system of coparcenary which is customary amongst Hindoos, and is not uncommonly imitated by Mahomedans. When coparceners, or co-sharers, as they are commonly called, stand in the position of landlords, and manage their affairs either through a single member of the family (karta), or through a manager appointed by, and acting for all, there is no difficulty and the tenants are put to no greater inconvenience than the tenants of other landlords. But when on the contrary the co-sharers are disunited and dissension prevails amongst them, their tenants are exposed to considerable harassment. The rent is payable to the co-sharers jointly, and properly upon their joint receipt; but each attempts to collect separately the share to which he conceives himself entitled; and the tenant, who would comply with all their demands, would find that he had to pay a considerable amount more than his actual rent. Then the servants and adherents of each co-sharer seek their own perquisites, and, in order to obtain these, delude the ignorant ryots, who are thus induced to pay more rent to one co-sharer than he is entitled to receive, or, for the purpose of manufacturing evidence, receipts are given for a larger share, while in fact less sums were paid than appear in these fraudulent documents. Each co-sharer attempts to enhance the rents of his share, although no partition has been made; or each seeks to make a measurement, and rival Amins prepare chiṭahs, the entries in which are regulated by the gratifications which the ryots are able or willing to give them. Litigation ensues, and the tenants side with this co-sharer or that; they give evidence and earn brief gratitude from one party, undying hatred from the other. A riot takes place between the adherents of the opposite parties, and the Police appear on the spot to reap a rich harvest. The ryots are impoverished, cultivation thrown back, and distrust and dissension pervade the village Such is a picture, by no means overdrawn, of the pernicious results of want of union amongst a brotherhood of landlords

§ 135. The necessity of a remedy for this state of things was felt at an early period of British administration, and in 1812 it was enacted that, inasmuch as inconvenience to the public and injury to private rights had been experienced in certain cases from disputes subsisting among the proprietors of joint undivided estates, whenever sufficient cause shall be shown by the Revenue Authorities or by any of the individuals holding an interest in such estates for the interposition of the Courts of Judicature, it shall be competent to the Zillah Judges to appoint a person duly qualified and under proper security to manage the estate; that is, to collect the rents and discharge the public revenue, and provide for the cultivation and future improvement of the estate (Regulation V of 1812, section 26). The Judge was also competent, upon the representation of the Revenue Authorities or of any such person as aforesaid, to remove any manager so appointed (id., section 27.) A subsequent Regulation (V of 1827) enacted that, when the Zillah Court thought it just and proper under the provision of that Regulation to provide for the administration or management of landed property, it should issue a precept to the Collector directing him to hold the estate in attachment and appoint a person for the due care and management thereof, under good and adequate security for the faithful discharge of the trust in a sum proportionate to the extent thereof. The reference in Regulation V of 1827 to Regulation V of 1812 was repealed by Act XVI of 1874, so that it is not now competent to a District Judge to send a precept to the Collector, directing him to provide for the management of an estate belonging to a joint undivided family. The fragment of Regulation V of 1812 which is still in force is incomplete, and in consequence almost inoperative.

Regulation V of 1827

§ 136. Such being the present state of the law, a majority of us have thought that this fragment might well be repealed and a complete set of effective provisions substituted therefor. We have accordingly enacted that when coparceners, who jointly own an estate, tenure or undertenure, disagree as to the joint management thereof, and in consequence there has ensued, or is likely to ensue, (a) inconvenience to the public, or (b) injury to private rights, the District Judge may, upon the application in case (a) of the Collector, and in case (b) of any one having an interest in such estate, tenure or undertenure, direct a notice to be served upon the coparceners, calling upon them to show cause why they should not appoint a common manager. If the copar-

Provisions of the Draft Bill for the appointment of a Manager, when Coparceners disagree

coners do not, within a month, show cause why they should not appoint a common manager, the District Judge may direct them to do so (section 65 of the Draft Bill). If they fail to obey this direction, the District Judge may either appoint a manager or direct that the estate, tenure or undertenure be managed by the Court of Wards, if it is willing to undertake the charge. We have thought it advisable to give the coparceners an opportunity of appointing a manager of their own selecting, before the District Judge proceeds virtually to depose them. When the Court of Wards undertakes the charge, it will govern itself by the provisions of The Court of Wards' Act, IX (B.C.) of 1879—(section 66). It is discretionary with the Court of Wards to undertake the charge or not. A majority of us have thought it advisable to render this system of management possible, as there may be cases in which no other management will be available. Mr. O'Kinealy doubts if it is advisable to extend the exceptional jurisdiction of the Court of Wards and empower it to manage the estates of persons who happen to disagree amongst themselves. When the District Judge appoints a manager, he is empowered to settle his remuneration and the manner of it, whether, that is to say, by a fixed salary or a percentage of the collections. He is also empowered to require reasonable security for the proper discharge of the duties of the office. The manager is authorized to exercise the same powers as the coparceners jointly might, but for his appointment, have exercised. He is required to keep regular accounts and to allow the coparceners to inspect and take copies of them. He may be removed upon the application of the Collector or of any person interested in the estate, tenure or undertenure (section 67). The District Judge may at any time direct that the management be restored to the coparceners, if he is satisfied that they will conduct it without inconvenience to the public or injury to private rights.

Powers and duties of the Manager

§ 137. We have provided (section 69) that rent payable to coparceners shall be paid upon the joint receipt of all such coparceners, or of a manager appointed by them or by the District Judge; and that all such coparceners must join as plaintiffs or be made defendants in any suit brought for the recovery of arrears of any such rent, otherwise that such suit shall be dismissed with costs. In this case, which constitutes the rule, the entire rent must be sued for. To this rule we have made three exceptions:—First, when the tenant and one or more of several coparceners, with the consent of the other or others of them, have agreed that the share of rent to which such one or more coparceners is or are entitled shall be paid directly to him or them, such share may be so paid and recovered. Here all parties being agreed, no one can be endamaged—Secondly, when the tenant has usually paid to one or more of several coparceners, without objection from the other or others of them, the share of rent to which such one or more coparceners is or are entitled, such share of rent may be so paid and recovered. Here the tacit acquiescence of all parties in the arrangement may be regarded as equivalent to an agreement—Thirdly, when a coparcener is unable to obtain his share of the rent payable by a tenant in consequence of collusion between such tenant and the other coparceners, he may sue to recover his share of rent separately, and shall in such suit make such other coparceners defendants. We have taken these exceptions from cases actually decided, and we consider that they are proper exceptions to the rule, and that the law as here settled by the decisions ought not to be altered. We have further adapted the case-law in enacting that a coparcener may not otherwise than conjointly with his other coparceners or through a manager (1) bring a tenure to summary sale, (2) measure lands in the occupaon of tenants of the coparceners, or (3) enhance the rents of such tenants. These provisions in conjunction with the amendments of the law as to deposits of rent ought to effectually protect the ryots of coparcener landlords from harassment.

Miscellaneous rights of Landlords and Tenants

§ 138. We have collected in Chapter XI some miscellaneous rights of landlords and tenants. Some of these are now to be found in fragments of the unrepealed Regulations: and some are taken from the case-law; while others again are rather tacitly admitted in the decisions of the Courts than formally enunciated. We have retained the express prohibition against landlords imposing abwabs or cesses, or compelling the attendance of their ryots, or enforcing payment of rent otherwise than according to law (section 72).

Landlords may not impose cesses or compel attendance of ryots.

We have enacted that a landlord is bound, upon a new letting, to put the tenant in possession of the property; also that every landlord is bound to maintain his tenant in the peaceable and quiet possession and enjoyment of the tenure, undertenure, holding or land, in respect of which the relation of landlord and tenant exists between them; but that this duty extends only to interruption or disturbance by the landlord himself or any one claiming under or paramount to him, and does not extend to interruption or disturbance by third parties (section 73).

Landlord bound to put and maintain tenant in possession.

Leases granted in excess of interest or where no interest.

We have provided that no one may grant a valid lease for a term exceeding his own interest; that a lease granted for a term so in excess is valid to the extent of such interest and voidable only as to the excess; but that, if the lessor subsequently acquires the excess, the lease is, as against him, good for the excess also. We have further provided, in accordance with a suggestion of the learned Chief Justice, that, if a person grants a lease of land in which he has no interest to a lessee who obtains possession of such land under such lease, and if such person afterwards acquires an interest in the land, the lease shall be valid to the extent of such after-acquired interest as between such lessor and lessee and persons claiming under them—(section 74). These provisions are in accordance with the law of some civilized countries and are conformable to justice, equity, and good conscience.

Right of Landlord to make Measurement and Survey

§ 139. We have re-enacted the provision to be found in the existing law, that every landlord, unless restrained from so doing by express engagement with the occupants of the land, is entitled to make a general survey and measurement of all land comprised in any estate, tenure, undertenure or holding, of the rents of which he is in receipt; and we have further enacted that he is entitled to enter upon such land for the purpose of making such survey and measurement (section 75). The right being thus declared, it follows that it can be enforced through the Civil Court, as any other legal right can be enforced. We have not inserted in the Draft Bill any special provisions as to the mode of enforcing this right in ordinary cases; but, as already noticed, we have provided specially for cases in which a landlord is unable to ascertain the persons in occupation of the lands of his estate, tenure or undertenure, or the different fields held by each ryot.

All Measurements to be made according to Government Standard of measurement—Conversion when necessary into local measure.

§ 140. The length of the local standard pole, with which a measurement of land should be made, is a fertile subject of dispute and litigation. It is not uncommon for a landlord to make a measurement of his lands with a pole of his own selection, the actual length of which must be a subject of doubt upon the evidence, while the ryots concerned aver not only that the standard pole of the parganah is different, but that during the measurement a third pole has occasionally been substituted for that which the landlord claims to be the standard. In order to remedy these difficulties as far as possible, we have enacted that all measurements made by order of the Civil Court or Collector shall be made according to the Government measure of 14,400 square feet to one standard bigha. If it be shown that the rights of the parties to the suit are regulated by any different local measure depending upon a parganah standard pole, the Government measure shall be converted into local measure for the purposes of the suit. In case of dispute as to the standard pole, the Collector shall in any suit before himself, or in any suit before a Civil Court on a reference made for this purpose by such Court, determine the proper length of such pole. We have followed the present law, as settled by the decisions, in enacting that an appeal shall lie from the Collector's decision to the District Judge; but that, if no such appeal be preferred, the decision of the Collector shall be final (section 76).

§ 141. We have enacted in general terms (section 77) that a ryot may not, without the consent of his landlord, materially alter the condition of the land held by him, so as to render it unfit for agricultural or horticultural purposes; but that a ryot may, without the consent of his landlord, make any of the following improvements:—

Ryot may not render his land unfit for, but may make improvements conducive to, agriculture.

(a) the erection of a dwelling-house and offices suitable for the habitation of a cultivating ryot and his family;

(b) the making of tanks, wells, and other works for the storage, supply or distribution of water for agricultural purposes;

(c) works for the drainage of land, or for the protection of land from floods, or from erosion, or other damage by water;

(d) the reclaiming, clearing or enclosing of land for agricultural purposes;

(e) the renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works or alterations therein or additions thereto;

(f) the planting of fruit trees.

We think that all these improvements ought to be allowed as being conducive to better cultivation and a higher standard of agriculture. We have further provided, in accordance with what a majority of us believe to be customary in many parts of Bengal, that a ryot may cut down and appropriate trees on his holding planted by himself or by any ryot from whom such holding was derived by public or private sale, gift, devise or inheritance (section 77).

Ryot may cut trees planted by himself or his predecessor.

§ 142. We have provided that when a landlord's interest is transferred, the tenant shall not be liable to the transferree for rent which became due after the transfer and was paid to the person whose interest was transferred, unless the transferree has given to the tenant notice of the transfer (section 78). Some litigation has arisen in consequence of the want of a rule on this point which is a sufficiently simple one. We have enumerated (section 79) a number of cases in which the relation of landlord and tenant is declared to be determined. Some of these are to be found in the present law, for example, relinquishment by a ryot, and ejectment in certain cases by a landlord. Some are new and are taken from the case-law, the result of the decisions being supplemented, where this was necessary in order to make a principle complete. We may refer to the most important of the latter. We have provided that, in the case of a non-transferable holding, the relation of landlord and tenant may be determined by abandonment, when the tenant having ceased to cultivate the land or pay rent therefor has been absent from the neighbourhood for a year and the landlord elects to treat the tenancy as determined (section 79, clause 3). In the case of a transferable holding the landlord must proceed to a sale of the holding, and, if the tenant cannot be found, a copy of the summons may be posted upon some conspicuous place upon the land included in the holding (section 174).

punished with forfeiture. Some of us are strongly opposed to forfeiture as a principle; but we are agreed in thinking that, when a tenant, in a suit to which his landlord is a party, disclaims such landlord's title and sets up an adverse title in himself or another by matter in writing or reduced to writing, the landlord should have the option of treating this disclaimer as a forfeiture of the tenancy, if he elects to do so within a reasonable time—and we have enacted accordingly, making six months the time within which the landlord must elect. In order to prevent any hardship in the application of this rule, we have further provided that there shall be no forfeiture in any case in which the tenant, having been let into possession by the person whose title he denied, can show that such person's title had expired or been defeated or annulled at the time of the disclaimer being made; or, having been let into possession not by such person but by another, can show that he admitted the title of such person under a bonâ fide misapprehension or mistake. We are all agreed that forfeiture ought not to be the consequence, in this country especially, of mere words spoken under ordinary circumstances or of a tenant's claiming a greater interest than he may be entitled to.

Avoidance of tenures, &c., by Sale for Arrears of Revenue or Rent, but at the election of the Purchaser.

§ 144. The Revenue Sale laws, which have been in force from time to time, have invariably provided, not always in the same language though in all cases to the same effect, that upon a sale of an estate for arrears of revenue all subordinate tenures and incumbrances shall be cancelled or avoided from the date of the sale. It was settled by a well known decision of the Privy Council that the meaning of this provision was, not that the tenures and incumbrances became ipso facto void by the sale, but that they were voidable at the election of the purchaser. The same construction has been put upon similar language in more modern Acts concerned with the sale of tenures for arrears of rent. It has generally been assumed that the purchaser should exercise his election within a reasonable time after the sale; and, where he has not taken any active steps for a considerable time, the usual inferences have been drawn from conduct partaking of the nature of acquiescence. We think, however, that it is very desirable that there should be a fixed period of time, within which the purchaser should decide whether he intends to avoid the tenures or undertenures existing before the sale. We believe that some litigation will be prevented by having such a fixed period; and we have accordingly enacted that if, upon a sale for arrears of revenue or rent, the purchaser desires to avoid any subordinate lease or determine any subordinate tenancy, he must proceed to do so within one year after he has had knowledge of its existence (section 79, clause 9).

Election to be exercised within one year after knowledge.

Relation of Landlord and Tenant not determined by Non-payment of Rent merely.

No Ejectment except through the Court.

§ 145. We have provided by way of explanation (section 79) that, when the relation of landlord and tenant exists between two persons in respect of any property, the mere non-payment of rent shall not alone determine such relation. This is in accordance with the law as now settled by the decisions of the Courts. In order to prevent arbitrary eviction, we have enacted that no ryot shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree or order of the Civil Court—(section 79, clause 5). Any ryot otherwise evicted will have a remedy under section 9 of The Specific Relief Act, 1877, and will be able to recover possession under these provisions. We have provided that the right to eject for non-payment of rent of any one year shall be deemed to be waived by the receipt of rent for a subsequent year. There are in the existing law no provisions as to the away-going crop; and, as a natural consequence, when a tenant is ejected while the crop is on the ground, the right to this crop is a constant source of dispute and litigation. We have enacted that, when a ryot is ejected in execution of a decree—and this we have just shown, is the only way in which he can be ejected—and there are upon the land at the time of the ejectment growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth, which but for the ejectment such ryot would have been entitled to reap or gather, such ryot shall, notwithstanding such ejectment, be entitled to reap or gather such crops or products, and may use the land for the purpose of tending, reaping, gathering, and removing the same; and, in the event of his doing so, he shall be liable to pay a reasonable sum for the use and occupation of the land for these purposes (section 80). We have, however, thought it reasonable to allow the landlord an option of taking such crops or products at a reasonable valuation, if he gives notice of his intention to do so at the time when he applies for execution. If the landlord and tenant cannot agree as to the value of the crops or products, the Court may, upon the application of either of them, determine such value, and the order so determining such value shall have the force of a decree.

§ 146. In forming an opinion as to what legislative changes are specially required for Behar, we have carefully considered the Report of the Committee appointed[1] to examine the question of the Rent Law for that Province, together with the minutes of the Committee's proceedings Behar differs from Bengal in two important respects. The first point of difference is that, while rent is commonly paid in money in Bengal, such money rent having no direct connection with the quantity of produce gross or net, it is paid in many districts in Behar either actually in kind or in the commuted value of a fixed portion of the gross produce[2]. One direct and necessary result of the Behar system

Chapter XII: special provisions for Behar

Report of the Behar Committee considered.

Points of difference between Behar and Bengal.

[1] See No. 2122 of the 7th September 1878 from Secretary to Government of Bengal appointing the Committee and No. 214R. of the 8th March 1879 from the Commissioner of Patna, forwarding the report of the Committee.

[2] Under the Agore Batai system, the crop is actually divided and the landlord's share made over to him. Under the Danabundi system, the ryot agrees to pay the landlord the market-value of a certain proportion of the produce; the crop is valued at each harvest and rent is paid in money according to this valuation. For further information, see letter No. 1130 of 21st August 1858 from Commissioner of Patna to Secretary to Board of Revenue, the following paragraphs of which are important:—

4. "The second amendment which I propose has also regard to this class of cases. It is of the utmost importance to the ryot that it should be settled between his landlord and himself before he commences his cultivation, how the produce in which they have a joint interest is to be dealt with. Under one system (Agore Batai) the landlord employs men to watch his share of the crop when it approaches maturity, and when it is ready, cuts and carries it himself. In a more common variety of the same tenure, the crop is cut and threshed by the ryot under the superintendence of the zemindar's servants, and the produce divided on the threshing floor; but it is also matter of arrangement between the parties in this case whether the landlord shall have the straw or only the grain, and whether it shall be delivered at the threshing floor of the ryot's village, or at some other place more convenient to the zemindar."

5. "In the Bhaolee and Danabundi tenures, which in the districts of Shahabad and Behar are more common than any others, there is even more room for dispute. In 1849, and again in consequence of a Despatch from the Court of Directors in 1851, these tenures formed the subject of a voluminous correspondence. I append three of the most interesting letters which were written on that occasion, in order that those members of the Legislative Council who are not acquainted with the controversy, may become acquainted with its bearings and be made aware of the importance of the subject.* It will be seen from a perusal of these papers how very necessary it is that the contract between the landlord and his tenant in these Danabundi leases should be accurately defined. With this view I would propose that, in addition to the amendments in Section II which I have suggested above, the following provisions should be adopted either in the form of a new section or as a pendant to Section II—"If the tenure be of the kind termed Bhaolee or Danabundi, or any similar tenure in which the ryot engages to pay the landlord the market value of a certain proportion of produce, the pottah shall also specify the market and the month, of which the average rates are to govern the contract, and the date on which the rent shall be considered due."

* Regulation II of 1795 should also be consulted, as it contains a great deal of information on the subject.

7. "It may very probably be thought by those who have had no experience in this part of the country that payment in kind, or the mixed payments which form the peculiarity of the Bhaolee tenures, should be discouraged as much as possible, and should not be sanctioned by the Legislature, but this would be a very great error. A large portion of the land of this Province is entirely dependent on rain for its fertility. In good seasons, it yields heavy crops, in bad ones next to nothing; and bad or indifferent seasons are more common than good ones. The ryots, having no capital and being an improvident race, would be ruined by one or two bad seasons, if they had to pay fixed money rents. Under a Bhaolee or Batai system on the contrary, where the rent is proportioned to the produce, they can always rub on, and if they have not much opportunity of making money, they are tolerably secure from ruin. These tenures are therefore very popular, and, when the landlord is a just man, are perfectly satisfactory to all parties. Any attempt to abolish them would create great discontent. The only complaint is that owing to the defects of the law, the ryot who holds under these tenures is now practically at the mercy of his landlord."

18. "In Bhaolee cases all my informants here are agreed on the necessity of compelling the production of the Danabundi or estimate papers. In order to render this intelligible, it may be necessary to explain the process of a settlement of accounts under the Bhaolee system. When the crop is ripe, is that the landlords get the full benefit of every rise of prices, and enhancement on the ground of increase in the value or price of the produce is a stern reality to the ryots of Behar. The second point is that, while in Bengal the ryots are the stronger and the landlords the weaker party, in Behar it is just the reverse, the ryots being (save in some exceptional places) in a depressed condition and incapable of maintaining against their landlords the rights given them by law. It is possible that there is some connection in the nature of cause and effect between these two points of difference. The Behar system is really a Metayer system with most of its worst features and few of the advantages enjoyed by tenants of this class in Continental Europe. The European Metayer is usually secure in the possession of his land and is certain at least of half the gain resulting from any improvements which he makes by his own labour or capital. His landlord furnishes half the plough-cattle in some places, and in others half the seed. In many places a house is kept up for him. Thus he receives considerable assistance towards producing the crop in which he and his landlord are sharers. The Behar ryot on the contrary gets nothing but the bare land: his possession is insecure and he has no incentive to improvement, while the petty oppressions practised in collecting a rent in kind leave him too often less than half the crop, the whole cost of producing which has fallen upon him alone.[8] Then the ticcadari or farming system, under which the landlords who should protect their tenantry and take an interest in their welfare make them over to be ground down by ijarahdars or farmers, exercises the most pernicious influence on the condition of the cultivating class in that part of the country.

The Behar system a bad Metayer system.

Impoverished condition of the cultivating class in Behar.

Recommendations of the Behar Committee.

Proposal that landholders should file Accounts in a public office.

§ 147. It will be convenient to consider in order the recommendations of the Behar Committee. They propose in the first place to make it obligatory on landholders to file annually in the office of the Collector, or some other public officer, accounts showing (1) the serial number of each ryot; (2) the name of each ryot; (3) the area of land held by him, and the area of the portions thereof for which he pays rent in money and in kind; and (4) the details of each separate annual demand on each ryot, and the total thereof. They say:—

"It is held by some of us that ryots by taking copies of these accounts can be certified of the areas of their holdings the rates claimed, and the annual demand upon them: others of us are of opinion that any such extracts would in practice have to be repudiated by the ryot"

They further propose that—

"The filing of these accounts should be enforced by dismissing rent suits unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a deposit receipt for his yearly accounts, or unless he otherwise prove to the satisfaction of the Court that such accounts have been duly filed in the rent-roll office."

Proceedings, p. 5

We have duly considered this matter for Bengal, and have come to the conclusion that it is not practicable to compel landlords to keep their accounts in any particular form, or to file them periodically in the Collector's office with such method and punctuality as to make it the patwarí, the gomashta, the amín, a jareeb kush or measurer, a salis or arbitrator, a nawisinda or writer, and the jet ryots of the village with the ryot himself proceed to the field in which the crop is growing. The salis first makes an estimate of the produce; the amín then makes another. If the two estimates agree, the matter is considered settled. If they differ, the ryot cuts a cottah where the crop is thinnest; the zemindar's people cut another, where it is heaviest. The produce is threshed out, mixed together, and weighed, and the produce of the whole field is estimated from this sample. A memorandum of the result, called a Danabundi, is made out by the patwarí and his writer, and signed by those present. The ryot is then at liberty to cut and store his grain. The putwaree next prepares a paper called a "Behree," showing the amount of grain in the possession of the ryot and the respective shares of the malik and the ryot, and sends for the malik's share, which the ryot either pays in grain or money, as may have been agreed upon. If the agreement is to pay in money, the gomashta writes to the amlah of the surrounding villages for the nirik, or market rate, which is returned on the back of his letter and an average is then struck. It will thus be seen the accounts of the estimate of the crop and its weighment form the chief evidence in these Bhaolee cases, and that a jamawasil account is of comparatively little use.

---

[8] Mr. Dampier is unable to subscribe to the contrast drawn in the above passage.

really worth while to impose so onerous an obligation on Collectors and zemindars. In a report recently submitted by the Commissioner of Patna to the Board of Revenue on the subject of patwaris in Behar, the Commissioner, after thoroughly examining the question gives his opinion that the rules requiring patwaris to furnish their accounts should be rescinded. The Collector of Shahabad and the Collector of Chumparun are of the same opinion. Legislation in this direction has already been tried in this country and has failed. If such a rule of law as that proposed by the Behar Committee were enacted, it would be difficult to enforce it. A reasonable sanction is wanting. The individuals who might suffer for not filing accounts, or be punished for filing fabricated accounts, would receive, not the odium attaching even with the uneducated to the violation of a natural law, but the sympathy accorded to those who have resisted an unjustifiable command—for such the land-holding community would regard an enactment, the immediate result of obeying which would be to make public the private concerns of every landlord. The construction of record-rooms to contain such accounts, if filed, and the maintenance of establishments to keep them in order would necessitate expenditure for which in our opinion there would be no adequate return in the equivocal advantage which might result to the rent-paying class. There is nothing in the circumstances of Behar which leads us to think that we ought to adopt a different conclusion for that Province.

Proposal to declare "jamabandis, jamawasil-bakis," &c., inadmissible in evidence.

§ 148. We find ourselves also unable to concur in the suggestion of the Behar Committee "to exclude from evidence loose sheets of paper produced from the patwari's or zemindar's sherishta, such as jamabandis, jamawasil-bakis, and other papers of that kind." In making this suggestion the Committee hazard an opinion of their own that even under the present law such papers should not be received in evidence. If they are not admissible in evidence, as the law stands, it is not necessary to legislate further in order to make them inadmissible, irrelevancy not being a quality that admits of degrees. All civilized countries have abandoned the attempt to settle by legislation the value of evidence once received or to define by too nice rules what evidence may be received and what must be rejected. We do not think that we shall on the present occasion be assisted by the revival of exploded theories. The difference between admitting matter in evidence and the weight which may fairly be assigned to it when admitted has long been recognized, and has been acted on in the Indian Code. The degrees of weight are infinite, varying from the thistle-down, that will scarcely turn the nicest balance, to the ponderous weight of the Earth itself. Between the carefully-kept books of an English Bank, which containing within themselves a thousand tests of genuineness may further be verified by innumerable external facts, and the loose slips of a native jamabandi, which may be prepared in half an hour and can be tested by few external or internal indicia of truth, there is as much difference in value as between a numeral in the place of thousands and the same figure in the fourth place of decimal fractions. We think that the Courts must be left to see this for themselves and to assign to jamabandis, jamawasil-bakis, and other such accounts the exact weight to which they may fairly be entitled in particular cases, according to the obvious care with which they are kept, and the tests of genuineness which they contain within themselves, or which may be available from external sources. As a matter of fact, the published Reports contain numerous cases showing that these tests are understood and applied. Before leaving this point we desire to point out, with reference to a remark upon section 34 of the Evidence Act, that, although entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business are under that section relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, the section further enacts that they shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

§ 149. Upon the subject of pottahs and kabooliyats, the Behar Committee say :—

Opinion of the Behar Committee as to compulsory interchange of Pottahs and Kabooliyats.

"We fear that any attempt to render the interchange of any specific form of pottahs and kabooliyats compulsory would lead to general litigation and strife; that it would embitter the relations of landlord and tenant in Behar; that in the end it might possibly injure, rather than improve, the ryots' condition. Moreover, the compulsory interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats in any express statutory form would involve an enormous increase in the number of Registration Offices and Civil Courts, which we do not feel ourselves prepared to recommend. On this head Mr. Browne has made a recommendation, to which the Committee has acceded, namely, that whenever a Court decrees rights of occupancy, it shall compel the interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats, specifying the boundaries of the fields in which such rights are decreed."

This coincides generally with the view which we have adopted (paragraphs 7 and 8 above). Mr. Browne's recommendation will be sufficiently met by the provisions of section 151 of the Draft Bill as to suits for the determination of the terms or conditions of the tenancy, when read with the provisions of section 167, and with the similar provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the particulars to be inserted in plaints. The decree must, under the provision of clause (c) section 195 of the Bill reproduce the essential particulars given in the plaint; and a copy of the decree under the seal of the Court (a form of document much prized by the natives of this country) will take the place of a pottah for the tenant, and of a kabooliyat for the landlord.

§ 150. A majority of the Behar Committee are of opinion that the use of counterfoil receipts for rent should be insisted on. They think that—

Use of Counterfoil Receipts for rent.

"Receipts should be in counterfoil, and that the refusal or neglect on the part of the landlord to give a counterfoil receipt in the prescribed form should be deemed a withholding of a receipt;" also "that a suit for rent should not be entertained unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a receipt-book for the period in respect of which the rent is claimed, or for such additional period as to the Court may seem necessary."

We have provided (section 57 of the Draft Bill) that a tenant is entitled to a receipt containing certain essential particulars, and also to a statement of account at the end of the year; that the landlord shall retain a counterpart of every such receipt and statement of account; and that failure to furnish such a receipt or such a statement may be punished by a penalty. We are not prepared to recommend that the law should go further, or that suits for rent should be dismissed unless the counterfoil receipt-book is filed with the plaint. We think that the inference to be drawn from the non-production of such evidence, and the value of it when produced, are matters which must be left to the Courts themselves to be dealt with under the circumstances of each particular case, and that it would be a mistake on the part of the Legislature to attempt to regulate them by any artificial rules of general application.

§ 151. With a view to cheapen and facilitate registration, the Behar Committee recommend (1) that the Registration Law should be so amended as to allow a party to file a copy of a deed, and so escape the delay, inconvenience, and expense of having a copy made in the Registration office for record therein; and (2) that Sub-Registrars should be allowed to go into the interior to register documents without the issue of a commission as required by the present law. These recommendations are probably deserving of consideration, but we think that the matter of them does not fall within the purview of our labours.

Recommendations of the Behar Committee as to cheapening and facilitating Registration.

Ryots unable to acquire a Right of Occupancy in Behar in consequence of constant changes in the occupation of the fields cultivated by them.

§ 152. One of the greatest difficulties connected with the acquisition of a right of occupancy by ryots in Behar arises from the fact that, owing to causes originating in local practices, ryots seldom hold the same fields for twelve years continuously, and therefore, according to the strict letter of the present law, the right of occupancy does not accrue. The Committee say in their Report:—

"The amalgamation and sub-division of holdings in Behar, taken in connection with the zemindar's failure to give pottahs, have made it difficult for ryots, who de facto have occupancy rights, to prove the existence of such rights. An examination of the jamabandi papers of Behar estates has shown that, while sixty per cent. of the present ryots have held some land in the villages in which they reside for more than twelve years, less than one per cent. of them hold at present the same area of land which they held twelve years ago. Inasmuch as these ryots hold no pottahs or other documents showing which are the particular fields which they have held for more than twelve years, and which fields were subsequently acquired, it is doubtful whether any of them could under the existing law prove their occupancy rights, even where these rights exist beyond all doubt . . . . To remedy this evil we propose to make more clear than it is at present the presumption of law that every resident ryot who has cultivated any land continuously in any estate for twelve years shall be held to have acquired occupancy rights in the whole of his holding in such estate. The effect of this presumption will be that on a ryot having proved continuous residence and cultivation of any land whatever in an estate for twelve years, the onus of proving that such ryot has not acquired occupancy rights in the whole or any particular part of his holding will be thrown on the zemindar."

We are satisfied that the above passage points to a serious defect in the present law, so far as Behar is concerned. The practice of periodically changing the fields cultivated by individuals is a very old one in India. It was followed by the old Village Communities, and we now know that periodical partition of the land belonging to the community was a very general custom in the ancient world, and that vestiges of it still remain even in the most civilized countries of modern Europe.[1] Even after the Village Community had ceased to exist as an institution, it was not uncommon for the cultivator, where land was abundant and population sparse, to abandon land which had been cultivated for two or three years, and the productive powers of which, unsustained by manuring or any system of rotation of crops, had thereby become diminished. As population presses closer on the land, this practice gradually ceases. Whether the state of things described as existing in Behar is a remnant of the old custom,[1] or is the result of some other cause, it is a special feature in the circumstances of this province which ought not to be overlooked in any new legislation intended to affect this part of the country. When Act X of 1859 enacted that "every ryot who has cultivated or held land for a period of twelve years has a right of occupancy in the land so cultivated or held by him," it overlooked and omitted to provide for a state of things peculiar to Behar, and we think that the proper course is to recognize this now and supply the defect. We propose to meet the difficulty by providing that all ryots who on a certain date (to be hereafter notified) are in possession of land other than zerat land, and have been for three years continuously in the possession of the same, shall have a right of occupancy therein, if they have for twelve years held any land in the same estate or in any other estate which with it at any time formed a single estate, (see section 81 of the Draft Bill). We take the occupation of some land for twelve years to be an indication of intention to become a resident ryot, and in view of the peculiar state of things in Behar, we have cut down the period of occupancy from twelve to three years. These special provisions will apply only to the state of things existing on the particular date notified. The acquisition of a right of occupancy in the future is intended to be governed by the ordinary provisions of the Bill. It may, however, deserve discussion whether three years ought not in future be held sufficient to confer a right of occupancy in Behar.

Definition of zerat land.

§ 153. We have adopted the definition of zerat land recommended by the Committee, and taken from the definition of sir land in The North-Western Provinces Rent Act, XVIII of 1873. This, they think, will prevent any recurrence of a practice, said to be not uncommon in certain parts of Behar, of landlords violently wresting part of their lands from ryots, or of exchanging ryoti for zerat lands and then entering both as zerat in the jamabandis. In order to provide for exchanges of land which may be made in future with the consent of the ryots, we have enacted (section 82 that, when land is so exchanged, a ryot shall have in the land which he gets in exchange the same right of occupancy which he had in the land given by him in exchange. If the land is exchanged against his will, he can seek redress in Court.

Ryot to have a right of occupancy in land received from his landlord in exchange for land in which he had a right of occupancy.

Points upon which it is not thought advisable to make any difference in the provisions for Bengal and Behar.

§ 154. We have attentively considered the recommendations of the Behar Committee upon the following subjects:—the ejectment of ryots not having a right of occupancy—compensation to evicted ryots for improvements made by them—transferability of a right of occupancy—the right of occupancy-ryots to sublet—amendment of the law of distraint—alteration and improvement of the law of enhancement—summary procedure for the recovery of rents—the settlement of rates by the Collector in cases of dispute—the instalments in which rent shall be payable—the measurement of lands by persons in receipt of the rent of the same—the insertion of boundaries and areas in plaints filed for the recovery of arrears of rent—and the deposit of rent by tenants, when a dispute exists as to the person entitled to receive such rent. The members of the Committee are not unanimous in the recommendation contained in their Report as to some of these matters; and indeed upon certain points, as for example the subject of procedure, individual members appear to have entertained opinions diametrically opposite. Most of the defects noticed in the existing law, in connection with these subjects, are common to Bengal and Behar; and we think that in amending the present law the two Provinces may properly be treated alike. We therefore consider that the provision to be found in the Bill on these points are suitable and sufficient to meet the requirements of Behar.

§ 155. In connection with the system of payment of rent in kind commonly prevalent in Behar, the Committee recommend—

Recommendations of the Behar Committee in connection with the system of payment of Rent in Kind.

1*st*—that in case of dispute as to the amount or value of the crop, the Collector shall, on application from either party, depute a proper officer to make the division, estimate, or appraisement;

2*nd*—that the danabundi or appraisement papers shall be filed in the Collector's office within fifteen days after the appraisement;

3*rd*—that, where a tenant without due cause allows bhaolee lands to lie fallow, he shall be liable to pay a cash rent for such lands in respect of the period during which the land was fallow, such cash rent not to exceed that paid for the same description of land in the neighbourhood;

4*th*—that, where occupancy rights have been established, the occupancy ryot or the zemindar shall be entitled to commute bhaolee into cash tenures at the cash rates paid by other occupancy ryots in the neighbourhood, and, if cash tenures do not exist in the neighbourhood, at a cash rate equivalent to the average value of the zemindar's share of the produce calculated on the outturn of the preceding five years;

5*th*—that, where the proportion of the produce to be taken by the zemindar is not specified in any written agreement, it shall be presumed that the zemindar is entitled to half, and the ryot to half.

We have accepted the first and second of these recommendations in their entirety, and they will be found embodied in sections 84 and 85 of the Draft Bill. District Officers might be well asked if any similar provisions are required in Bengal. We are unable to concur in the third recommendation. We think it probable that the right of selecting the fields which he shall cultivate or leave uncultivated each year is one of the incidents which enables the ryot of South Behar to pay so high a rent as one-half of the gross produce for his land. With the information now before us, we are, therefore, not in a position to support this recommendation of the Behar Committee. The fourth recommendation we have accepted with a slight modification, and it will be found embodied in section 86 of the Bill. A majority of us think that the abuses incident to the receipt of rent in kind can best be obviated by its commutation into a money rent, and that the option given to the people of so converting it is calculated to encourage agriculture.[5] Mr. Dampier is opposed to making commutation compulsory on the ryot.[6] We have also accepted the fifth recommendation as far as it goes, but we have gone further and have provided that in no case shall the proportion of the actual produce to be taken by the zemindar as rent be more than one-half.

§ 156. It appears to us that the most important objects of legislation for Behar are to protect the ryots from illegal distraint, illegal enhancement, and illegal cesses; to enable them to maintain their rights of occupancy; and to suppress various modes of oppression incident to the collection of rent in kind, or in the commuted value of a share of the produce determined by an estimate or appraisement of the standing crop or by some similar proceeding. We think that the special provisions for Behar contained in Chapter XII will, taken with the other provisions of the Bill, effectuate these objects as far as they can be effectuated by legislation.

Objects of legislation for Behar.

§ 157. The provisions of Chapter XIII as to damages and penalties require few observations, as they are substantially a re-enactment of the provisions of the existing law. Damages may be awarded (1) for the illegal exaction of any sum of money in excess of the rent lawfully payable; (2) for withholding receipts for rent paid; and (3) for extorting payment of rent by duress. We have retained that portion of the law which empowers the Courts to award damages not exceeding twenty-five per cent. upon rent not paid or deposited, when the tenant can show no reasonable or probable cause for having neglected to pay such rent. We have made it clear in accordance with the decisions, (a) that interest before decree upon the rent decreed may not be given in addition to these damages, and (b) that damages when awarded may, as well as the amount of rent and costs decreed, carry interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until realized. We have also retained the existing provisions as to the Court's awarding to defendants twenty-five per cent. by way of damages upon rent claimed without reasonable or probable cause, or sued for after it had been duly deposited in the Collectorate.

Damages and Penalties.

§ 158. We have collected in a Schedule framed on the model of that annexed to The Indian Limitation Act, XV of 1877, the suits and applications between landlords and tenants, for which a special rule of limitation has existed since 1859, and we have made a few additions to the list. We have provided that one year shall be the period of limitation for a suit by a ryot against his landlord to recover the possession of a holding, from which such ryot has been illegally ejected by such landlord in any case not governed by section 9 of The Specific Relief Act, I of 1877; in other words, for a suit intended to try not merely the question of dispossession without consent, but also the question of title. For a similar suit by a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder we have provided a limitation period of three years. We have enacted that every suit instituted and application made after the prescribed period shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence. This is in accordance with the principle followed in the legislation of the Government of India.

Portions of The Indian Limitation Act especially extended to Rent Suits

§ 159. We have expressly extended to suits and applications under the proposed Act, the following portions of The Indian Limitation Act, XV of 1877, namely, (a) the explanation to section 4, viz. that a suit is instituted in ordinary cases when the plaint is presented to the proper officer; in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue is filed; and in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator; (b) section 5 as to a suit or application, the period of limitation for which expires on a day when the Court is closed, being admitted on the day that the Court re-opens; and as to an appeal or application for a review of judgment being admitted after the period of limitation, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not presenting it in time; and (c) the whole of Part III relating to the computation of the period of limitation.

A Special Law of Limitation for Rent cases since 1859—Points in which it differed from the general law.

§ 160. Since 1859 there has been a special law of Limitation applicable to Rent Cases. Before the passing of the present general Limitation Act, XV of 1877, this special law differed in some important particulars from the general law:—namely

(1) Contrary to the provisions of the general Limitation Act, when the period of limitation expired upon a day upon which the Court was closed, no deduction of time was allowed and the suit might not be instituted on the day that the Court re-opened:

(2) Contrary to the provisions of the general Limitation Act, the time might not be deducted, during which a plaintiff was conducting with due diligence another civil proceeding founded on the same cause of action, and prosecuted in good faith in a Court, which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature was unable to entertain it:

(3) Contrary to the provisions of the general Limitation Act, no deduction of time was allowed for legal disability, i.e. minority, lunacy, idiocy:

(4) Contrary to the provisions of the general Limitation Act, time was to be computed according to the English calendar:

(5) By a parity of reasoning to that upon which the above propositions are based, the provision of the Limitation Act, which in the computation of the time allowed for appealing permitted a deduction of the time necessary for procuring a copy of the decree and judgment of the lower court, had no application to Rent Cases, although this time was deducted upon the authority of a Circular Order of the Sadr Court.

§ 161. Section 6 of the Limitation Act, (IX) of 1871, enacted as follows:—"When by any law not mentioned in the Schedule hereto annexed and now or hereafter to be in force in any part of British India, a period of limitation differing from that prescribed by this Act is especially prescribed for any suits, appeals or applications, nothing herein contained shall affect such law." Acts X of 1859 and VIII (B.C.) of 1869 are Acts not mentioned in the Schedule here specified, and it was accordingly held that nothing contained in Act IX of 1871 affected these Acts; therefore the rules as to the computation of the period of limitation contained in Act IX did not affect or apply to Rent Suits. Section 6 of the present Limitation Act (XV of 1877), corresponding with section 6 of Act IX of 1871, is couched in different language:—viz. "When by any special or local law now or hereafter in force in British India a period of limitation is specially prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, nothing herein contained shall affect or alter the period so prescribed." It has been held (I.L.R. 5 Calc. 110) that the effect of this change in the language used is, that the rules prescribed by Act XV of 1877 for computing the period of limitation are applicable—apparently on the ground that rules for computing the period of limitation do not affect the period itself. If this decision is accepted as conclusive, it may be unnecessary to extend Part III by special words to Rent Suits, for the whole of this Part, (i.e. sections 12 to 25 inclusive) is concerned with the "computation of the period of limitation" as appears from the heading thereto. We have thought it safer, however, to follow the decision and enact this in express words. After due consideration we have come to the conclusion that it is inadvisable to extend to Rent Suits the allowance of time for disability. We think that a minor ought not to be competent on coming of age to sue a ryot for rent which had accumulated during the whole period of his minority; that this kind of debt, which a poor man usually discharges year by year out of the produce of the year, ought not to be allowed to accumulate; and that, if the manager of a minor's estate neglects his duty of realizing rents as they fall due, the minor's remedy ought to be an action for damages against such manager.

Computation of time where, until termination of litigation as to their mutual rights, landlord could not previously have sued tenant for rent

§ 162. We have provided (section 94) that, when the result of litigation between any persons is such that they are found to stand in the relation of landlord and tenant to each other and to have stood in this relation while such litigation was pending, but, until their mutual rights were finally determined by such litigation, such landlord was unable to sue such tenant for rent, the period of limitation for suing for any such rent shall be computed from the termination of such litigation. We invite criticism to this attempt to formulate a principle, not very susceptible of definite expression. The object we have in view will be rendered more intelligible by some reference to the cases concerned with the application of the principle. In Rani Swarnamayi vs. Shashi Mukhi Barmani, &c. (12 Moor. In. Ap. 244; S. C 2 B. L. R. P. C. 10) the facts were—A zemindar had brought a patni tenure to sale under Regulation VIII of 1819. The patnidar was thereupon ousted and the purchaser took possession of the patni tenure. The patnidar then successfully sued to have the sale reversed on the ground of irregularity, and recovered possession of the patni tenure together with mesne profits from the purchaser for the period of his possession. The zemindar subsequently sued the patnidar for rent for this period. Such rent was barred, if the period of limitation contained in Act X of 1859 were to be applied without qualification. The Privy Council, however, held that it was not barred—that the cause of action accrued at the time at which, the sale having been set aside, the obligation to pay this rent revived—that the patnidar on being restored to possession took back the estate subject to the obligation to pay the rent, and that the particular arrears must be taken to have become due in the year in which that restoration to possession took place. Two points are to be noticed here. First, the zemindar could not sue the patnidar for the rent as long as the latter was out of possession: second, the patnidar received mesne profits for the period for which rent was claimed. From this case were distinguished some subsequent cases in which, although the landlord had denied the continuance of the relation of landlord and tenant and had attempted to put an end to such relation, the tenant was nevertheless not dispossessed and there was in consequence nothing to prevent the landlord from recovering the rent In these cases, although one element, viz. receipt by the tenant of the profits of the land, was present, the other element, viz. inability of the landlord to sue was wanting—(See I. L. R. 3 Calc. 6, 791, 817).

§ 163. We now come to the Second Part of the Bill, which contains the Adjective law or Procedure. The first Chapter of this Part, namely Chapter XV, is concerned with proceedings to enhance the rent payable in money by ryots having a right of occupancy or by tenure-holders or undertenure-holders. We have already fully considered these provisions in discussing the subject of enhancement, this being more convenient than to deal with them in the order of the arrangement of the Bill. Chapter XVI treats of the recovery of arrears of rent in certain cases by summary sale without decree, and is in fact a reproduction of the Patni Regulation, VIII of 1819. The original language of the Regulation has been retained as far as possible, and this will account for some difference in the form of expression between this Chapter and the rest of the Draft Bill. Some alteration of the arrangement of the matter has been necessarily made, and some additions have been made, incorporating the result of the decisions upon important questions raised upon the Regulation. As the law now stands, this procedure can be used only by "proprietors" of revenue-paying estates and in respect of patni tenures and other tenures upon which the right of selling or bringing to sale for an arrear of rent has been specially reserved by stipulation in the engagements interchanged on the creation of such tenures. Whether this procedure should be extended to other tenures, or to undertenures and even occupancy holdings, is a question which may deserve consideration. Some of us have suggested a certain extension; but the majority are opposed to putting this summary procedure into the hands of any other than the superior landlords. The tenure-holders to whom the law now applies are persons of means, able to vindicate their own rights, if unjustly infringed. The proprietors of revenue-paying estates, who may use the law, are persons of substance, against whom a decree for damages can be effectually enforced. It is extremely rare to hear even the allegation that a tenure has been brought to summary sale without arrears being bonâ fide due; and the invariable ground, upon which it is sought to set aside these sales, is irregularity in the publication of the notices This publication, it may be observed, generally depends upon men of subordinate position, not very accurate in transacting business and not generally supposed to be above corruption. So far as these Summary Sales depend upon the acts and volition of the landlords, there is little reason to suppose that the procedure is abused. There may be grave doubts, whether the result would be equally satisfactory, if the same procedure were entrusted to petty landlords, to be put into operation against tenants not always in a position to avail themselves of the aid of the law against oppression.

Summary Sale for Arrears of Rent without Decree Incorporation of the Patni Regulation

Question of extending this procedure to other tenures and undertenures, &c.

§ 164. According to the Regulation—and we have made no change in the Bill—these summary sales take place twice a year, namely, on the 1st Jeyt and on the 1st Aghan. Application for sale is made on the 1st Baisakh and on the 1st Kartik. If these dates happen to fall on a holiday, there is no express provision that the application may be made, or that the sale may take place upon the next open day. We have not inserted any such provision in the Bill,

Is provision required when day of application or day of sale falls on a holiday?

because no case has occurred within our experience, or has been brought to our knowledge, in which hardship has resulted from the want of it. We invite attention to the point, however, as for reasons, which are not before us, it may be desirable to have a precise rule on the subject. The only change which we have made in the provisions of the Patni Regulation is, that we have allowed the defaulting tenureholder, whose tenure has been advertized for sale, to lodge the amount of the arrear in the Government Treasury up till sunset of the day preceding the advertized day of sale. Under the law, as it new stands, the Collector is not bound to receive the arrear of rent except in two cases, viz. (1) when the defaulter has applied for a summary investigation (see section 137 of the Draft Bill); (2) when an undertenure-holder desires to pay the amount in order to prevent the sale and protect his undertenure from the risk of being avoided (see section 138 of the Draft Bill). In these two cases the amount of the arrear may be deposited on the day of sale and at any time before the time of sale. It has, however, happened that the amount has been deposited in the Collectorate in cases other than the above; and that the person, who so deposited it, was under the impression that he had thereby prevented the sale of his tenure, whereas in fact he had not done so, inasmuch as the money should have been paid to his landlord, and a deposit in the Collectorate was no legal bar to the sale. In the particular case to which we allude, the tenure was sold and the tenure-holder had no remedy. We have thought it advisable to prevent the possibility of a recurrence of this hardship by allowing the amount of the arrear to be lodged in the Collectorate in every case. We have at the same time cleared up a point, as to which there has been some doubt, by declaring that the money must be paid to the landlord or lodged in the Treasury (in cases other than the two exceptional cases just stated), before sunset of the day next preceding the day of sale, otherwise that the sale shall not be stayed or postponed.

Amount of arrear may be lodged in the Collectorate before sunset of the day preceding day of sale

§ 165. Chapter XVII contains certain special rules of procedure applicable to suits between landlords and their tenants or agents. It is declared (section 147) that, save where the Bill otherwise provides, The Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to all suits brought for causes of action arising between landlords and their tenants or agents; and (section 148) that the cause of action in all such suits shall be deemed to have arisen within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the recovery of the land in respect of which the relation of landlord and tenant or the agency exists between the parties. This latter provision proceeds upon the lines of the present law. We have retained the existing provisions as to Sarbarakars and Tehsildars suing and being sued, and have extended them to managers under the Court of Wards; but we have provided (section 149) that all such suits shall be conducted or defended in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council, or in the names of the private persons to whom the estates belong. We have also retained the provision of the existing law as to Naibs and Gomashtahs, if specially empowered thereto, acting as the authorized agents of their employers, although such employers are resident within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction. We think that the facility thus afforded to landlords is a reasonable one, which should not be taken away. At the same time we have thought it equally reasonable to provide in the interest of the ryots, that the service of any notice under the Act upon any such Naib or Gomashtahs, or the tender to him of any money or fee, shall be as valid a service or tender, as if the service had been made upon, or the amount or fee tendered to, his employer (section 150).

Save where Bill otherwise provides, Code of Civil Procedure to apply to suits between landlords and their tenants or agents

Sarbarakars and Tehsildars

Naibs and Gomashtahs.

Suit for the determination of the Conditions of a Tenancy.

§ 166. We have already (ante § 8) stated the reasons which have influenced us in doing away with suits for pottahs and kabuliyats, and substituting therefor a simple suit for the determination of the conditions of the tenancy. Either landlord or ryot may sue for the determination of all or any of the following matters:—(a) the quantity of land held by the ryot; (b) the amount of annual rent payable for such land; (c) the class to which the ryot belongs (section 156). The plaint must contain the plaintiff's allegation as to each of these matters, this being necessary for purposes of pleading and for determining the party on whom the burden of proof shall lie. We have provided that no suit shall be dismissed because the plaintiff fails to prove exactly the allegations made in his plaint. The necessity of proving the exact terms of the kabuliyat has destroyed the efficacy of a suit for a kabuliyat under the existing law; and we desire to prevent the Mofussil Courts from the error of perpetuating this result. Whatever may be the allegations in the plaint, the Court shall proceed to ascertain and declare the actual facts of the tenancy.

Ejectment for non-payment of rent.

§ 167. The provisions as to a claim for ejectment being included in a suit for arrears of rent or being based upon an unexecuted decree for arrears, and as to a stay of ejectment, if the decree for arrears is satisfied within fifteen days, are taken from the existing law; but we have appended two Explanations which embody the results of the decided cases—first, that the judgment-debtor is entitled to the benefit of this fifteen days' rule, even though the lease contains a stipulation that it shall be void upon one or more instalments of rent falling into arrear, or upon the breach of any other condition as to payment of rent; secondly that, if the original decree is altered or amended on appeal or review, the fifteen days shall be computed from the date of the judgment on appeal or review; but if not altered or amended, then from the date of the original decree (section 152). We have made no change in the provisions of the present law as to immediate execution in certain cases of ejectment, and as to execution not being stayed pending appeal in such cases (sections 155, 156).

Suits for Abatement of Rent in what Courts to be to be brought.

§ 168. An occupancy ryot is entitled to abatement of rent under the provisions of section 25; and a ryot who has held for more than three, but less than twelve, years, is entitled to claim abatement under the provisions of section 31. We have provided (section 153) that suits for abatement of rent brought by ryots of these two classes, or in other words, by any ryot who has held land for more than three years, may be instituted, (a) when abatement is claimed on the first or second ground specified in section 25, in the Civil Court or before the Collector; (b) when abatement is claimed on the third ground specified in the same section, before the Collector only: provided that no such suit shall be instituted before the Collector unless at least ten ryots join in bringing it. We have allowed ten or more ryots to join in suing for abatement of rent, if they all pay rent to the same landlord, even though their holdings are separate. These provisions are the counterpart of the provisions as to enhancement. When abatement is claimed on account of diminished powers of production or diminished price of produce, the causes in operation affect a certain number of persons, and efficiency of decision, as well as economy of judicial agency, are obtained by the cases being tried together. Suits for abatement brought by tenure-holders, undertenure-holders, and ryots holding at fixed rates of rent are to be instituted in all cases in the Civil Court. Abatement cases before the Collector are to be governed by the provisions of Chapter XV so far as they are applicable. Abatement cases in the Civil Court will be governed by the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure.

Procedure.

When Execution may be had against the person or against movable or immovable property.

§ 169. We have retained (section 154) the provision of the existing law that process of execution may not be issued simultaneously against person and property; but, subject to the rule that a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding must be brought to sale before any other process of execution can be obtained, we have allowed execution to issue against movable or immovable property, or both, thus altering the present practice under which execution can be had against the immovable property of the judgment-debtor only if satisfaction cannot be obtained against his movables. The first provision tends to prevent harassment, more especially in the case of ryots, whose incarceration in a Civil Jail prevents them from cultivating their lands. If they have movable or immovable property which can be made available to satisfy the decree, imprisonment serves no useful purpose, and is in practice seldom resorted to. If they have property which they have concealed, imprisonment occasionally brings about a settlement. If they have no property, they can, if imprisoned, apply to be declared insolvent. As to the second point, we see no reason why any distinction should be made between judgment-creditors for rent and other judgment-creditors in respect of their being permitted to proceed against movable and immovable property indiscriminately.

No appeal from District or Additional Judge, when value of suit does not exceed one hundred rupees, and no question of title has been decided.

§ 170. We have left the law of Appeal in its present state, declaring that nothing in the Bill shall be deemed to alter the law as established by Act X of 1859, so as to confer a right of appeal in any suit tried and decided by a District Judge or Additional Judge originally or in appeal, wherein the amount sued for or the value of the property claimed does not exceed one hundred rupees, if no question of right to enhance or vary the rent of a ryot or tenant, or no question relating to title to land or to some interest in land, as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment in such suit—(section 157). We do not consider it desirable that any alteration should be made in the law, and we have here simply reproduced section 102 of VIII (B.C.) of 1869, the enactment of which has been decided by a Full Bench of the High Court not to be beyond the powers of the Bengal Council (I. L. R. 3 Calc. 151). The words "or Additional Judge" have been inserted in accordance with the decision of the High Court, that a District Judge and an Additional Judge stand in the same category as regards these appeals (13 B. L. R. 376).

Suits against Agents for money or accounts or papers—Law made applicable to all Agents.

§ 171. We have made some important changes in the law concerned with suits against agents for money or accounts or papers. We have in the first place extended these provisions so as to include not only agents who collect the rents from the tenants, but also agents who receive the rents so collected and account for them to the landlord. In large estates it is very usual for one set of amlah to collect the rents in the Mofussil, while another set at head-quarters keep the accounts, receiving the rents from those who collect them and retaining them in a treasury for disbursement as required. There has been some doubt as to whether the special provisions of the present law extend to this latter class of agents, and we have thought it desirable to remove this doubt, and make the procedure applicable to agents employed by landlords in the collection or receipt of rents or the management of land. The present law speaks of "suits for the delivery of accounts," and it is not quite clear what is meant. In some cases judicial officers think it sufficient to give a decree for the manual delivery of certain accounts, e. g. jama-wasil-baki, baki-jai, &c., and consider it a sufficient compliance with this decree, if these accounts be handed into court. The landlord has then to find out as best he may whether they are correct or not; and, if he can prove them to be incorrect, he has to bring a second suit for the recovery of the money which is owing to him upon correct accounts. It is clear that this is a very unsatisfactory method of obtaining a remedy. In other cases the suit is valued at some imaginary sum, say, Rs. 500; and a decree is made for the delivery of the accounts or the payment of this sum, if they are not delivered, no attempt being made to ascertain if, on taking a proper account, this sum would be really due from the agent.

§ 172. We have endeavoured to make the remedy simple and effectual. There are, we conceive, two classes of possible cases—first, where the landlord knows the exact sum of money or the specific accounts or papers which his agent ought to make over to him; second, when in consequence of the agent not having accounted, the landlord is unable to tell what amount has been received and is to be accounted for. The first case may easily occur where there are a few tenants, each paying a considerable amount of rent. The landlord knows what documents connected with their tenancy are in the hands of his agent, and can easily ascertain from his tenants the sums paid over by them to the agent. The second case ordinarily happens when there are a number of small tenants paying each an inconsiderable sum as rent, and it would be extremely difficult to ascertain from each the exact state of his account. In many instances an illiterate ryot is himself unable to say how he stands, and he trusts entirely to the zemindari amlah and their accounts. Then, again, the agent may be charged with all the disbursements connected with the collections, and, until these have been correctly ascertained, it may not be possible to say what balance is due to his employer. In the first of these cases the landlord is required to state in his plaint the exact sum of money which he claims, or to describe the accounts or papers which he demands, from his agent.

Remedy provided for two classes of cases: (1) where landlord knows what money or papers he ought to receive; (2) where, in consequence of agent not accounting, he does not know

Procedure in the first class of cases.

§ 173. The second case is not so simple. We here require the landlord to set forth in his plaint the fact that he is unable to ascertain the exact sum of money or the papers, vouchers, or other documents in the hands of his agent, in consequence of such agent having neglected or refused to render proper accounts, and to pray the Court, that it will take an account from such agent and make a decree for the payment of such sum of money (if any) as may upon the taking of the account be found to be due and owing to the plaintiff, and for the delivery of such papers, vouchers or documents belonging to the plaintiff as may be found in the hands of the agent—(section 161). Upon the filing of this plaint, a summons issues to the defendant, calling upon him to show cause why he should not render a full and satisfactory account of all sums received and disbursed by him, and of all papers, vouchers or other documents which may have come into his hands in the discharge of his duties as agent —(section 162). If the defendant fails to show cause, or does not, in the opinion of the Court, show sufficient cause why he should not render such an account, the Court shall make an order requiring him to file such account in Court and shall fix a day on or before which such account shall be filed. This order, if disobeyed, may be enforced by imprisonment or by attachment of property or by both—(section 163). When the defendant files the account, the plaintiff is to be allowed a reasonable time to examine it, and make objections, if he has any such to make. The Court will then fix a day for hearing and determining such objections, and will make its decree accordingly.

Procedure in the second class of cases.

§ 174. We now come to Chapter XVIII, which contains the abbreviated Procedure which we have been able to devise for Rent Suits. If this procedure appears to any persons less summary than they could wish, and if on this account objections are advanced against it, we can only in reply state our earnest conviction of the extreme danger of summary methods of justice. In order that justice may be done, truth must be elucidated; and the elucidation of truth, especially in this country, and for reasons which we need not here dwell upon in detail, requires time and patience. Any attempt to abridge judicial inquiry by arbitrary and abnormal presumptions in favour of either party, which by precluding the production of evidence may enable Judges to arrive at rapid conclusions, is to our minds retrogressive and unsafe. The history of the judicial administration of this country for the last half century is a continuous record of the abandonment of a system of procedure under which rights were hastily and perfunctorily adjudicated upon, the person defeated and dissatisfied being left to a "regular suit" to right himself, if wronged by an irregular proceeding which too often saddled him with the burden of proof, that should have been laid on the shoulders of his adversary, and thus unfairly diminished his chance of ultimate success. We entirely agree in the wisdom which has abolished this system, we will not say, of administering justice but of choking off litigation, and we cannot recommend the adoption of any Summary Procedure for Rent Suits which would involve even a partial renewal of it.

Abbreviated procedure for Rent Suits—Dangers of a so-called Summary Procedure.

Classes of suits to which the New Procedure is made applicable.

§ 175. At the same time there are, we think, certain classes of rent-suits, to the decision of which full justice can be done by a system of procedure shorter than the elaborate Code now in force for ordinary civil suits; and such a system we have endeavoured to devise. The classes of suits to which we think this procedure can be applied with advantage are:—

(1) suits for the recovery of arrears of rent;

(2) suits for ejectment;

(3) suits to recover possession of land;

(4) suits for damages on account of the illegal exaction of rent or cesses, or on account of the refusal of receipts;

(5) suits to compel the registration of successions to, or transfers of, tenures, undertenures or occupancy holdings.

§ 176. The points of difference between The Code of Civil Procedure and the procedure proposed for the above classes of rent-suits, or in other words, the particulars in which the former procedure has been abbreviated are as follow:—

Certain portions of The Code of Civil Procedure not extended

First.—The following portions of The Code of Civil Procedure do not extend to Rent Suits at all, viz. the sections relating to Discovery, Inspection, Interrogatories, and Affidavits; sections 380-382 as to Security for costs; sections 401-415 as to suits by Paupers; sections 430-434 as to suits by Aliens and by and against Foreign and Native Rulers; sections 470-476 as to Interpleader; sections 503-505 as to Receivers; sections 506-526 as to arbitration; sections 527-531 as to proceedings on the Agreement of parties; sections 532-538 as to Negotiable Instruments; and section 529 as to Public Charities.

Summons to be for Final Disposal.

Secondly.—The summons is to be in all cases for the final disposal of the suit, which is ordinarily to be disposed of at the first hearing—(section 173). We have laid down (section 188) precise rules as to the cases in which an adjournment may be allowed. To deny an adjournment would be in some cases tantamount to a denial of justice, but such cases are exceptional; and, if the Subordinate Courts will do their duty and District Judges see that they do it, we are satisfied that over 90 per cent. of Rent Suits can be properly disposed of at the first hearing.

No written Pleadings

Thirdly.—No written pleadings are required, save that the defendant may, if he desires, file a written statement of his defence—(section 184).

Early and effectual ascertainment of Facts and Documents Disputed.

Fourthly.—We have provided (section 190) that the Court shall upon the day of hearing ascertain from each party whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact and the documents of the opposite party, and shall record such admissions or denials. We believe that this course will in very many cases considerably reduce the quantity of evidence that has to be taken, and in some cases do away with the necessity of taking evidence at all. It is too much the habit with subordinate Judicial Officers to leave the case in the hands of the parties in its earlier stages, rousing their own attention fully only when they come to write their judgment. Facts and documents, which would be readily admitted at the first appearance before the Court, thus come to be strenuously denied, when the parties understand their bearing, are excited by the contest, advised by unscrupulous mukhtars and eager for victory regardless of the means by which it is obtained. The proceedings are thus prolonged and the time of the Court wasted in taking evidence, which ought to have been unnecessary.

Abbreviation of the Record of the Evidence.

Fifthly.—We have provided (section 192) for making a memorandum of the evidence, sufficient to give the gist and substance of what is said, but requiring less time to record than if the whole of what each witness says were taken down at full length, as must be done under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure in all appealable cases. Any particular question and answer may, however, be taken down by the Judge, if he thinks fit—(section 193).

Avoidance of complicated questions of Title

Sixthly.—We have enacted (section 169) that the Court shall not add as a party a person setting up a title adverse to the plaintiff or defendant in respect of the subject-matter of the suit; but any question of title, disputed between any such person and a party to the suit, may be decided in such suit as between the parties thereto, if the decision of such question is necessary to the proper determination of the suit. There is no greater source of delay in the decision of Rent Suits than the raising of complicated questions of title and making the decision of the Court thereupon final and conclusive. Thus in a suit brought to recover a few rupees of rent, the title to property worth a thousand rupees may be litigated, to the great detriment of the stamp revenue. It sometimes indeed happens that the decision of such a question is necessary in order to the decision of the Rent Suit. Where this is the case, it may be tried and decided, but the decision will not be a bar to the formal trial of the same question under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure—(section 223.)

Limitation of Appeal.

Seventhly.—We propose to take away appeals in suits brought for arrears of rent, in which the amount claimed does not exceed ten rupees and in which no question of right to enhance or vary the rent of a tenant has been determined.

§ 177. With respect to the last point, we are of opinion that the right of appeal in petty cases for the recovery of arrears of rent may well be taken away. Well aware as we are of the ideas of the people on the subject of appeal and the general dislike to the final jurisdiction of the Courts of Small Causes, we have provided two safe-guards for the class of cases in which we propose to take away the right of appeal. First, this final jurisdiction is to be exercised only by selected officers specially empowered by the Lieutenant-Governor; secondly, the District Judge is invested with a power of supervision which he can exercise, when satisfied that a failure of justice has been caused by a substantial defect or irregularity in the proceedings or in the decision.

Safeguards under which it is proposed to take away the right of appeal in petty cases

§ 178. The Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by Act XII of 1879, contains 663 sections. Of these, 393 have been extended to Rent Suits. The sections extended are the following:—13, 19, 25, 27, 32, 36 to 41 inclusive, 45, 49, 52 to 57 inclusive, 59, 60, 62, 63, 66, 67, 69, 72, 73, 74, 77 to 88 inclusive, 91 to 103 inclusive, 105 to 109 inclusive, 111, 137 to 144 inclusive, 157 to 169 inclusive, 171 to 178 inclusive, 186, 188, 191, 193, 199 to 203 inclusive, 205, 206, 210, 216, 219 to 228 inclusive, 230 to 234 inclusive, 236 to 254 inclusive, 257, 257*a*, 258, 266 to 304 inclusive, 306 to 319 inclusive, 326 to 379 inclusive, 383 to 395 inclusive, 397 to 400 inclusive, 416 to 429 inclusive, 435 to 469 inclusive, 480, 482 to 491 inclusive, 540 to 591 inclusive, 623 to 630 inclusive, 640 to 645 inclusive, 648, 651, and 652. It may be observed that the use of many of these sections, though necessary at times, will be extremely rare in the trial of Rent Cases. In order to make the Procedure Chapter as simple and as easily workable as possible, two devices have been adopted in extending these sections of The Code of Civil Procedure to Rent Suits—first, the reference to the sections extended in connection with any point is inserted in the particular place in which the operation of those sections is required, e. g. the sections of the Code relating to the service of summons on the defendant will be found in section 174, where provisions as to such service are required: secondly, the reference to the sections of the Code gives the marginal note of each or a sufficient description of its contents to enable the Judicial Officer, who has to use it, to turn to the right section at once without any risk of making a mistake.

Sections of The Code of Civil Procedure especially extended to Rent Suits.

§ 179. There are a few other points connected with the proposed procedure, which may usefully be noticed. And first it may happen that in an important rent suit it would be very expedient that one of the parties should be able to make use of some of those portions of The Code of Civil Procedure, which we have not extended, e.g. inspection, or discovery. We have therefore empowered the District Judge, upon application made, to direct that any particular suit shall be tried under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure, and upon such order being made the whole of such provisions shall be applicable to the trial of such suit.

District Judge may direct that any particular suit be tried under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure.

§ 180. We have provided (section 167) that the plaint shall, amongst other particulars, in suits concerned with tenures, undertenures, holdings or land, set forth the extent, situation, designation, and boundaries of the same, or, where the plaintiff is unable to give the boundaries, in lieu thereof a description sufficient for identification. We have required the same particulars to be inserted in the decree—(section 195, clause (c)). According to section 45 of The Code of Civil Procedure a plaintiff may join in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant or the same defendants jointly. Claims for arrears of rent of two or more tenures, undertenures or occupancy holdings may therefore be joined in the same suit; but, as each is liable and must be brought to sale for its own arrears only, we have required the decree in any such case to show separately the arrears decreed in respect of each tenure, undertenure, and occupancy holding—(section 195, clause (d)).

§ 181. We have substantially adopted the provisions of Act X of 1859 as to the arrest of the defendant before judgment (sections 175 to 179); but we have not allowed such arrest in suits for arrears of the rent of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding hypothecated for its own rent under the provisions of section 64. The defendant can be arrested only if resident within the district in which the Court is held, and if the Court is satisfied (a) that there are primâ facie grounds for believing the claim to be well-founded, and (b) that, if a summons be issued in the first instance, such defendant will abscond. If an arrest be obtained on insufficient grounds, the defendant will be entitled to compensation.

Arrest before judgment allowed in what cases and with what limitations.

§ 182. We have extended to Rent Suits the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to attachment before judgment. These provisions will in certain cases form a useful and legitimate substitute for distraint, enabling the plaintiff to attach the defendant's crops through the Court. We have provided, however, that in suits for arrears of the rent of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding hypothecated for its own rent, there shall be no attachment before judgment, unless the plaintiff can satisfy the Court that such arrears, together with interest and costs, are not likely to be satisfied by the sale-proceeds of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holdings (section 180). We have enacted that standing crops and other ungathered products, which have been so attached, may, notwithstanding such attachment, be reaped and gathered by the defendant, and stowed in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him for the purpose; and, if the defendant neglects to do so, the plaintiff may cause such crops or products to be reaped or gathered and may store them in such granaries or places or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood. We have also provided for an ad interim sale of crops or products which would deteriorate if kept—(section 181).

Attachment before Judgment allowed in what cases and with what limitations.

§ 183. The result of extending section 266 of The Code of Civil Procedure to Rent Suits is that the following movables cannot be taken in execution:—(a) the necessary wearing apparel of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children; (b) implements of husbandry and such cattle as may in the opinion of the Court be necessary to enable the judgment-debtor to earn his livelihood as an agriculturist; (c) the materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by agriculturists. It may be observed that these are not exempted from attachment in execution under the provisions of Act X of 1859, so that in those districts in which this Act is in force, judgment-debtors under decrees for rent are placed at a considerable disadvantage in this respect.

Ryots' implements of agriculture, plough oxen, and houses may not be taken in execution.

§ 184. The principle, borrowed from the Revenue Sale Laws, of making sub-leases and incumbrances voidable upon the sale of a tenure for arrears of rent sometimes works great hardship to innocent persons. It appears to a majority of us very desirable to prevent this hardship, if possible; and we have devised certain means which we hope will successfully accomplish this object. We have provided (section 205) that, when a tenure or undertenure is notified for sale, the amount of the decree and costs may be paid into Court by any one who has an interest which would be endamaged by the sale of such tenure or undertenure free of incumbrances. The amount so paid may be recovered, as money lent, from the person in consequence of whose default to pay rent the tenure or undertenure was notified for sale.

Hardship of avoiding sub-leases and incumbrances upon the sale of a tenure for arrears of rent.

Provisions of the Bill for preventing this hardship.

Payment into Court of the amount of the decree, by person likely to be endamaged by sale.

§ 185. The object of making sub-leases and incumbrances voidable upon the sale of a tenure for arrears of rent is, that the superior

Object of avoiding incumbrances upon landlord's security for his rent may not be impaired. If the sub-leases and incumbrances of a tenure have not absorbed so much of the tenure-holder's profits as to render the interest left him insufficient to meet the rent which he pays to the proprietor of whom he holds his tenure; if the tenure, subject to these sub-leases and incumbrances, will sell for a sum sufficient to satisfy any decree that can be passed for arrears of the rent payable by the tenure-holder—it cannot be said that the proprietor-landlord's security for his rent has been impaired so far as to bring the case within the above object. The right of sub-letting and creating incumbrances belongs to every tenure-holder—such is the common law of the country. So long as the landlord is certain of the rent to which he is entitled, he cannot justly complain of the exercise of this right or claim to interfere with it. When, however, the exercise of the right extends so far as to endanger the landlord's rent, to impair the security for such rent afforded by the sale of the tenure by public auction, the case is altered, and the landlord may reasonably demand that these sub-leases and incumbrances be avoided, which have rendered the remaining interest of the tenure-holder an insufficient security for the rent payable by him.

a sale to secure the landlord's rent

This object not defeated, if claim for rent satisfied by sale of tenure subject to incumbrances § 186. In this view of the matter, we have enacted (sections 203, 206) that a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, about to be sold in execution of a decree for arrears of its own rent, shall first be put up to auction, subject to certain incumbrances, and, if the sum bid is sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs, shall be sold subject to such incumbrances. If the highest amount bid is not sufficient to liquidate the decree, the decree-holder, that is, the landlord, may then claim to have the tenure, &c., sold free of incumbrances. Such sale is not to be had immediately, but upon a subsequent sale-day not less than fifteen or more than thirty days afterwards; and a notification of such tenure being about to be offered for sale free of incumbrances must be posted upon some conspicuous place upon the land of the tenure. The effect of these provisions will be, that persons, who hold sub-leases and incumbrances, will not be endamaged if the bidding on the first sale-day reaches an amount sufficient to satisfy the decree, and the tenure is in consequence sold subject to incumbrances. If, on the other hand, the bidding on the first sale-day does not reach an amount sufficient to satisfy the decree, such persons will have time to protect themselves from injury by paying in the amount of the decree (which they can subsequently recover from the defaulter) and so preventing such a sale of the tenure as will avoid incumbrances.

Bill provides that tenure shall first be put up to auction subject to incumbrances and, if bidding does not reach an amount sufficient to satisfy decree, a sale may then be had free of incumbrances.

§ 187. It has appeared to us that the superior landlord ought to have notice of the creation of the incumbrances to which the above protection is afforded, and that this protection ought not to be extended to all incumbrances indiscriminately. We have accomplished this by defining the term "incumbrances" to mean and include every incumbrance, lien, sub-lease, or subordinate interest which the defaulting holder of the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding was by law competent to create in derogation of his own interest, and which was created by an instrument in writing duly registered, a copy of such instrument being served upon the person to whom the rent of the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding is payable. This provision will, we trust, prevent fraud, if sought to be accomplished by setting up sham incumbrances after the sale. It will also enable an intending purchaser to ascertain the real value of property about to be sold, and he will probably bid more than if he was in a state of uncertainty on this point. We have provided for incumbrances created before the commencement of the Act by instruments in writing duly registered under the law applicable to them, by allowing a copy of any such instrument to be served within six months after the commencement of the Act. Mr. O'Kinealy would extend the same privilege to unregistered incumbrances created before the Act, which were not required to be registered by any law in force at the time of their execution; but a majority of us are apprehensive lest this might induce some persons to set up incumbrances fabricated for the purpose.

Purchaser entitled to avoid all except Registered Incumbrances, unless superior landlord gave written power to create § 188. With the exception of these registered incumbrances, of the creation of which the superior landlord has had notice and which are protected in the case of a sale of the tenure subject to incumbrances, a purchaser will be entitled to avoid and annul all incumbrances imposed upon the tenure by any holder thereof, his representatives or assignees, unless in the case of incumbrances allowed by law, the right of creating the same was expressly granted by the written engagement under which the tenant was originally let into possession, or by the subsequent written authority of the person who let him into possession, or of the representatives or assignees of such person—(section 210). Khúdkasht ryots or resident and hereditary cultivators are not, however, liable to ejectment under this rule, nor can a purchaser cancel bonâ fide engagements made with them, unless he can show that a higher rent would have been fairly demandable at the time when such engagements were contracted: he may, however, proceed under the provisions of the Act to enhance the rents of all other ryots. We have provided in accordance with a decision of the Privy Council, that the judgment-debtor himself or any person acting in fraudulent collusion with him for the purpose of disencumbering the tenure shall not be entitled to avoid incumbrances.

Khudkasht ryots not liable to ejectment.

Court may set aside sale when.

When sale set aside, order to be made for refund of the purchase money.

§ 189. The only other portion of the procedure to which we think it necessary to make special reference is that relating to setting aside sales. The Court may set aside a sale if (a) material irregularity in publishing or conducting it, and (b) substantial injury caused thereby are proved, and not otherwise—(section 212). When a sale is ordered to be set aside, we have provided that the order shall direct the purchase-money to be refunded, with or without interest as the Court may see fit; and that such order may be enforced as a decree for money against any person into whose hands the purchase money or any portion of it may have passed, if such person has been served with notice of the application to have the sale set aside. This will prevent the hardship to a purchaser of having to bring a suit for the recovery of his money after he has lost the benefit of his purchase.

The Bill not larger than the subject requires

§ 190. The Draft Bill, which we have the honor to submit with this Report, contains 225 sections, some of which are of considerable length, being subdivided into two or more sub-sections. Having regard to the extent of the matter, and the importance of the subject with which we have had to deal, we do not think that a Bill codifying the statute law and the case-law concerned with landlords and tenants in these Provinces can be compressed into much less space. We propose to repeal, in whole or in part, seven Regulations of the Bengal Code, four Acts of the Bengal Council, and four Acts of the Supreme Council. The seven Bengal Regulations contain 37 sections, some of which (especially in the Patni Regulation) are longer than any sections of the Bill: Act X of 1859 contains 168 sections: Act VI (B.C.) of 1862 contains 19 unrepealed sections; and Act VIII (B.C.) of 1865 contains 17 unrepealed sections. These four make a total of 241 sections, or more than the number of sections in the Bill. Again, Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, which does not include procedure governed by The Code of Civil Procedure, contains 111 sections. The Draft Bill includes—

	Sections.
Substantive Law	94
Enhancement Procedure	38
Summary Sale Procedure	14
Procedure for recovery of rents, &c.	79
Total ...	22

The North-Western Provinces' Rent Act, 1873, contains 212 sections; and an Amending Bill now before the Council contains 29 sections = total 241. We have briefly adverted to these facts, because one of our colleagues expresses a hope that, if the Bill be brought into Council, it will be made "simple and practicable by cutting out half the sections and sub-sections and all the Illustrations and Explanations." He adds:—"We know by experience that Illustrations and Explanations too often fail in their object, and instead of elucidating raise new and unforeseen difficulties and doubts as to the meaning of the text." The majority of us have not this knowledge, and, until we read this passage, were not aware of its existence. Our own experience has differently informed us. The Illustrations and Explanations in the Penal Code have, we believe, prevented many misconstructions of the text. Whatever difference of opinion there may be as to the utility of Illustrations and Explanations constructed from hypothetical cases, we concur with the modern masters of law-making, who set much value upon Illustrations and Explanations taken from cases which have actually occurred in practice.

Too much must not be expected from a measure of this kind.

§ 191. In concluding the task which has been entrusted to us, and the difficulty of which may be fairly postulated without the appearance of magnifying our duties, we indulge no undoubting confidence that, if the Bill which we have framed becomes law, it will ensure to the rural community of these Provinces a paradise of agricultural peace and prosperity, undisturbed by litigation and untroubled by famine and all the accidents to which the husbandman's life is especially subject in this country. In many recommendations we all concur, who have had different experiences in different districts and in different departments of the public service. Where our views have differed, we have felt ourselves justified in accepting after discussion a compromise which offers violence to the opinions of none. We very earnestly trust that good will come of our labours: but time and experience alone can show whether the hope will be realized. If it be beneficial that men's rights and duties be certain and definite, benefit ought to accrue from the collection in a single Act of all that concerns the rights and duties of landlords and tenants: and many provisions, such for example as those relating to Merger and those concerned with Coparceners, introduce exact rules where much doubt and consequent litigation have prevailed. In the interest of the cultivating class we have afforded protection from arbitrary and excessive enhancement of rents—we have defined the incidents of a right of occupancy and have made it a valuable property in the hands of a careful tenant—we have provided reasonable instalments of rent and secured the evidence of payment—we have restrained the harassment of honest tenants, when their landlords are coparceners and cannot agree—we have given the evicted tenant the crop on the ground sown by himself, and have allowed him compensation for any improvements which he may have made—and finally we have endeavoured to raise the standard of comfort by allowing the ryot to build himself a comfortable habitation and by giving him some share in the material progress of his country.

Provisions in the interest of Tenants.

Provisions in the interest of landlords.

§ 192. In the interest of the landlord we have provided rules for the registration of transfers of, and successions to, tenures, under-tenures, and occupancy holdings—we have allowed the tenant to be ejected who disclaims his landlord's title, a valuable sanction in a country where the person who sets up a hostile title too often hopes to support it by suborning to his side the tenants of the person in possession—we have provided definite rules for the enhancement of the rents of tenure-holders and undertenure-holders—and for the purpose of a reasonable enhancement of ryots' rents we have placed the executive agency of Government at the disposal of the zemindar, and have put him in as good a position as Government itself for the achievement of this object. Finally, we have provided the auction-purchaser, who represents an important landholding interest in this country, with the means of realizing the profit of capital invested in land. This ought to increase the value of landed property, and so benefit the landholding community. We believe that the advantages offered by the Bill to landlords are a full equivalent for anything proposed to be given to the ryots. If any think otherwise, we desire to remind them of how much more, in the opinions of some, the ryots are entitled to demand. As to the power of the Legislature to redistribute property in land at any time, when such a redistribution is required in the interests of the entire community, there can be no doubt. If such a redistribution has for its immediate result the impairment of existing interests, compensation is usually given by civilized Legislatures; and we are of opinion that this rule should prevail, if anything contained in the Draft Bill constituted a case to which the rule can be applicable. The majority of us desire, however, to say very emphatically, that in our opinion nothing contained in the Draft Bill constitutes such a case; and that all its provisions, so far as they propose to benefit the ryots, fall well within the power expressly reserved by the conditions of the Permanent Settlement—the power, that is, reserved to the Governor-General of enacting, whenever he might deem it proper, such Regulations as he might think necessary for the protection and welfare of the dependent talukdars, ryots, and other cultivators of the soil.[8]

[8] Clause 1, Section 8, Reg. I of 1793.

Remarks by MR. DAMPIER.

§ 1. CHAPTER XV of the Bill treats "Of Proceedings to Enhance the Rent payable in Money by Ryots having a Right of Occupancy. The sections of this Chapter as they stand drafted provide for the landlord, who has a permanent transferable interest in the land, new facilities for enhancing the rent of his occupancy ryots by a procedure before the Collector. If he wishes to enhance on the first, second, or third ground mentioned in section 22, they give him the option of proceeding either before the Civil Court as hitherto, or before the Collector according to the new procedure; if on the fourth ground (rise of prices), he can proceed before the Collector only.

§ 2. It is supposed that where the landlord wishes to proceed against a few ryots only, he will elect the Civil Court. I see no reason for assuming this. If the new procedure before the Collector becomes popular with landlords, they will probably elect it even for isolated cases. This would be going beyond the object of the present remedial measure, which is to provide a special means for enabling the landlord to overcome the resistance which is offered by combinations of ryots, it having been found that when ryots so combine the landlord is practically powerless to enforce the rights which legally and admittedly belong to him.

§ 3. Again, if the new procedure becomes popular, and its adoption depends solely on the will of the landlord, I fear that simultaneous demands will be made on the Government for agency to carry it out, which will be very embarrassing and perhaps impossible to comply with promptly. I would therefore retain in the hands of Government the power of deciding whether cases for determining the amount of rent payable by each individual shall be dealt with by the Revenue Authorities or not.

If a landlord desires the preparation of a Table of Rates of general application, he should of course apply to the Collector under sections 101 et seq., but cases for determining the amount of rent payable by each ryot, whether in accordance with a Table of Rates so prepared or otherwise, I would have instituted in the first instance before the Civil Court, section 30 of the Civil Procedure Code being made use of, if necessary.

§ 4. Then, if the suits so instituted were numerous, and if the circumstances showed the existence of the special difficulty which the new procedure before the Collector is devised to meet, the suits should be transferred to the Collector. I would not leave the power of ordering such transfers in the hands of the Judge as is done by section 130 of the Bill, but in those of the Lieutenant-Governor. If on a representation from the Judge, the Lieutenant-Governor were satisfied that good reason for the transfer existed, he would order the Collector to make an Enhanced Jamabandi such as is contemplated in sections 107 et seq. of the Bill.

§ 5. I would, however, make an exception of the cases contemplated in Sections 112 et seq. in which the landlord can show that, from causes beyond his own control, he is without information as to the existing details of the estate. The hardship of these cases and the difficulties with which a purchaser is beset on acquiring a property from a hostile proprietor, who withholds papers and information, are matters of notoriety. In these cases I would allow the landlord to apply at once to the Collector to make a "Settlement Jamabandi" as contemplated in section 112.

CALCUTTA,
The 5th June 1880.

Remarks by BABOO PEARY MOHUN MOOKERJEE.

§ 1. As several of the provisions of the Draft Bill were carried by a majority of votes, and as the above Report very properly gives only such facts and arguments as support those provisions, I wish to record my views on some, at least, of the cardinal points involved in the Bill.

Report, para. 45.

§ 2. The Bill has been avowedly framed on the principle that "the land of a country belongs to the people of the country; and, while vested rights should be treated with all possible tenderness, no mode of appropriation and cultivation should be permanently allowed by the Ruler, which involves the wretchedness of the majority of the community." This is a theory, however, which assails the very foundation of private property. Whether they are the outcome of prescriptive enjoyment, or the result of acquisition by labour or money, rights of property should be scrupulously respected, and if the Ruler thinks it desirable that a vested right should be destroyed, let it be compensated for at its money value, or some other equivalent paid to its possessor. It is as reasonable to trench upon a vested right of a landholder for the good of the ryots, as to ask a ryot to carefully cultivate land for the benefit of the entire Indian community.

Preamble and section 2 of Regulation XLIV of 1793. Sections 52 and 60 of Regulation VIII of 1793.

§ 3. The Government of 1793 declared the zemindars to be "proprietors of the soil" and "landowners." With the exception of ryots who held under pottahs granted before the conclusion of the settlement, and khudkasht ryots, no other ryots were declared to have any right of occupancy in the land, or any right to hold land at fixed rates of rent. The landholders, on the contrary, were enjoined not to grant pottahs for a term exceeding ten years.

4, Wyman, page 247.

§ 4. In 1864 a majority of the Judges of the High Court gave it as their opinion that the right of occupancy created by section 6, Act X of 1859, was an invasion of the rights of the landholder. Mr. Justice Trevor declared it "a great infringement of the law previously existing," and Sir B. Peacock, Baboo Sumbhoo Nath Pundit, and others, suggested its abolition. The former learned Chief Justice based his recommendation on the grounds that "it interferes with the just rights of the zemindars, at least in the permanently settled districts, by vesting rights of occupancy in the ryots, which had no previous existence;" and secondly, that "it tends to perpetuate small holdings, which must ultimately become injurious to the best interests of the country." Sir R. Garth is quite as strong in his opinion on the subject—"Now, however wise and politic this provision might have been, it seems to me impossible to deny that it operated as an invasion of the landholder's rights as conferred upon him by the Permanent Settlement."

Note dated 8th January 1880.

§ 5. The right has now been enjoyed by ryots for so long a time that the question of its abolition is at the present moment beyond the pale of discussion, but in the face of the above opinions expressed by responsible interpreters of the law, landholders have a right to ask that there should be no further encroachment on their rights. The Bill, however, provides for the extension of the right of occupancy (1) to those who have held or cultivated land under a Mukarraridar or Istemrardar; (2) to sub-ryots who have held or cultivated land otherwise than for a term, or year by year, under ryots having rights of occupancy; and, in a qualified form, (3) to ryots who have held land for three years or more, and less than 12 years.

Section 19, Explanation 3.

Chap. IV.

§ 6. Section 19 of the Draft Bill, which takes away the right of occupancy from Mukarraridars, Istemrardars and all ryots whose holdings have been or will be declared, under the operation of the 20 years' presumption, protected from enhancement of rent, and transfers it to their under-ryots, will be productive of great confusion.

will place the Mukarraridars at the mercy of their superior holders as regards lands which they cultivate themselves, and restrict their claim to rent from their under-ryots to a percentage of the produce much below what they get at present in several districts. The zemindars will also come in for their share of the loss. Section 20(c) of the Bill recognises the right of the landlord to take possession of the land of any occupancy ryot who dies leaving no heirs, but neither on the death of the Mukarraridar, nor of his under-ryot, would he be entitled to take possession of the land. In the first case the holding would escheat to Government, and in the second the land would lapse to the Mukarraridar. Section 23 (c.)

§ 7. The new provisions regarding sub-lessees find no justification in any interpretation of the present law. It has been held by the Courts that sub-lessees can acquire no right of occupancy, and it was observed by Mr. Justice L. S. Jackson in 22, W. R. 26 that "the law allows a subletting by a ryot who has a right of occupancy, though it does not permit the growth of a right of occupancy within a right of occupancy." The creation of a sub-occupancy right would cause a radical change in the position of a large class of ryots and lead to inextricable confusion in the determination of the respective rights of ryots and their sub-lessees. A ryot who has sublet a portion of the lands which comprise his holding will be a sort of middleman as regards that portion, and an occupancy ryot as regards the remainder. There is nothing to prevent the sub-lessee, when he finds that he has substantial rights in the land, from sub-letting it in his turn to a second grade of sub-lessees who, although the actual cultivators of the soil and the men whom it is intended to benefit, will have no rights at all. 19, W. R. 95. 15, W. R. 469.

§ 8. It will be equally objectionable to give a recognized status and rights to ryots who have held for more than three and less than 12 years. It will be a new and unwarrantable infringement of the rights of the zemindar. It has been an established principle in this country that ryots, who have not acquired a right of occupancy by holding or cultivating land for the full period of 12 years, must pay whatever rent is demanded of them by the landlord or quit the land. But it is now proposed that whenever a ryot has held or cultivated land for only three years, he shall acquire quasi-proprietary rights in the land. He has a right to claim abatement of rent in the same way as an occupancy ryot. If the landlord claims more rent than what the ryot is willing to pay, he cannot get rid of the ryot, unless he previously pays him as compensation for disturbance a sum equal to the increased rent demanded, and compensation also for houses built and works done on the land, perhaps without the landlord's knowledge or consent. Considering the price at which existing occupancy holdings are sold when they are sold by public or private sales, the compensation thus calculated will be greater than the full price of such holdings. These ryots will therefore virtually enjoy in many cases a more valuable right than existing occupancy ryots. Section 31. Section 27(b).

§ 9. The legal incidents which have been declared to appertain to a right of occupancy also involve encroachments on the zemindar's rights. Contrary to well-recognized custom and the law as interpreted by the Courts, a ryot has been declared entitled to erect a brick-built or other dwelling-house and out-offices, and to dig a tank on his land, without the permission of the zemindar, and also "to cut down and appropriate trees on his holding planted by himself or by any ryot from whom such holding was derived by public or private sale, gift, device or inheritance." It has been held that "a zemindar has a right to the trees grown on his land by the tenant, who, though he may enjoy the benefit of the growing timber, has no 3, I. L. R., pages 696, 781. Section 36. Section 77. Spl. W. R. 367.

power to cut the trees down." By cutting down the trees on any land, the letting value of the land is materially diminished, and the money that is required for removing the stumps and bringing the land to a culturable state is often considerable. If, therefore, after appropriating the trees, the ryot relinquishes the land, the gain is entirely on his side, and the loss entirely on the side of the zemindar. The provisions with regard to the dwelling-houses of ryots are based on incorrect premises. It has been assumed that "owing to the uncertain state of the law, many ryots entertain a bonâ fide belief that they may build as they please upon their land." The fact, however, is quite the reverse. A ryot, who wants to build a dwelling-house, invariably goes to the zemindar or his agent and rents a plot of bastú land for the purpose. He has to pay no fee unless he wishes to erect a brick-built house. He never meets with any difficulty in building his house, but he is well aware that he cannot, without the permission of the zemindar, build on his arable land and thus change it into bastú, which in several places yields less rent than arable land, and not always greater, as has been assumed. Ryots always protect themselves by taking perpetual leases from their landlords whenever they wish to build a substantial house or to lay out a garden. The last Administration Report shows that in 1878-79 so many as 119,015 of such leases were registered in these provinces. The provision in question is therefore altogether unnecessary, and it will be a source of great loss to the zemindar, especially by reason of the rule which lays down that the rent of bastú land shall not be more than 5 per centum per annum of the market value of such land. Even supposing for a moment, as has been supposed, that an occupancy holding is worth four years rent, a ryot would have simply to build a house or an out-office on a plot of arable land in order to get the rent of that plot ultimately reduced to $\frac{1}{5}$th of what he was paying. The value of an occupancy holding, however, in many places rarely exceeds one year's rent. In such places therefore the rent of occupancy holdings converted into bastú would be according to the proposed rule proportionately smaller. These remarks apply with necessary modification to the provision which gives a ryot the power to excavate tanks without the permission of the zemindar.

Section 39.

§ 10. The Bill, it is true, gives the zemindar the power to eject a ryot who builds a factory or other structure not required for his dwelling, but even in such cases the ryot is delared entitled to compensation for the loss sustained by him, if from his ignorance of the changed use of the land the landlord fails to give notice to the ryot within a reasonable time. In dealing with these questions, it would be well to bear in mind the remarks made by Mr. Justice Ainslie in 3, I. L. R. 784: "The statutory right of occupancy cannot be extended so as to make it include complete dominion over the land, subject only to the payment of a rent liable to be enhanced on certain conditions. The landlord is still entitled to insist that the land shall be used for the purposes for which it was granted, and although a liberal construction may be adopted, it cannot extend to a complete change in the mode of enjoyment."

§ 11. In the matter of enhancement of rent, the provision which has hitherto placed the greatest obstacle in the way of the zemindar has been left untouched. No one questions the justice of the rule which protects from enhancement of rent a holding which has been held at an uniform rate of rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, but why exempt the ryot, the party who makes the affirmative allegation, and who is best able to prove it if it is true, from proving that the holding has been so held, and throw the burden of proving that it has not been so held on the zemindar, who has no means of discharging it? The number of landholders in these provinces, who date their title from the time of the Permanent Settlement, may be counted on our fingers. With these rare exceptions, all the landholders have derived their title by public or private sales. Experience has shown that in the immense majority of enhancement suits, perhaps more than 90 per cent, they were unable to rebut the presumption which the law raises in favor of the ryot on his proving uniform payment of rent for 20 years before suit. It cannot be that in all these cases the lands were held from 1793; such a supposition would be incompatible with the well-known fact that more than one-third of the land in these provinces was waste at the time of the Permanent Settlement, and that the rates of rent in every pergunnah varied from time to time. The landholders were therefore unable to get their just dues by reason of their inability to rebut a presumption which under any circumstances, and especially when they were auction purchasers, they found it impossible to rebut. Soon after Act X of 1859 was passed, this rule of law was found to work very hard upon the zemindars, but the success with which ryots have in a majority of cases resisted enhancement of rent on some technical plea or other during the last 20 years has placed in their hands evidence which will make the law of presumption operate with double hardship upon the landholder. Nothing, however, shows more clearly the injustice of this rule of presumption than the necessity which the Commission has found of protecting the interests of Government against its operation, by providing that in "estates not permanently settled such presumption shall not operate to prevent the enhancement of rent." If Government with all its prestige and influence, and all the means and appliances which a well kept and organised system of accounts places at its disposal, has found by experience the necessity of a change in the law to protect its own interests, how much more imperative must be the necessity for an amendment of the law for protecting the interests of private landholders?

Sections 6 and 17, Exceptions.

§ 12. As regards the rates of enhancement of rent, the provisions of the existing law have been radically modified on the hypothisis "that the ruling power ought to determine the rents payable in these provinces by the ryots to the zemindars." My reading of the Regulations has, however, led me to the conclusion that the Legislature has always recognised it as an established principle in this country that it is not the ruling power, but custom, which determines the rents payable by ryots to their landlords. The Regulations of 1793 declared the zemindar entitled to get the customary or full pergunnah rate. Speaking of the protection from ejectment which ryots (evidently khudkasht) enjoy in many parts of Bengal, Lord Cornwallis says in his Minute dated the 3rd of February 1790—"Whoever cultivates the land, the zemindar can receive no more than the established rent which in most places is fully equal to what the cultivator can afford to pay. To permit him to disposses one cultivator for the sole purpose of giving the land to another, would be vesting him with a power to commit a wanton act of oppression from which he could derive no benefit." Regulation V of 1812, and all the Sale Laws, recognize the existence of customary or pergunnah rates, and the framers of Act X of 1859 did not take away the rights which the landholders enjoy in this respect. Mr. Mackenzie rightly observes in paragraph 7 of his Note dated the 6th of January last—"I hold that it (a right of occupancy) should only protect the ryot against arbitrary ejectment, and does not entitle him to hold at any privileged rate of rent." Sir Barnes Peacock remarked in his decision in Isshur Ghose's case—"To hold that the Legislature intended to confer rights of occupancy which did not previously exist, at rents lower than such as could be reasonably obtained from new ryots, would be giving a construction to the Act which would render it an unjust interference with the vested rights of the landholders in the permanently settled districts, would considerably reduce the value of their property, and would defeat the expectations which at the time of the Permanent Settlement were held out to them that they would enjoy exclusively the fruits of their own good management and industry." In one of the leading decisions on the subject, the Privy Council observed that "a suit to enhance rent proceeds on the presumption that a zemindar holding under the Permanent Settlement has the right from time to time to raise the rents of all the rent-paying lands within the zemindaree, according to the pergunnah or current rates, unless he is precluded from the exercise of that right by a contract binding on him, or the lands in question can be brought within one of the exemptions recognised by Bengal Regulation VIII of 1793." The Government of 1793 reserved to itself, by section 8, Regulation I of 1793, the power to enact such Regulations as may be necessary "for the protection and welfare of dependent talukdars, ryots, and other cultivators of the soil," but the reservation referred, to use the words of the despatch of the Court of Directors, to "such Regulations as might be necessary to prevent the ryots from being improperly disturbed in their possession or loaded with unwarrantable exactions." It would be altogether incompatible with the letter and spirit of the Regulations which were passed simultaneously in the year 1793 to hold that that power extended to the determination of rents payable by ryots to their landlords.

Harington's Analysis, volume II, page 189.

§ 13. Following up the hypothesis which I have combated above, the Commission has suggested a provision to the effect that the enhanced rent of an occupancy ryot should not be more than one-fourth of the average annual value of the gross produce of the land. This dogmatic limitation of the zemindar's share of the produce is not only contradicted by the glaring fact that both in Bengal and Behar, when rent is payable in kind, the zemindar's share of the produce is rarely less than 50 per cent, but it is also indefensible on the grounds of justice and even of expediency. In those tracts of the country where rent is at present considerably more than 25 per cent of the value of the produce, this rule will stop enhancement of rent altogether. The argument that the landlords in those places already enjoy more profits than what they are fairly entitled to is at best specious. The profits of landlords are not necessarily large in districts in which the ratio of rent to produce is high, nor are they necessarily small where the ratio is low. It appears from the valuations of estates as determined by road cess papers, that in Beerbhoom and Hooghly, where the ratio of rent to produce is considerably more than one-fourth, the revenue is more than 45 per cent of the valuation, while in Dacca and Chittagong, where the ratio of rent to produce is less than one-sixteenth, the revenue is less than 25 per cent of the valuation of estates. The result of the operation of the proposed rule will be that in some cases, as I have already said, it will stop enhancement altogether; in others it will raise the rent in various proportions; in others again it will lead to a decennial doubling of the rents, and in all it will disturb the relative profits which the landlord and the ryot have been hitherto deriving from the land. The rule will not give the Courts any help in the decision of suits for enhancement of rent. It is easy to see by the light of the official information placed before the public during the administration of Sir Richard Temple and since, that it will be no great help to the Courts to know that the maximum limit of rent is 25 per cent of the produce, when the prevailing ratio is perhaps 5 per cent in one place and 40 per cent in another.

Mr. Harrison's Tables.

§ 14. Mr. Trevor observed in the GreatRent case—"As, then, the terms 'fair and equitable' seem to me to have relation to the customary rate of the country, representing a share of the gross produce calculated in money, under whatever form of expression it be designated, and as the law directs that in case of disputes the rate of rent which a ryot with a right of occupancy has paid shall be considered fair and equitable until the contrary be shown, it is a fair presumption that the rent now paid represents the customary rent in the absence of any proof to the contrary. Under this presumption, then, when the value of the produce has increased otherwise than by the agency or the expense of the ryot or the zemindar, and simply in consequence of the rise of prices, what is the principle on which the rent should be adjusted? As the rent now paid represents the customary rent, it represents, on the view which I have adopted, that proportion of the gross produce calculated in money to which the zemindar was entitled; and as the increase in the produce has arisen from circumstances independent both of the zemindar and the ryot, the zemindar is entitled to a rise in his rent proportionate to the increased value of his share of the produce." Taking into consideration all the circumstances affecting the question, the above rule offers the most equitable solution of the difficulty. It gives the landlord and the ryot shares of the produce which local custom has declared to be their proper shares, and it distributes the increased value of produce between them in the ratio in which it was always distributed. The members of the Commission agree with Mr. Trevor in thinking "that existing rents should be taken as the basis of operation," and yet, instead of trying to reduce the rule of proportion in enhancement suits into a workable form, the majority have satisfied themselves with suggesting a maximum limit to enhanced rent. It appears to me that the practical operation of the equitable principles enunciated in the judgment in the Great Rent case will be rendered easy, and the difficulties which at present beset the investigation and decision of enhancement suits will be wholly removed if, by a careful enquiry, the ratio which rent bears to produce in different districts or other local areas be determined and declared once for all, and all suits and proceedings for the enhancement of rents be decided in future on the basis of such ratios. The justice of the rule has been indirectly admitted in the Draft Bill, but it has been recommended in such a form that it will simply perpetuate the difficulties of enquiry, the difference of results in different suits, and the consequent confusion which have always attended the practical working of the rule in the form in which it has been laid down in the Great Rent case.

Report, para. 47.

Section 23(b).

§ 15. If the rule of proportion be taken as the fundamental rule for enhancement of rent, as it has always been taken to be, there will be no necessity for the rule (1) that the enhanced rent shall not be more than double the previous rent, or for the rule (2) that after the rent of a holding has been once enhanced, there shall be no enhancement for a period of 10 years next ensuing, or for the rule (3) that if the increase of the productive powers of the land or of the price of produce has taken place otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the landlord or the ryot, the landlord shall be entitled to only one-half of the benefit of such increase. Rules (1) and (2), although unnecessary, are comparatively unobjectionable; but by rule (3), which is as positive in its terms as rule (1), the benefit of the increase will be equitably divided in districts like Hooghly and Burdwan, but it will distribute the benefit between the landlord and the ryot in Dacca and Chittagong in a ratio which, as against the ryot, will be eight to ten times greater than the ratio in which it has been hitherto divided. The effect of all the various provisions regarding enhancement of rent will therefore be that instead of a simple rule of proportion to go by, the Munsif or the Collector will have before him for his guidance a number of rules which, without introducing an additional atom of equity or justice in the determination of the question, will complicate matters infinitely more than the existing rule which they are intended to supersede.

Section 11. § 16. It has been proposed to convert all holdings of ryots which singly comprise 100 bighas or more into tenures. This proposal, although it entails some loss on the landholders, would have been harmless enough, if the maximum margin of profits which a tenure-
Section 9. holder may have for his share had not been raised to 30 per cent of the balance, which remains after deducting from rents payable to him the expenses of collecting such rents. Regulation V of 1812, section 8, fixed the share of the tenureholder's profits at 10 per cent of the gross rents collected by him, and although that law was repealed in 1859, and by oversight no new provision enacted in its Report, para. 51. place, the Courts have continued to hold such share to be fair and Report, para. equitable. It is admitted that tenureholders and other middlemen "are no very useful members of an agricultural community." Why then raise their share of the profits? Why do it at a great sacrifice of the interest of the zemindar?

Section 23(d). § 17. The clause regarding progressive enhancement, providing that a decree may direct that the rent shall increase yearly by degrees for any number of years not exceeding 5 until the limit of the enhanced rent is reached, is also open to objection. On this point I wish only to repeat what I said in my Note dated the 20th April 1880: "The idea of progressive enhancement is new and altogether foreign to the subject. When waste land is to be cultivated, one can understand a ryot wishing to rent it at a progressive jumma in consideration of the time which must elapse before the land will yield a full crop; but why should a ryot be entitled to pay even for two or three years anything less than what the Court holds to be the fair and equitable rate? It would be taking an altogether wrong view of the rights of the parties if we think that the burden of enhanced rent should be lightly and gradually thrown on the ryot. A consumer of food-grain has much better right to claim a progressive instead of a sudden rise of the price of grain. In the case of the ryot it must be assumed that there has been a steady rise of the value of produce, and that he has refused to pay amicably to the landholder the share of the increased value which he is entitled to get. Tenderness to the ryot, under such circumstances, will be wholly misplaced. It will simply give a premium to litigation, and stop for ever all amicable adjustment of rent."

Section 21. § 18. When rent is payable in kind, the share of the produce which the landlord is entitled to receive has been limited to 50 per cent. In many places, however, both in Bengal and Behar, the landlord's share is nine-sixteenths of the produce, even when the ryot does not receive from him seed, labor, or other assistance. An attempt to reduce existing rates will be not only fraught with injustice, but it will be also productive of much confusion by the disturbance of existing Section 86. rights. I also object to the ryot in Behar being invested with the power of having rent payable in kind commuted to an annual money rent. Where rent is paid in kind there is no necessity for enhancement; both the parties get their customary share of the benefit whenever there is an increase in the value of produce. The proposed change will make litigation inevitable where the rights of the parties at present adjust themselves without any extraneous intervention.

§ 19. The provisions for the distraint of crops are very widely resorted to by landholders for the recovery of their rents. They enable them to realize their rents at the proper time, simply by the threat of coercive measures without putting the legal machinery into action, while they save the ryot the loss of time, work and money attendant on suits for arrears of rent. The landlords have seldom the motive to abuse the power vested in them, and, as a matter of fact, the power is seldom abused. The heavy penalties provided for cases of abuse of the power are effectual deterrents against wanton or oppressive distraint. Whenever the power is improperly exercised, the law gives the ryot ample compensation for any losses sustained by him. The process of distraint is a mode of proceeding which has taken root in the minds of landlords, and it is regarded by them as the most effectual means for the easy and timely realization of their rents from a body of men who are known to be generally improvident, and who would be ultimately injured rather than benefited by the abolition of the process. The reasons given for its abolition are based on incorrect and insufficient information, and they do not justify a change in the law, which will be a misfortune alike to zemindar and ryot. Report, para. 4.

§ 20. The necessity for investing the District Courts with the power of appointing a Manager for the management of an estate or tenure held by two or more co-parceners, when even a single ryot, or the owner of an infinitesimal share, chooses to apply for such an appointment, has not been made out. The decision recently passed by a Full Bench of the High Court, recognizing the power of every co-parcener to have his share of the rent apportioned by a suit in Court, will remove all sources of annoyance to the ryots of joint estates and tenures, and of disputes among the co-parceners themselves. The proposal for the appointment of Managers by Court is therefore uncalled for. A similar proposition started at the time of Sir George Campbell was looked upon with disfavour by the executive and judicial officers who were consulted about it, and it was abandoned after a thorough discussion of its merits and demerits. It is certainly not desirable that the mediæval passion for superseding the independent conduct of every man's affairs by officious legislation in matters relating to land should not be revived. Section 65.

§ 21. There are some minor points on which also I am obliged to differ from the majority of my colleagues:—(1) The present law allows interest at the rate of 12 per cent on arrears of rent. The Draft Bill takes away the landlord's right to collect rent by monthly kists, and yet it makes the rate of interest in some measure discretionary with the Courts. (2) It has been no doubt held by the Courts that a slight increase of area of a holding, where the boundaries have not changed, is no ground for enhancement of rent. The Draft Bill, however, gives illustrations of the principle which, if followed, would, in a large number of cases not legitimately coming within it deprive the landlord of his right of enhancement on the ground of excess lands. It is also evident that where the rent is fixed at so much per bigha, the above principle does not apply, and there is no reason why there should be no enhancement even for a slight increase of area. On the other hand, a ryot can apply for abatement of rent on the allegation that his holding of ten bighas is found by measurement to be one cottah less than that quantity. (3) The change which the Bill seeks to introduce in the law relating to the sale of tenures for their own default is unnecessary, and I have no doubt that it will be a fruitful source of litigation. Section 56. Section 22. Section 25. Section 206.

§ 22. The discussions that were invited on the proposal for making rights of occupancy transferable showed that, while it involved a great injustice to the landholders, it was a matter of questionable expediency. The observations made on the subject by the learned Chief Justice in his Note dated the 8th of January last are so well founded on facts, and so well argued, that I shall content myself with giving extracts from it. After assuming that the creation of the right of occupancy could be defended on grounds of equity, he pertinently asks—"If the equity to the landlord consisted in his being permanently secured a good tenant, what becomes of the equity if you allow the tenant to transfer his interest? It is hardly fair to suggest that zemindars ought not to object to the transferability of ryots' tenures, on the ground that the measure would be merely unpleasant or injurious to themselves. It strikes me that this is just the ground upon which zemindars, or any other class of men, are perfectly justified in objecting to any public measure. I can hardly conceive a greater source of irritation than for a rival zemindar to buy up a number of ryots' holdings in the middle of his neighbour's estate, and to use his influence and position, so obtained, to create disaffection and disloyalty amongst his neighbour's ryots. It seems to me impossible to contend, with any show of reason, that it is no injustice to a landlord to deprive him of the right, which he has by law, of selecting his own tenants; and I confess that I cannot view such injustice in the light of a sentimental grievance. I think it equally true, on the other hand, that to give a poor population like the Bengal ryots the means of selling or mortgaging their tenures at pleasure is a very certain means of making them improvident and unthrifty. I should have thought that the most effectual way of protecting such people, and preventing them from wasting their substance, would be to secure them a permanent interest in their property by prohibiting the alienation of it in any shape or way." If rights of occupancy be made transferable, the provision for the ejectment of occupancy ryots for arrears of rent must be, as it has been in the Draft Bill, done away with. Should therefore Government determine to give a saleable character to occupancy holdings, the zemindars have a right to expect that they should be adequately compensated for these new infringements of their rights, and that at least effective facilities will be given them for recovery and enhancement of rent.

Section 79, Explanation.

§ 23. What are the facilities and benefits which the Draft Bill proposes to give the landholders in exchange for the new encroachments upon their rights? The provisions touching the registration of transfers of tenures, undertenures and holdings by succession, gift, sale and otherwise, are perhaps the only sections in the Bill which they can look upon as an improvement on the present law, so far as regards a proper recognition of their rights in one particular. These provisions are, however, a necessary corollary to the new sections regarding the transferability of ryoti holdings. The new provisions for the settlement of rent by the Collector are of questionable benefit to the zemindar. They take away the constitutional rights of parties as to representation by Counsel and as to appeals, and place the determination of most valuable rights in the hands of the executive.

Sections 46, 54.

§ 24. Upon the whole, I think that the Draft Bill in its present form will not be nearly half so acceptable to the general body of landholders as the written and unwritten laws which now govern their relations with their ryots. For one good measure or two which we propose to offer them, we propose to curtail and annihilate their rights in fifty different directions.

PEARY MOHUN MOOKERJEE.

14*th June* 1880.

Remarks by Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy.

§ 1. I do not approve of the Draft Bill as a whole, and strongly disapprove of the many material changes which it proposes to make in the substantive law relating to rights in land. I always deprecated such changes. The relation of landlord and tenant, with reference to rights in land, is such that you cannot confer a valuable right upon one class without causing a corresponding diminution in the interest of the other. I was therefore of opinion that we ought not to make any substantial alterations in the respective rights of landlords and tenants as defined by Act X of 1859 and Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869; but that we might do a great deal for their common benefit and diminish litigation by simplifying the procedure, by simplifying the relations of the two classes, and by removing the technical difficulties and formal obstacles which now exist in the way of the exercise of their just and undoubted rights. The majority of the Official Members, who likewise formed the majority of the Rent Commission, however, held views somewhat different, and seemed to think that the line drawn by the existing law [Act X of 1559 and Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869] between the conflicting rights of landlord and tenant was not sufficiently "scientific," and that they (the majority of the Rent Commission) might, and should now, recast land-tenures and make a redistribution of the property in land between the two classes.

§ 2. There was considerable discussion and difference of opinion upon one point, viz. whether Act X of 1859 had altered the previously existing law to the advantage or disadvantage of the ryot. Upon this point I entertain a very clear and decided opinion, which is likewise supported by high authority. In the Minute of Sir Barnes Peacock, dated the 31st March 1864, he says: "It appears to me that Section 6 is objectionable and ought to be repealed, first, because it interferes with the just rights of the zemindars, at least in the permanently-settled districts, by vesting rights of occupancy in the ryots, which had no previous existence." Lord Canning, in his message conveying his assent to the Bill (Act X of 1859), said: "It had long been desirable that the important questions connected with the relative rights of landlord and tenant dealt with by the Bill should be settled; that the Bill was a real and earnest endeavour to improve the position of the ryots of Bengal, and to open to them a prospect of freedom and independence which they had not hitherto enjoyed, by clearly defining their rights and by placing restrictions on the power of the zemindars such as ought long since to have been provided."

§ 3. Such high authorities seem to be fairly conclusive upon the point. But it also seems to me that we ought not to go behind Act X of 1859. That Act has been law now nearly 20 years, the people of Bengal have become familiar with its provisions, and made their arrangements and contracts upon the footing thereof. The disquiet and the disaffection consequent on the introduction of a new law have now subsided. It often takes a considerable time for a law to settle itself and for the people to adapt themselves and to adjust their relations according to the law. The existing law relating to landlord and tenant may fairly be said to have arrived at this stage. We should now be very careful not to do any thing which may have the effect of embroiling again the two classes and bringing on another cycle of disquiet and disturbance. The Draft Bill, if passed into law without extensive alterations, is, I am afraid, extremely likely to produce this result.

§ 4. One objectionable feature of the Draft Bill, which requires especial notice, is that, striving at elaboration, its tendency has been to complicate the relations between landlord and tenant. Very little has been done in the way of simplification. I do not say that nothing has been done in this direction, but a great deal more might be done. As the Draft Bill stands at present, the simplifications effected will bear no comparison to the complications introduced. In this respect our Draft Bill has very poor claims to be considered an improvement upon Act X of 1859. One Section of the old law has been swelled into ten, and Illustrations and Explanations added in the somewhat typical form of our modern efforts at legislation. We know by experience that Illustrations and Explanations too often fail in their object, and instead of elucidating raise new and unforeseen difficulties and doubts as to the meaning of the text. If our Bill be so fortunate as to be introduced into Council, I hope care will be taken to reduce it to shape, and to make it simple and practicable by cutting out half the Sections and Sub-sections and all the Illustrations and Explanations. Some of the most questionable "improvements" are in those Sub-sections, Illustrations, and Explanations (vide Explanation I of Section 18, and Clause (b) of Section 77).

§ 5. It is not my intention to criticise all the changes which our Draft Bill proposes to make in the present law; but I shall briefly refer to some of the most objectionable ones, such as I consider to have a highly mischievous tendency or to be clear infringements of existing rights.

(a) Chapter III, Section 18.—Provisions for sub-letting by an occupancy ryot and for converting an occupancy ryot into a tenure-holder. These provisions are clear infringements of the rights of landlords, and to some extent also of the rights of occupancy ryots as against their sub-ryots, and are calculated to give rise to much litigation.

(b) Chapter IV, Sections 26 to 31.—Investing three-year ryots with occupancy rights in a modified form. This is a flagrant change and requires no comment.

(c) Chapter VI, Sections 37, 38, 39, and 40.—I do not object to Section 36 which enables a ryot to build a dwelling-house upon the land of his holding. But Sections 37, 38, 39, and 40 have a dangerous tendency, and will be productive of bitter and harassing litigation. I suppose if a ryot applies land to any purpose inconsistent with that for which it was let to him, he is a wrong-doer. There is no reason in justice why so much tenderness should be shown to him and so many artificial difficulties thrown in the way of the landlord seeking to remedy the wrong. Section 40 appears to have been framed with reference to some old rulings of our Court and is vicious in principle. It has been held in later cases that mere delay in suing does not constitute acquiescence and deprive a plaintiff of his right to relief (vide Indian Law Reports I, Allahabad, page 32, and X, Bengal Law Reports, page 324.

(d) Chapter VI, Sections 41 and 42.—This is a very dangerous "improvement" and one of a very wide range and comprehensive character. I do not object to extending the principle of occupancy right to homestead lands in villages used for dwelling purposes by artizans, shopkeepers, and other non-agricultural people. But I object to the maximum rent being fixed at 5 per cent. of the market value, which I consider to be too low. Nine per cent. would, in my opinion, be fair. As to extending the principle of occupancy right to village lands not used for dwelling purposes and to lands situated in towns (whether used for building or any other purpose), it seems to be entirely out of the question, unless wholesale confiscation of private property is intended.

(e) Chapter X, Sections 65 to 67.—The provisions for the appointment of a manager are unnecessary and will answer no useful purpose. Persons out of possession having claims to a share in property will largely resort to these provisions for the purpose of obtaining a recognition in some shape of their claims or of harassing their adversaries. In this respect, I think, the existing law is quite sufficient for all practical purposes and does not require any alteration.

(f) Chapter XI, Section 77, Clause (b).—Ryots entitled to cut trees. In the case of Ruttonjee Eduljee Shet (X, W. R., page 13, P. C.) the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council say: "The trees upon the land were part of the land, and the right to cut down and sell those trees were incident to the proprietorship of the land. The appellant (who was lessee under Government) must ground his title to those trees and the right to cut them down either upon this that it is a necessary incident of the lease, or, secondly, under some positive law, or, thirdly, under some custom to be incorporated in the lease, or, fourthly, under the express terms of the lease."

(g) Chapter XVIII, Sections 206 and 207.—I, as a member of the profession, ought to be grateful for this "improvement" which certainly promises a splendid crop of litigation. But it will place a serious obstacle in the way of obtaining execution of rent-decrees in cases of saleable tenures. It was remarked by Sir Barnes Peacock in one of his judgments that "in this country a plaintiff's troubles begin as soon as he obtains a decree." Indeed, our laws have provided many ingenious devices for obstructing and delaying execution. But delay in the execution of a rent-decree is far more injurious and involves greater risk of loss than in the case of other decrees. The accumulation in other decrees is simply of interest, but in the case of a rent-decree it is of interest and subsequent rents.

It is also worthy of consideration that the subordinate tenants have obtained their tenures with full knowledge of their risk and presumably paid value upon this footing. They cannot justly ask that the law should be changed for their benefit and to the prejudice of the superior landlord, or, in other words, that they should be secured against all risk, while additional obstructions and risk of loss should be thrown upon the superior landlord. The subordinate tenants have the right to salve the parent tenure and thereby protect their own interests by paying in the amount of the decree. I also think that in some cases, where incumbrances and intermediate tenures have multiplied to an abnormal extent, their extinction is urgently required, and that in such cases a sale of the superior tenure for arrears of rent proves the salvation of the property. It is stated in the Report (paragraph 15) "that in Backergunge there are as many as thirteen persons having successive interests in the land inferior to that of the proprietor or zemindar." Above all, the complications and consequent litigation which this change will produce will far outweigh any little good which it may do to certain intermediate tenants.

§ 6. In conclusion, I wish to say a few words with reference to one important point noticed in paragraph 7 of the Report. It seems to me that the suggestion that "all contracts of tenancy should be required by law to be in writing" has been discarded by the majority of the Commission without any good reason. The facts cited and arguments used in the Report go only to show that no retrospective effect should be given to such a law. I have searched in vain for a single fact or argument against its adoption in respect of new tenancies.

It is admitted that "this suggestion has been repeatedly made and on more than one occasion supported by high authority. The advisability of having such contracts in writing impressed itself at an early period upon the minds of the people of England. The first section of the Statute of Frauds enacted that all leases made by parol, and not put in writing, should have the force and effect of leases-at-will only. The experience of the registration offices indicates that writing is commonly used in the creation of new tenancies."

But it is said that "the majority of the tenancies in Bengal and Behar depend upon custom rather than contract." This is a doubtful proposition of fact and somewhat vaguely put. But the inference drawn therefrom against the adoption of written contracts in respect of new tenancies is clearly erroneous. The law with reference to customs is, as laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Nil Kristo Deb Barmana (12 W. R., page 21, P. C.) "where a custom is proved to exist, it supersedes the general law which, however, still regulates all beyond the custom." Especial provision has been made in our Draft Bill for saving customs and customary rights (vide paragraph 12 of the Report). It is stated therein, "We believe that there are many local customs in this as well as in every other country well understood by the people, recognized by the landlords, and susceptible of proof in the Courts of Justice; and we think it very desirable to make it clearly understood that the Bill is not intended to interfere with any of these unless they have been expressly rescinded by, or are clearly inconsistent with, its provisions."

The area of the operation of local customs must be extremely small, and it is difficult to see how such customs can apply to new tenancies. But the enactment of a law compelling written contracts in cases of new tenancies created will not, and cannot, interfere with local customs where such are proved to exist.

The advantages of enacting a law similar to the first section of the Statute of Frauds are manifest. It will simplify the relations of landlord and tenant, render such relations more certain and less open to doubt and controversy, and greatly diminish litigation. It will scarcely be making any change in the present law. It has been held in numerous cases in our Courts that, where an ejected tenant sued to recover possession against his landlord, "it was for him to prove that he was entitled to obtain possession either by virtue of a lease granted to him by the zemindar or by virtue of a right of occupancy acquired under Section 6, Act X." The above quotation is from the judgment of Justice Dwarka Nath Mitter in the case of Ram Mohun Das (14 W. R., page 41).

§ 7. Let the right of occupancy remain; let all existing tenancies and local customs be saved; but let not new kinds of tenancy be created by statute; and let it be declared that henceforth all contracts of tenancy "not put in writing shall have the force and effect of leases-at-will only." This is simple and seems to be what will meet the present requirements of the country.

MOHINI MOHUN ROY.

The 16th June 1880.

Remarks by MR. MACKENZIE.

§ 1. I HAVE signed the Report and accepted the Bill as a whole, though there are some few points in both, of which I do not altogether approve.

§ 2. Much credit is due to Mr. Field for the manner in which, under considerable difficulties, owing to the absence latterly from Calcutta of several members of the Commission, he has succeeded in fairly embodying in the Report the views of most of us, and in expressing in his draft sections the general conclusions arrived at while we were together. The only member who has thought fit to cavil at the style of the work is apparently Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy, who, to our great loss, only found leisure to attend less than half of the forty-four meetings of the Commission, was seldom able when he did come to remain till the close of any meeting, was absent when many of the more important matters were discussed, and gave less aid in shaping the measure which he now criticises than any other member. Personally I regret this, because what few suggestions this gentleman favoured us with were practical and marked by much acuteness, and if he had been actively suggestive, instead of unduly reticent, we might have derived much benefit from his assistance.

§ 3. There can be no doubt that in its main features the Bill expresses the common conclusions of all the members, with the marked exception of the two gentlemen who represented specially the zemindary interest—Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjea and Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy. I am afraid that the only measure likely to command their unqualified approval would be a Bill giving unlimited facilities of collection and enhancement of rent to the zemindars, and curtailing, as far as possible, the few legally recognised privileges of undertenants and ryots. Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjea especially has been consistently opposed to making any concessions to either tenure-holders or cultivators, and has even repudiated the more liberal views of the British Indian Association, as officially expressed, on such matters as the maximum rate of occupancy rents, and the transferability of the occupancy tenure. Both these gentlemen in their minutes of dissent protest vigorously against "going behind Act X of 1859" when any benefit to tenants is likely to arise therefrom, but they both seem quite ready to set Act X aside when any consequent gain would accrue to the class which they represent I place in contrast, as some evidence of this, the following passages:—

Extract from remarks on the Bill by Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy.

"I do not approve of the Draft Bill as a whole, and strongly disapprove of the many material changes which it proposes to make in the substantive law relating to rights in land. I always deprecated such changes .....I was therefore of opinion that we ought not to make any substantial alterations in the respective rights of landlords and tenants as defined by Act X of 1859 and Act VIII (B. C.) of 1869.....It seems to me we ought not to go behind Act X."

Extract from proceedings of the Eighteenth Meeting of the Commission.

"Baboo Mohini Mohun Rai proposed to alter the presumption, that when a ryot's rent has not been changed for 20 years, the land has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement.

§ 4. Now, though I think it right to notice the spirit in which these dissentient members approached the subject, I do not for a moment maintain that this fact invalidates their criticisms or disparages their arguments. They support, as they have every right to do, one side of a very vexed question. It is natural enough that they should, as landholders themselves, enunciate the highest theories of the character and extent of zemindary rights in Bengal. They make of course, and quite legitimately, the very most of the terms "proprietors of the soil" and "landowners," used in the legislation of 1793. They hold on tenaciously, and rightly, to the sheet-anchor of their school—Sir Barnes Peacock; and they are, fortunately for them, able also to refer to the present Chief Justice as having (though, so far, on the unargued case), accepted the views of the zemindary propaganda. There is evidently much to be said, therefore, for their view of the facts, and it is not at all likely to be left unsaid. The landed and wealthy classes of Bengal have powerful organs in the Press, and powerful friends both here and at Home. They are many of them very amiable persons, of great intelligence and great benevolence. Officials are glad to do them favours, and find it pleasant to be on friendly relations with them. Every prejudice arising out of Western notions of property and the relations of landlord and tenant in Great Britain is entirely on their side. It is only at the cost of much dry study of old records, old laws, and old books, and from a close and critical examination of certain apparently anomalous survivals in the rural economy of the province, that one comes to learn that there is even in permanently-settled Bengal, quite another side to the land question which is not represented in the zemindars' statement of the case; which has been affected less than is supposed by modern legislation; which concerns the interests of vast masses of unfriended peasants; and which the occurrences of recent years make it necessary once for all to bring prominently under the consideration of Government and the legislature.

§ 5. I cannot here enter into a detailed statement of the grounds upon which I, for one, have been led to hold that there is, both in law and fact, a living tenant-right in Bengal—a right, that is to say, belonging to the cultivator, limiting and restricting the proprietary rights of the zemindar, and which, though seriously damaged by illadvised legislation, has not yet been altogether destroyed. Some of these grounds will be found on record in the proceedings of the Commission, and especially in Mr. O'Kinealy's historical note. The Commission has by a majority practically endorsed that general view, though it has not seen its way to placing the matter on the simple basis suggested by me. I wish here, therefore, very briefly to repeat what my contention is, and to show that it is not after all more than the zemindars themselves would be wise to grant.

§ 6. I may remark at the outset that I have myself no special reverence for Act X of 1859. I have read all the correspondence leading up to it, and all the discussions attending its enactment, and I suppose that there never was a measure of equal moment so inadequately considered and debated. The fact is that it was devised mainly to meet acknowledged evils arising out of the summary procedure then in force for the recovery of rents, and attaching to the system of distraint; and what provisions of substantive law were incorporated in it were brought in almost haphazard, without any reference to the mass of information bearing upon them, which lay in the record-rooms of Government, and the numerous discussions and proposals of former years, which had been allowed to slide into oblivion. I have the original file before me as I write, and it is marvellous to see how little was known of byegone discussions as to ryots' rights, byegone orders of the Court of Directors to protect these, and byegone representations of Collectors as to the "unauthorized encroachments" of the zemindars. I attach to this almost the only paper I can find among the reports on the Bill that shows any real acquaintance with the constitutional history of rural Bengal—a minute by Mr. A. Sconce; though even Mr. Sconce was not fully aware of the actual strength of the resident ryot's position. I also attach a minute by the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. F. M. Halliday, recorded by way of instruction to Mr. Currie, the Member in charge of the Bill. It is curious to note how very near the occupancy ryots came to getting permanency of rent-rates in 1859, and how little apparently it was intended to stimulate a general enhancement of such ryots' rents. It is equally curious to learn from the papers that the Select Committee on Act X were mainly influenced in adopting the twelve years' rule of occupancy by an erroneous construction of a revenue circular of the North-West Board, which had no application whatever to Bengal. It was due, indeed, mainly to this misconception that the Act, as passed, failed to declare what the Bill, as introduced, laid down as acknowledged law—that every resident ryot had a right of occupancy, and that three years' cultivation of land conferred rights of occupancy on resident ryots even in lands not previously in their occupation, and for which they had no written lease.

§ 7. Such being the inner history of the making of Act X, it is to my mind absurd to refer to it as a sort of legal revelation, which it is heresy to supplement and sacrilege to alter. If it can be shown that the Act has failed to settle satisfactorily the questions with which it deals, let it, I say, be amended—like any other piece of imperfect legislation. That it is imperfect is proved by the vast number of conflicting decisions massed around it by the courts. It is quite a misrepresentation to say that it has anywhere 'settled' the respective rights of landlords and tenants. It has not certainly satisfied the zemindars. They have been calling loudly for its amendment in their own interests, and it is only when they are afraid of losing positions which, under its provisions, they have managed to occupy legally for the first time, that they appeal to it as a final settlement of their relations with their tenants. They have told us repeatedly that they can neither collect their rents nor enhance their rents under the Act as it stands; and they are willing enough to see the Act set aside so long as the Government confines its attention to these particular points. By all means then let us amend the law on these points; but as we are thus disturbing necessarily the existing relations of landlord and tenant in the interests of the landlords, we ought surely at the same time to see if nothing else is needed to maintain or restore the equitable balance between the parties. The Commission was, I contend, bound to enquire if the legislation of 1859 has not in some way injured the ryots as well as restricted landlords' rights.

§ 8. For my part I have no doubt whatever that it was from the earliest times an axiom in Indian Land Law that every settled cultivator was entitled to be maintained in the quiet occupation of the land he tilled, so long as he paid the established quota of land-tax to the State, or (in Bengal) to the zemindar, as under contract representing the State; and that this was a right inherent in the cultivator, and did not in any way emanate from the zemindar as sudder malguzar. Ejectment for any other cause than non-payment of the established quota of land tax I consider repugnant both to the sentiment of the people and to the whole spirit and tenor of their laws and customs. I maintain that in Bengal every resident ryot had a right of occupancy in his jote; and that every cultivator who settled down permanently to cultivate as a member of the village community became ipso facto a resident ryot. I hold that recognition as a resident ryot rendered such a settler liable to pay his share of the revenue assessed on his village according to the established local rates, and not at any higher rates. I believe that it was not the intention of the legislature in 1793 to alter this, or to confer on the zemindars a power of enhancing either individual ryot's rates or general local rates at pleasure, and I consider it almost certain that ordinary landlords had originally under our legislation no legal power of raising the customary prevailing rates at all. Per contra, I admit that, as a fact, ordinary landlords, profiting by special rules made in favour of auction-purchasers and devised to protect the Government revenue, have persistently and with the sanction of the Courts (though until lately not with that of the legislature) enhanced rents arbitrarily, and that this right cannot now equitably be denied them. But, on the other hand, I hold that the ryot's position cannot equitably be altogether destroyed. He is entitled in virtue of his ancient rights, and of the reiterated orders of the Home Government to secure him those rights, to be protected against arbitrary ejectment; he is entitled to demand that his rent-rates shall be those prevailing in, or legally established for, his neighbourhood; and he is entitled so far to benefit by the intentions of the Government in 1793, as to derive from his holding not merely maintenance, but a reasonable profit. If Act X fails in any degree to secure these rights, then I say the ryot on his side can fairly claim to have it amended to that end.

§ 9. Now all that a reasonable zemindar wants is to get his rents in easily, and to be able to share in the profits accruing from the rising prices of country produce. It is entirely to his advantage to have a settled tenantry, comfortable in circumstances, and able to stand the pressure of occasional bad seasons. If he has proper facilities for realizing his rents, he can have no proper motive for claiming a right of ejecting the ryots at his pleasure. He will willingly recognize the right of every well-to-do ryot to occupy. How, then, are we to secure well-to-do ryots? The only way is by restricting the legal demand of what has now become 'rent.' If it be once admitted that the ryot has a beneficial interest in his tenure, the corner-stone of agricultural prosperity may be considered laid. At present the zemindars complain that they cannot enhance in spite of all the advantages given them by Act X, which is the first law recognizing definitely their right to enhance with reference to the value of produce. I would not myself remove any one of the practical difficulties now in their way, unless they consent once for all to recognize the ryots' beneficial interest. If they want to see their own present position improved, they must, I submit, consent to all reasonable measures which will secure the general improvement of the country. I would take from them no income which they now enjoy, but I would not give them the ready means of making more, unless they are prepared to assist in recognising and restoring the rights of the cultivators. Both zemindar and cultivator are proprietors in a sense, and each must respect the estate of the other.

§ 10. To my mind the only true insurance against famine is the maintenance, and, if need be, the creation of a substantial peasantry, such as the theory (though unfortunately not the practice) of Indian Land Law has always favoured. To secure this, then, I would have the State take into its own hands the settlement of rent-rates. I would not, I again repeat, take away from the zemindars any profits which they now enjoy, save in the few cases where these are obviously inordinate, as they certainly are where the landlord, while leaving all risks to the cultivators, seizes more than half the gross produce. But I would make it the business of the Revenue Authorities to regulate, as of old, the distribution of profits for the future; and I would protect the settled cultivators against everything like arbitrary interference from above.

§ 11. In this view I suggested to the Commission the recognition of the right to occupy at the rates established by the Revenue

Authorities, as the privilege of every ryot who had for three consecutive years cultivated land in a village. I took three years as a fair test of intention to become what, under the changed circumstances of the country and the arbitrary boundaries of survey villages, might reasonably be treated as the equivalent of the old resident ryot. Mr. O'Kinealy, Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal, and in the main Mr. Harrison agreed with me. Unfortunately their views of the necessity of "upholding Act X" prevented Mr. Dampier and Mr. Field from also concurring, though I believe, apart from that, Mr. Dampier was inclined to favour the proposal. If this suggestion had been accepted, the complicated proposals for compensation for ejected ryots of three years' standing put forward by Mr. Harrison and embodied in Chapter IV of the Bill, would be unnecessary.

§ 12. Holding these views, I am of course not satisfied with the provisions of clause (e) of section 20 of the Bill, which authorizes the landlord and ryot to contract for the ejectment of the latter for breach of any stipulation made between them, nor with clause (h) of explanation 4 of section 19, which empowers the landlord to exact from an in-coming tenant a contract that rights of occupancy shall not accrue. I maintain that it is for the public good that rights of occupancy, as above explained, should be the universal rule and not the exception; and I would not allow a rule based on public policy to be upset by private contract, in making which one of the parties (the ryot) would always be at an unfair disadvantage, and compelled to subscribe to conditions which, if a free agent, he would undoubtedly repudiate. I find also that Courts of Equity at Home now-a-days decline to enforce stipulations of ejectment in cases where an award of damages would equitably meet the case.

§ 13. Another point in the Bill to which I take exception is the concluding clause of section 45. If the State through its Revenue officers is now to assess the rents payable to zemindars without interference from the Civil Courts, which are ex hypothesi tribunals unfit to deal with such economic cases, then it certainly should be at liberty to assess its own revenue, as from the earliest times, and until the Courts put an unforeseen construction on Act X, it always used to do. The State is more interested in imposing light assessments than any zemindar. It has, I admit, not always seen this in the past. But a great change is passing over the official mind in this respect; and at any rate the proper corrective authority in such cases is not the Civil Court, but the Secretary of State. Let us have, if necessary, a strict and well considered Settlement Law for the guidance of Revenue officers; and then we may put the Civil Courts entirely on one side, instead of merely working round them as we are driven to do in Act VIII (B.C.) of 1879.

§ 14. I am disposed generally to concur in Mr. Dampier's remarks on Chapter XV. If the Revenue authorities lay down recognised rates for the different classes of soil in a neighbourhood from time to time, and the landlord and the Courts are made to accept these in cases of dispute, nearly all that is required will be done. The old pergunnah rates will practically have become re-established. Those rates will soon become general and accepted.

§ 15. The question of sub-letting is one of great difficulty, and I am by no means certain that the solution offered in the Bill, taken with the arbitrary distinction (based upon area), drawn between tenures and holdings, is likely to find acceptance or work smoothly. But it is a plan worth considering. I have already, in Notes recorded on the proceedings, said all that I need say on the subject. I will only remark here that I still think the imposition of a legal maximum of rent for non-occupancy ryots would in the end have worked into the rural economy of the country, and served us a quiet, but effectual, check upon excessive sub-letting. I know well all the objections that can be urged against this notion of a legal maximum fixed with reference to gross produce; but there is the fact that from the days of Menu the people of India are familiar with the idea, and reconciled to any inequalities involved in its application. There must always be inequalities of taxation, and we must remember that we are really dealing with what was originally not rent, but a land tax.

§ 16. I need scarcely say that, in common with the majority of the members of the Commission, I protest against Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjea's theory of enhancement, which practically amounts to this, that when in any district an oppressive and litigious zemindar, by suing his ryots for monthly kists, and by other means of harassment, has succeeded in destroying their rights, and coercing them into paying exorbitant rents,—now those rents should be taken as a fresh starting point for future enhancement, even though far in excess of any reasonable maximum. Let every such zemindar keep by all means his present profits as the law has given them, and salve his conscience as best he may, but let him not expect assistance from either Government or the legislature in completing the ruin of his unhappy tenantry.

§ 17. I equally of course repudiate his idea, that if occupancy tenures are made transferable, zemindars should be "compensated for this new infringement of their rights." If such preposterous claims lead to a more general and searching enquiry as to what zemindary rights in Bengal really are, they may perhaps effect some good, though not perhaps altogether in the way contemplated by Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjea.

18. The other points in his remarks, and in that of Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy, seem to be sufficiently met by the report of the Commission.

DARJEELING, A. MACKENZIE.

The 23rd May 1880.

APPENDIX A.

Minute by Mr. A. Sconce on the Bill to "Amend the Law relating to the Recovery of Rent in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal,"—dated the 19th May 1858.

I TAKE it that the subject proposed for discussion and enactment in the 3rd and immediately succeeding sections of this Bill is the most important that ever was, or I may say that can be, submitted for the consideration of the Legislature. These sections present to us the first substantial attempt to redeem the pledge undertaken by the Government in Clause 1, Section 8, Regulation XVII, 1793, to "protect those classes of the people who from their situation are most helpless and to enact laws necessary for the protection and welfare of ryots and other cultivators of the soil."

The legislation proposed in this matter naturally divides itself into two general heads: first, the legal character or title of the occupancy of the ryot; and second, the rent at which he is liable to be assessed.

In the 3rd and 4th sections of the Bill the nature of a ryot's occupancy is described by different designations. We have mentioned hereditary ryots, resident ryots, and all other ryots. I am not unconscious that the character of the occupancy of a ryot is in one sense very materially determined by the rent or rate of rent which he is bound to pay; but we are all familiar with the broad distinction of permanent and temporary rights of occupancy; and it seems to me most essential to consider clearly what our language means, and to define with legal exactitude the peculiar forms of the tenures for which we legislate.

In Section 4 it is said every resident ryot has a right of occupancy in the land held or cultivated by him. In Section 3 the words hereditary ryots are used. Is there any distinction between the word resident and the word hereditary; and if there be a distinction, to what does it amount? The right assumed to be vested in a resident ryot is of the highest value, for, paying the rent due from him, his occupancy cannot be disturbed. I suppose that the word resident imports permanent residence, or, in other words, hereditary occupancy, and is the English equivalent of Khood Kusht or Kudeemee ryot as indicated in section 32, Regulation XI of 1822. The right, however named, seems to be mainly founded on prescription: and perhaps the terms 'prescriptive occupancy' best define the existent right, and afford the best guide for testing a disputed tenure by the standard which the law recognizes. The first suggestion therefore which I have to make is that the terms used in sections 3 and 4 should correspond, and that, instead of the words "hereditary" or "resident," should be substituted "having a prescriptive right of occupancy."

I do not say, however, that in using an uniform definition, the difficulties which daily arise for adjustment and adjudication are effectually solved. It may not be doubtful that a Khood Kusht ryot has a right of prescriptive occupancy, but prescription grows and is constituted by the effluxion of time, and thus an occupancy which being immature and new does not amount to a permanent right, by long recognition became eventually prescriptive. Rights, like customs, may be imperceptible in their origin and progress, which nevertheless in time we do not hesitate to characterize and to perpetuate. The last sentence in section 5 of this Bill appears intended to create a right of prescriptive occupancy in favour of a resident ryot with respect to land recently acquired by him. Possession and payment of rent for three years, supposing the tenant's right not to be otherwise limited by a written engagement, here create a right of occupancy. This provision, it will be seen, is confined to land newly acquired by resident ryots. Land not before held on a prescriptive tenure becomes after three years included within the older land of the ryot and subject, I suppose, to the same conditions of occupancy: and so it seems to me, as mere occupation for a limited period restricts the proprietor's right of ouster, a similar provision should be made in favour of other ryots by reason of prolonged occupancy.

I believe that the experience of all of us shows that it is in vain to look for precisely marked distinctions between the old and recent occupancies of ryots. The term Kudeemee is merely old. Khood Kusht appears to signify the occupancy of land which is peculiarly a ryot's own, and for which others can bring no claim on an equal footing. But distinctions of a broad and general kind are sufficiently noticeable. On the one hand, a Khood Kusht ryot is known by a continued occupancy; by an occupancy continued at his own will, if also by the silent sufferance of the zemindar; and on the other, a temporary occupancy is most usually marked by circumstances which are incompatible with a permanent right, such as by recent and accidental acquisition, by variable occupation, or by a lease for a limited period. I should prefer therefore to take twelve years' occupancy, recognized by the zemindar (mainly by the receipt of rent, but possibly also by other circumstances) to constitute a right of prescriptive occupancy; except that an occupancy renewable at the discretion of the zemindar may be inferred from the express terms of a written engagement or from the general terms of a deed taken in connection with the circumstances under which the tenure originated or was continued. Where there is no written engagement, twelve years' occupancy alone will be sufficient to guarantee a permanent right, but if there be a deed without an express condition to quit, the mere termination of the lease will not import a limited occupancy unless that be inferrible from the circumstances of the case.

Section 3 of the Bill determines the principle by which ryots' lands are to be assessed. There are two scales; hereditary ryots being assessable at fixed rates, and other ryots being assessable at the ordinarily prevailing rates. No doubt it is not intended that a ryot holding land under prescriptive occupancy, who shall not have been previously liable to pay rent at an uniform rate, shall be entitled to a pottah limiting a demand which was before open to enhancement. I would say, however, that in practice, our investigations for the determination of the amount of rent for which a ryot is liable are rarely aided by the ascertainment of uniformity whether as regards the fixed rates of Khood Kusht ryots or the ordinary rates of other ryots. There is nothing so unsatisfactory as a professed enquiry into rates. In fact among ryots and tenants of all classes there is little or no uniformity; and though in the necessary nature of things, rents paid approximate in rate, it is not because a rate is followed as a standard, but because by comparing the specific assessments of individuals one with another, an average, as a matter of account, may be struck. Upon this understanding, provision, it seems to me, should be made for the regulation of the assessment of land held upon a right of prescriptive occupancy. The amount of rent in each case chargeable should be determined rather by the uniformity of previous payments than by enforcing conformity with the rent chargeable on neighbouring lands. Each man's liability should be regulated with reference to his own rights, not with reference to rights which it is not his business to maintain.

I would hold to the principle deducible from the rule inculcated in 1793. In Regulation VIII of that year, zemindars were told how they were to deal with their Khood Kusht ryots. The spirit of the permanent adjustment of the public revenue pervaded the legal relations of zemindars and tenants. The Permanent Settlement was not one-sided; permanent for the landlord and not permanent for the tenant. On the contrary the de facto positions of the tenants were accepted as representatives of the available assets of estates upon which, except for special cause, zemindars could not legally encroach. In support of the statement, it is scarcely necessary that I should refer to sections 51 and 60, Regulation VIII of 1793. But the thorough recognition of the then purpose of the Legislature is of immense importance, and the quotation of a familiar law may be pardoned. As to dependent talookdars it seems clear that the status-quo tied the hands of a zemindar. The rent payable to him before the completion of the settlement, that and no more should he continue to receive, and it was expressly stipulated that, even though the revenue due by himself should have been increased, it was not legally competent to him, except upon proof of certain contingencies, to demand an increase from talookdars. So as to Khood Kusht ryots. The rule with respect to them was that, except in proof of fraud, no increase should be demanded contrary to previous engagements, unless it was shown that the rents paid within the three years preceding the settlement had been reduced below the ordinary pergunnah rate. Here what is remarkable is that enhancement depended upon the reduction having been made within the last three years. If the rent of the ryot had been levied at an uniform amount for more than three years, the assessment could not be revised. This law seems to me to furnish our best authority for defining the fixity of rents. The rule has been in force from 1793 downwards, supposing a Khood Kusht ryot to have paid his rent for six years, the plea that the rate chargeable on him was too low could not be heard. In 1793 he was secured by this law, and the law cannot be less a protector to the ryot now. In 1793 the rule was that the assessment of land held under a prescriptive right of occupancy might be revised on proof that within three years the rent had been reduced below current rates; and the principle to which practical effect was thus given appears to be necessarily based on the admission that the payment of an uniform rent for more than three years established a prescriptive right to the continuance of that payment in future years. And further, I conceive that the constitutional theory of the Permanent Settlement did effectually embody permanence of assessment to the tenant as well as to the zemindar. This truth is too precious to be let sleep. It applies to other tenants as well as to prescriptive occupants to land, but it applies also to these. The existence of the tenancy of land, distinct from that of a tenant-at-will or of temporary lease-holder, entered into the definitive basis of the settlement. The rent assets derivable from these permant tenancies were the fixed assets of the settlement by which the sudder jumma of each estate was regulated; and except upon special cause shown, it was incompetent to zemindars to enhance the rent then leviable. The contract on the part of the State enforced a contract on the part of the zemindar. One portion of the rents of an estate was assumed to be a fixed (though unknown) sum, and the limitation of the demand of the State carried with it the stipulation that the rent payable by this particular class of tenants should be adhered to by the zemindar.

The tenancy of an estate at the time of the permanent settlement was, as it is now, divisible into three broad classes. First may be enumerated the class described as dependent talooks. The tenures included in this general classification are very variously designated according to the local nomenclature prevalent in each district, but the nature of the tenure in all cases imports a hereditary occupancy at a definite rent. Second is the more subordinate class that may or may not be included in the first, the jotes of ryots holding under a prescriptive occupancy. And third, ryots or other tenants that held only for a time. As to the first class, zemindars were declared to have no general right of enhancement. The rent then payable by the tenant was accepted as his ultimate liability. By the special and very limited conditions defined in section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, a zemindar might show cause for raising his demand, but without such special cause, the tenure of the tenant was unassailable. The same right is carried down to our own day by section 26, Act I of 1845. And again by section 60, Regulation VIII of 1793, as by Act I of 1845, the existent rights of the second class are equally respected.

It is for these reasons I say that the sudder jumma of the zemindar is not a constantly fixed and the rent of the tenant a constantly increasing, quantity. Both by law are fixed: and at seems to me it should be our most earnest duty to give effect to the spirit of the law.

There can be no difficulty as to the rent of a jotedar, holding land under a prescriptive occupancy from 1793 downwards. I do not speak only of the rate, but of the amount of rent. Rent so long paid cannot, in the spirit of the law, be open to enhancement.

The same rule should, I think, be extended to all undertenures existing at the date of the Permanent Settlement; that is, I would abrogate the power reserved under special circumstances by section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793 to the zemindar to enhance the rent of talookdars or of other tenants holding under corresponding titles. Look at our present position. It is nearely 70 years since the settlement of 1790 was concluded. Throughout this long period, the rent of the talookdar has been unchallenged. As a matter of course, so long as an estate is not sold for arrears of revenue, after such an interval, the talookdars cannot be brought into court: but painful instances come before us, in which sale-purchasers, strangers to every body, strange to Government, strange to the tenantry, press their special rights to enhancement under the law. It is life or death to the talookdar. For long past half a century he or his ancestors have paid a fixed rent, which rent entered originally into the basis of the permanent settlement: and suddenly a claim is made on him to pay three thousand rupees instead of one thousand. It is truly life or death to him. At most, under the law, a purchaser can be entitled to enhance only, if he prove that his predecessor, the zemindar of 1790 might have demanded an increase because the special custom of the district allowed it, or a temporary abatement had been granted, or because it was conformable to the conditions of the tenure. But the zemindar of 1790 had foregone his advantages: and after so great an interval to expose a tenant to a revival of the claim which he practically felt himself unable to enforce, is to expose him to injurious peril.

I have said that with a prescriptive jotedar of 1790 there can be no difficulty. As to prescriptive rights of occupancy of a more recent origin, it seems to me that whatever difficulty as to the right of assessment may be presented, should be solved by the law, and not left to the unguided judgment of the courts. I would propose to declare that a ryot holding land under a prescriptive right of occupancy who shall have uniformly paid, with or without a pottah, a definite amount of rent, shall not be liable to a demand for enhancement.

Resident permanently occupying ryots are not beholden to zemindars for their rights. If upon any point we are competent to exert the sacred force of common law in this country it is this. Labour and occupancy make the right of the prescriptive ryot. By Regulation VIII of 1793, the revision of a prescriptive jotedar's assessment was limited to reduction effected within three years only: for later titles, I proposed twelve years. All ryots are not prescriptive ryots: but having defined the nature of a prescriptive ryot's tenure, we should at the same time define the interest which, by the declared principles of the law, should be assured to him.

I may not have leisure to discuss other portions of this excellent Bill, but the earlier sections form a detached subject, and to this for the present I confine myself. With respect to the temporary and limited tenures, I would only request attention to the concluding portion of section 2, which provides that no ryot shall, under any circumstances, be liable to any enhancement of rent in excess of the rates specified in section 3, that is customary pergunnah rates. Now the rule asserted in section 26, Act I of 1845, is that a zemindar may enhance "at discretion;" and as necessarily the limit of a local rate is inconsistent with a discretionary demand, the proposal in the Bill will supersede the present law.

APPENDIX B.

MINUTE.

Bill for the Recovery of Rents.

I AGREE generally with Mr. Currie as to the provisions of this Bill, and I would now transmit to him the various reports which have been made regarding it, in some of which will be found important discussions on points of principle and not a few valuable suggestions on matters of detail, especially in Mr. Samuells' report, wherein also will be seen some important remarks on the law as applicable to bhowlee tenures.

2. There is a great and very remarkable consent as to appeal among all the natives consulted. All desire an appeal, and consider any curtailment of this privilege a disadvantage and a grievance. I would yield to this undoubtedly popular feeling, giving the appeal to the Collector in cases below the value of Rs. 50, except as to matters beyond the mere questions of receipt and payment of money, on which the appeal should be to the judicial tribunal.

3. Mr. Raikes, Judge of the Sudder Court, observes that by numerous precedents since the enactment of section 26, Act I of 1845, it has been determined that an auction-purchaser may eject or enhance at discretion the rents of all tenants, except those of the description specially protected by the section in question; whereas sections 3 and 4 of the present Bill extend that protection to other classes, and thus run counter to former legislation and to rulings of the courts founded thereon. I apprehend, however, that the object of that part of the Bill was no other than that of Act I of 1845, namely, to declare and uphold the rights of khoodkasht and kudeemee ryots, which ryots I take to be the class intended by the expressions "hereditary ryots holding lands at fixed rates" and "resident ryots and cultivators." Perhaps the opportunity should be taken to define what has always needed definition, viz. the term "khoodkasht and kudeemee ryots." Mr Sconce, Judge of the Sudder Court, has suggested that instead of the terms used in sections 3 and 4 of the Bill, there should be substituted the words "ryots having a prescriptive right of occupancy;" and he would fix twelve years as the term of uninterrupted occupancy, after which a ryot should come under the description he proposes. To this I would assent believing that in doing this we shall be discharging a heavy obligation towards the ryots, long unfulfilled by our legislation. I would also use means to show that this was the definition of a "khoodkasht or kudeemee ryot," elsewhere alluded to in our code.

4. Mr. Sconce further proposes to declare the actual rents of such ryots permanent as to amount. But as to this I hesitate, believing it better to leave this to be determined by the new rent-courts, as it now is in suits in the ordinary courts for what is termed nishust-i-jumma. And in the enumeration of the kinds of suits to be cognizable by the new courts, I would distinctly insert suits for settling or fixing or enhancing rents.

5. There is some variation of opinion among the officers consulted as to the restriction put upon zemindars by section 8 of the Bill in respect to compelling the personal attendance of their ryots. Upon this I agree fully with Mr. Samuells, that although the withdrawal of this power will be severely felt by some small zemindars whose ryots have easy means of escape from their power, yet the present system leads to such grave abuses and allows of such intolerable oppression that it ought, without doubt, to be amended in the manner proposed by this Bill.

6. Nothing which is stated by any of the authorities who have reported on this Bill has altered my opinion in favour of constituting the new courts in the hands of Collectors and Deputy Collectors instead of Moonsifs. Deputy Collectors, very carefully chosen, will shortly be stationed over every district in the proportion of one to every three thanas; and, in the first instance at all events, it will only be by putting the new jurisdiction into the hands of these officers that the essential protection and security of the ryot will be provided for. Hereafter it may be possible to use the Moonsifs in this way, but not now. And to employ the Moonsifs in administering the new law at first will be to risk all its proposed advantages.

F. J. HALLIDAY.

The 27th November 1858.

I COULD have wished for the benefit of a report from the Board of Revenue on this very important subject; but I have waited long for it and have been obliged at last to write my opinion without it. Hereafter should it when received suggest any further observations, I shall not fail to supply them.

PART I.

THE SUBSTANTIVE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Chapter I.—Of tenure-holders and undertenure-holders.

Tenure or undertenure held at fixed rent since Permanent Settlement not liable to enhancement	6
Presumption from twenty years' holding at unchanged rent	6
Tenure or undertenure held since Permanent Settlement liable to enhancement only in certain cases	7
Tenure-holder or undertenure-holder liable to enhancement for land gained by alluvion and entitled to abatement for land lost by diluvion	8
Limits of enhancement of rent of tenures and undertenures	9
Enhanced rent not to be more than double the previous rent. Enhancement may be gradual	10
Rent once enhanced may not be altered for ten years	10
Person, to whom more than 100 standard bighas demised by Government or a proprietor, otherwise than for a term or year by year, to be deemed a tenure-holder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10	11
Person, to whom more than 100 standard bighas demised by tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, otherwise than for a term or year by year, to be deemed an undertenure-holder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10	11
Limit of enhancement of rent of tenure-holder or undertenure-holder mentioned in Section 11, if more than half the land demised was unreclaimed at the time of the demise	12
Permanent tenures and undertenures declared heritable, devisable, and transferable	13
Legal incidents of a patni talook	14
Right to sublet	14
Provisions of Section 14 applicable, mutatis mutandis, to patni undertenures	15

Chapter II.—Of Ryots entitled to hold Land at Fixed Rates.

Ryots holding land at rates not changed since Permanent Settlement to continue to hold at those rates	16
Presumption if rent of land has not been changed for 20 years before suit	17
Exception in the case of temporarily-settled estates	17
Ryot holding at fixed rates liable to pay additional rent for land gained by alluvion and entitled to abatement for land diluviated	18

Sections.

CHAPTER III.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR TWELVE YEARS AND ACQUIRED A RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY.

Right of occupancy acquired by holding or occupying and cultivating for twelve years ... 19
Legal incidents of a right of occupancy 20
Saleable in execution of a decree for arrears of rent only 20
Transferable by sale or gift, and devisable 20
Heritable according to the law of inheritance of the tenant 20
May not be mortgaged 20
Ryot may not be ejected from land in which he has such right 20
Rent of occupancy ryot payable in kind not to exceed fifty per cent. of the gross produce in the case of Staple crops. In the case of other crops, a special contract in writing may be made and enforced; if no such contract, value of twenty-five per cent. of staple crops may be recovered ... 21
Rent of ryot having a right of occupancy may be enhanced on what grounds 22
Meaning of term "landlord" 22
Meaning of term "land" 22
Rate fixed by Collector to be deemed a prevailing rate 22
Landlord entitled to whole increment, when effected solely by his agency or at his expense—otherwise to half only 23
Limit to enhancement upon the third or fourth ground 23
Calculation to be based upon a reasonable average of years 23
Rent enhanced on first, third or fourth ground not to exceed one-fourth of the average annual value of gross produce, calculated for Staple crops 23
Board of Revenue to make rules for calculating average value and to determine and notify staples ... 23
Progressive enhancement may be directed 23
Ryot entitled to a deduction for road cess, &c. 23
No enhancement in certain cases of the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy 24
Ryot having right of occupancy when entitled to abatement of rent 25

CHAPTER IV.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR THREE OR MORE BUT LESS THAN TWELVE YEARS.

Ryot who has cultivated or held land for three years protected from arbitrary eviction 26
Notice of demand of increased rent to be served on ryot 26
Any such ryot served with such notice to be liable for the increased rent demanded, if he remain in possession of the land 27
Any such ryot, if unwilling to pay such increased rent, may relinquish the land 27
Any such ryot so relinquishing his land entitled to one year's increased rent as compensation for disturbance 28
Ryot who has held for three but less than twelve years, if evicted, entitled to compensation for improvements 29
Landlord and ryot may agree as to payment of compensation. If they do not agree, Civil Court may decide. Principles of decision 30
Decree to be made for amount of compensation 30
Three years' ryot may claim abatement, and, if landlord refuse, may relinquish land and claim compensation 31

CHAPTER V.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR LESS THAN THREE YEARS.

Ryot who has held for less than three years, may be evicted at the will of his landlord, but only through the Court 32
Such ryot may not sue for determination of future rent or for abatement 32
Any such ryot let into possession otherwise than for a term, or holding over on expiry of term, may not be ejected without notice to quit 33
Notice to quit when to be given and how to be served 33
Ryot served with notice to quit as provided in Section 33 34 or ryot holding after expiry of term of less than three years without landlord's consent 34
may be sued, and ejected by Court. Period of wrongful holding not to count 34
Such ryot when ejected liable for full letting value of the land and also for damages 34
Ryot who has held land for less than three years not liable to pay higher rent, unless there be a written agreement or unless a notice has been served. Notice to state grounds of enhancement 35
Such ryot served with such notice may relinquish land. If he do not, he is liable to pay increased rent demanded up to limit of double former rent 35

CHAPTER VI.—OF THE USE OF LAND FOR BUILDING PURPOSES.

Ryot may not use land for building or other purpose inconsistent with use for which it was let ... 36
Rule does not extend to erection of a suitable residence 36
Ryot using land for other purpose may be served with notice of objection 37
If ryot does not obey notice served in reasonable time, and landlord obtains injunction, ryot disobeying injunction may be ejected 38
If notice not served within reasonable time, and no evidence that landlord was earlier aware of the change of the use of the land, ryot not liable to ejectment, and entitled to compensation for loss from removing buildings, &c. 39
Landlord being aware and without objection allowing ryot to spend money 40 or landlord serving no notice of objection for two years 40
estopped from afterwards objecting to change of use of the land 40
Possession for twelve years of land let for building or other such purpose gives a right of occupancy 41
Such interest to be heritable, transferable, and devisable 41
In default of payment of rent, land with buildings, &c., may be sold 41
Rule for enhancing the rent of land used for building or other such purpose 42

Sections.

CHAPTER VII.—OF MERGER.

When same person becomes owner of an estate and a tenure therein, the tenure to be merged in the estate 43
Proviso 43
Deed declaratory of intention must be registered within three months and published upon land comprised in tenure 43
Provisions of Section 43 to apply to other cases in which the owner of a superior interest acquires an interest immediately inferior 44
Proprietary interest merged in paramount title when an estate is purchased by Secretary of State for India in Council 45

CHAPTER VIII.—OF THE REGISTRATION OF TRANSFERS OF TENURES, UNDERTENURES, AND OCCUPANCY HOLDINGS.

Tenant to register transfer of his tenure, undertenure, or holding in his landlord's sherishta. No division of the rent binding on landlord without his consent in writing 46
Landlord entitled to fee on transfer of a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding 47
Effect of transfer and of registration of transfer or succession upon liability for rent 48
Consequence of non-registration of transfer other than transfer by sale in execution 49
Consequence of non-registration of a succession, or of a transfer by execution sale, in case of a tenure or undertenure 50
Landlord may collect rents of tenure or undertenure attached, but must account for balance after deducting his own rent, &c. 50
If collections insufficient, person entitled by succession or purchase liable for the deficiency ... 50
Landlord may after three months admit tenure or undertenure to registry on payment of fine ... 50
Consequence of non-registration of a succession, or of a transfer by execution sale, in case of a holding 51
If landlord fails or refuses to register, civil suit will lie to compel him. Damages may be awarded where pecuniary loss has resulted 52
Transferree or devisee of patni tenure to give security to the extent of half the yearly rent ... 53
If security be not furnished within one month, proprietor may attach the tenure 53
Application to District Judge if security tendered be refused. District Judge may make order. No appeal from such order 53

BILL

TO

Consolidate and Amend the Law of Landlord and Tenant within the Territories under the Administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the Law of Landlord and Tenant within the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Bengal Landlord and Tenant Act, 1880:"

Short title.

It extends to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, except the Division of Orissa and the Scheduled Districts specified in the third part of the First Schedule of "The Scheduled Districts Act, 1874[1]:" it shall be lawful for the said Lieutenant-Governor to extend the whole or any part of this Act to the Division of Orissa by a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette; and from the date of the publication of the said notification this Act or such part as may be specified in such notification shall have operation in the said Division.

Local extent.

It shall come into force on the day of 1880.

Commencement.

2. The enactments specified in the First Schedule hereto annexed are hereby repealed from and after the commencement of this Act. When this Act or any part of it is extended to the Division of Orissa, such of the said enactments as are in force in that Division, or, where a part only is extended, so much of them as is inconsistent with such part, shall cease to have operation in the said Division:

Repeal.

provided that—

(1) any enactment or document referring to any Act or enactment hereby repealed shall be construed to refer to this Act or to the corresponding portion thereof:

(2) this repeal shall not affect

(a) the past operation of any enactment hereby repealed, nor anything duly done or suffered thereunder; nor

(b) any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred under any enactment hereby repealed; nor

(c) any investigation, legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right, privilege, obligation or liability as aforesaid; and any such investigation, legal proceeding and remedy may be carried on as if this Act had not passed: and

(3) this repeal shall not revive any enactment, right, privilege, matter, or thing not in force or existing at the commencement of this Act.

Article 1 of the Digest.

3. In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a different intention appears from the context :—

Definitions of terms.

"Estate" means land included under one entry in any of the General Registers of Revenue-paying Lands and Revenue-free Lands, prepared and maintained under the law for the time being in force by the Collector of a District:

Estate.

"Proprietor" means a person who as owner is solely or jointly in possession of an estate or a share of, or interest in, an estate :

Proprietor.

"Tenure" means (1) a rent-paying interest in land immediately subordinate to that of a proprietor and superior to that of a ryot; (2) a revenue-free or rent-free interest in land, when there exists no rent-paying interest in the same land between the proprietary interest and such revenue-free or rent-free interest :

Tenure.

Illustrations.

(a) A patni interest is a tenure.

(b) An ijarah or farm for a term of years is a tenure.

(c) A holds 120 bighas of valid revenue-free land situate within the limits of B's revenue-paying estate and not included under any entry in the General Register of Revenue-free Lands maintained by the Collector of the District under the law for the time being in force. This land is in the actual possession of ryots who pay their rents to A. The interest of A in such land is a tenure.

(d) B, the proprietor of a revenue-paying estate, makes a rent-free grant to A of 50 bighas of land included in such estate and in the actual possession of ryots. A, by virtue of such grant, becomes entitled to the rents payable by these ryots. A's interest in these 50 bighas is a tenure.

"Tenure-holder" means a person who as owner is solely or jointly in possession of a tenure or a share of, or interest in, a tenure :

Tenure-holder.

"Undertenure" means (1) a rent-paying interest in land subordinate to that of a tenure-holder and superior to that of a ryot; (2) a rent-free interest in land, when there exists a rent-paying interest in the same land between the proprietary interest and such rent-free interest:

Undertenure.

Where there are more undertenures than one in the same land, the undertenure immediately subordinate to that of the tenure-holder is termed an "undertenure of the first degree;" the undertenure immediately subordinate to the undertenure last mentioned is termed an "undertenure of the second degree;" the undertenure immediately subordinate to that last mentioned is termed an "undertenure of the third degree;" and so on in order :

Undertenure of the first degree.

Undertenure of the second degree.

Undertenure of the third degree.

Illustrations.

(a) A dar-patni interest is an undertenure of the first degree.

(b) A se-patni interest is an undertenure of the second degree.

(c) A dar-ijarah is an undertenure.

(d) B holds a patni tenure of 2,000 bighas of land under C, the proprietor of the Gopalpur estate. B makes a rent-free grant to A of 80 out of the 2,000 bighas. These 80 bighas are in the actual possession of ryots, who after the grant pay their rents to A. The interest of A is an undertenure.

"Undertenure-holder" means a person who as owner is solely or jointly in possession of an under-tenure, or a share of, or interest in, an under-tenure:

Undertenure-holder.

Subject to the provisions of Section 11, "ryot" means a person who holds land, or who occupies and cultivates land, if such person or his predecessor in title was originally let into possession of such land for the purpose of cultivating it or bringing it under cultivation. A person cultivates land or brings land under cultivation within the meaning of this Definition, when the cultivation is carried on by himself, or by the members of his family, or by servants, or by hired labourers, or by persons to whom he has sublet the land or any part of it, or partly by some and partly by others of these persons:

Ryot.

"Holding" means the interest of a ryot in the land which he holds or occupies and cultivates, and which forms the subject of a separate tenancy:

Holding.

"Occupancy holding" means a holding in which a ryot or any such tenant as is mentioned in Section 41, has a right of occupancy:

Occupancy holding.

"Under-ryot" means a person to whom a ryot has sublet his holding or a portion thereof:

Under-ryot.

"Rent" means whatever is payable or deliverable by a tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, or occupancy ryot to the proprietor, tenure-holder, or undertenure-holder possessing the interest immediately superior in the land held by him, in recognition and satisfaction of such superior interest; or whatever is payable or deliverable as a return or compensation for the use or occupation of land or for any rights of pasturage, forest rights, fisheries, or the like:

Rent.

Consider the definition f "land" in the General Clauses Act V (B.C.) of 1867.

"Land" includes woods and water thereupon: when applied to land cultivated or held by a ryot, it means land used or intended to be used for agricultural or horticultural purposes, or the like. In Chapter XVIII it means (a) tenures, undertenures, and holdings; (b) land used or let to be used for agriculture, horticulture, pasture, or other similar purpose, or for dwelling-houses, manufactures, or other similar buildings; and (c) rights of pasturage, forest rights, fisheries, and the like:

Land.

Explanation.—Bastú or homestead land is land used for agricultural purposes when it is occupied by a ryot, and together with the land cultivated by such ryot forms a single holding:

"Tenant" means a person liable to pay or deliver rent:

Tenant.

"Landlord" means a person to whom a tenant is liable to pay or deliver rent:

Landlord.

"Lease" or "Pottah" means a written instrument creating or continuing the relation of landlord and tenant, and executed by the landlord in favour of the tenant:

Lease. Pottah.

"Kabúliyat" means a written instrument creating or continuing the relation of landlord and tenant, and executed by the tenant in favour of the landlord, and includes the counterpart of a lease or pottah:

Kabúliyat.

"Collectorate" means the district to which a Collector is appointed, and does not include lands situate beyond the local limits of such district, but forming part of an estate, the revenue of which is paid into the Treasury of the said district:

Collectorate.

"Signed" includes "marked" when the person making the mark is unable to write his name; it also includes "stamped" with the name of the person referred to:

Signed.

"Judge" means the presiding officer of a Court:

Judge.

"Section" means a section of this Act.

Section.

Article 2 of the Digest.

4. Nothing in this Act is intended to affect—

Saving of custom, &c.

(a) any custom or customary right not inconsistent with, or not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by, its provisions;

(b) the powers and duties of Settlement Officers as by law defined and limited;

(c) the provisions of any special or local law not hereby repealed either expressly or by necessary implication[1].

[1] L. R., 3 C. P. 415: 1 Ex. D. 411.

Illustration

The custom of a ryot subletting his land for a term, or from year to year, is not inconsistent with, and is not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by the provisions of this Act. It is not intended that such custom should be affected by this Act.

Division of Act into Chapters and Parts.

5. This Act is divided into Parts and Chapters, as follows:—

PART I.—The Substantive Law of Landlord and Tenant.

Chapter I.—Of Tenure-holders and Undertenure-holders.

Chapter II.—Of Ryots entitled to hold land at Fixed Rates.

Chapter III.—Of Ryots who have held Land for Twelve years and acquired a Right of Occupancy.

Chapter IV.—Of Ryots who have held Land for Three or more, but less than Twelve, years.

Chapter V.—Of Ryots who have held Land for less than Three years.

Chapter VI.—Of the use of Land for Building Purposes.

Chapter VII.—Of Merger.

Chapter VIII.—Of the Registration of Transfers of Tenures, Undertenures, and Occupancy-holdings.

Chapter IX.—Of Rent, Instalments of Rent, Receipts for Rent, Deposit of Rent, Apportionment of rent, and Hypothecation for Rent.

Chapter X.—Of Coparceners.

Chapter XI.—Of some Miscellaneous Rights of Landlords and Tenants.

Chapter XII.—Of Special Provisions for Behar.

Chapter XIII.—Of Damages and Penalties.

Chapter XIV.—Of Limitation.

PART II.—The Procedure in suits between Landlords and Tenants.

Chapter XV.—Of Proceedings to enhance the Rent payable in money by Ryots having a right of Occupancy, and by Tenure-holders and Undertenure-holders.

Chapter XVI.—Of the Recovery of Arrears of Rent in certain cases by Summary Sale without Decree.

Chapter XVII.—Of Certain Special Rules of Procedure applicable to suits between Landlords and their Tenants or Agents.

Chapter XVIII.—Of the Procedure in Suits for the Recovery of Arrears of Rent, and certain other Suits.

PART I.

THE SUBSTANTIVE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

CHAPTER I.—OF TENURE-HOLDERS AND UNDER-TENURE-HOLDERS.

Article 20 of the Digest.

Tenure or undertenure held at fixed rent since Permanent Settlement not liable to enhancement.

6. (a) No tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, who otherwise than under a terminable lease holds his tenure or undertenure at a fixed rent which has not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement of Bengal, Behar and Orissa, made in the year of the Christian era one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, shall be liable to any enhancement of such rent.

Article 21 of the Digest.

Presumption from twenty years' holding at unchanged rent.

(b) Whenever it shall be proved in any suit under this Act that the rate of rent, at which any such tenure or undertenure is held, has not been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of such suit, it shall be presumed that such tenure or undertenure has been held at that rent from the time of such Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, or unless it be proved that such tenure or undertenure was created, or such rent fixed at some later period.

Article 19 of the Digest.

Exception.—In the case of a tenure or undertenure situate in an estate not permanently settled such presumption shall not operate to prevent the enhancement of the rent of such tenure or undertenure upon the expiry of a temporary settlement of the revenue, unless the right to hold such tenure or undertenure for ever at a fixed rate of rent has been expressly recognized in Settlement Proceedings by a Revenue Authority empowered by Government to make definitively or confirm Settlements.

Tenure or undertenure held since Permanent Settlement liable to enhancement only in certain cases.

7. No tenure or undertenure which has been held since the time of such Permanent Settlement is liable to enhancement save and except upon proof (1) that the landlord under whom it is held is entitled to enhance the rent thereof either (a) by the special custom of the district, or (b) by the conditions under which the tenure or undertenure is held; or (2) that the tenure-holder, or under-tenure-holder by receiving abatements from his rent has subjected himself to the payment of the increase demanded, and that the lands are capable of affording it.

Explanation I.—In order to entitle a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder to the benefit of this Section, it is sufficient for him to show that his tenure or undertenure existed and could have been registered in the Collector's office at the time of the Permanent Settlement, even though it were not actually registered.

Explanation II.—An abatement of rent granted to a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder for land taken under the provisions of "The Land Acquisition Act, 1870," is not an abatement within the meaning of this Section. New.

Tenure holder or under-tenure-holder liable to enhancement for land gained by alluvion and entitled to abatement for land lost by diluvion.

8. Notwithstanding anything contained in Section 6 or in Section 7, every tenure-holder and undertenure-holder shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, be liable to pay additional rent for land added to his tenure or undertenure by alluvion, and shall be entitled to abatement of rent in respect of any diminution of the area of his tenure or undertenure caused by diluvion or otherwise. Such increase or abatement of rent shall bear to the rent previously paid the same proportion which the increase or diminution of area bears to the previous area of the tenure or undertenure.

Limits of enhancement of rent of tenures and undertenures.

9. In any case in which the rate of rent of a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder is liable to enhancement, such rate may be enhanced up to the limit of the customary rate payable by persons holding similar tenures or undertenures in the vicinity; or, where no such customary rate exists or in any case falling within the Exception to Section 6, up to such limit as to the Court shall appear fair and equitable; provided that in cases where no customary rate exists the profit of such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder shall not exceed thirty per centum of the balance which remains after deducting from the gross rents payable to him the expenses of collecting such rents. If such tenure-holder himself occupies any portion of the land included in his tenure or undertenure, or has made a rent-free grant of any portion of such land, a reasonable rent shall be calculated for such portions and included in the gross rents aforesaid. As to the forum, see section 132. New.

Enhanced rent not to be more than double the previous rent. Enhancement may be gradual.

10. (a) In any case in which the rent of a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder is found to be liable to enhancement, the enhanced rent shall not be more than double the rent previously payable, and the Court may direct that the enhancement shall be gradual—that is to say, that the rent shall increase yearly by degrees for any number of years not exceeding five, until the limit of the enhancement allowed has been reached.

Rent once enhanced may not be altered for ten years.

(b) When the rent of a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder has been enhanced by a Civil Court under the provisions of this Act, such rent shall not be liable to alteration for a period of ten years next ensuing after the date of the final order so enhancing such rent.

Explanation.—An increase of rent on account of land gained by alluvion or a decrease of rent on account of land lost by diluvion is not an alteration within the meaning of clause (b) of this Section.

New.

Person, to whom more than 100 standard bighas demised by Government or a proprietor, otherwise than for a term or year by year, to be deemed a tenure-holder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10.

11. (a) Notwithstanding any custom or contract to the contrary, every person, to whom more than one hundred standard bighas of land have been demised by a single demise, otherwise than for a term or year by year, by Government or by a proprietor, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, and who has obtained possession of the land so demised, shall be deemed to be a tenure-holder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10. Every such tenure, which has been held by any such person or his heir for twelve years, shall be permanent and transferable.

Person, to whom more than 100 standard bighas demised by tenureholder or under-tenureholder otherwise than for a term or year by year, to be deemed an under-tenureholder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10.

(b) Notwithstanding any custom or contract to the contrary, every person to whom more than one hundred standard bighas of land have been demised by a single demise, otherwise than for a term or year by year, by a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, and who has obtained possession of the land so demised, shall be deemed to be an undertenure-holder within the meaning of Sections 8, 9, and 10. Every such undertenure, which has been held by any such person, or his heir, for twelve years, shall be permanent and transferable.

New.

Limit of enhancement of rent of tenure-holder or undertenure-holder mentioned in Section 11, if more than half the land demised was unreclaimed at the time of the demise.

12. If more than half the land included in any such single demise, as is mentioned in Section 11, was unreclaimed at the time of making such demise, and if the reclamation of such unreclaimed land were one of the objects of such demise, and such unreclaimed land were reclaimed accordingly, the rent of any such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder as is mentioned in Section 11, notwithstanding anything contained in Section 9, shall not be enhanced, so as to reduce his profit below twenty per centum of the balance mentioned in, and calculated according to the provisions of, Section 9; and the Court may, in any case in which such rent is enhanced, allow to any such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder by way of profit any such share of the said balance exceeding twenty per centum thereof, as to such Court may appear fair and equitable.

New.

Permanent tenures and undertenures declared heritable, devisable, and transferable.

13. All permanent tenures and undertenures are declared to be heritable, devisable, capable of being transferred by sale, gift, or otherwise at the discretion of the holder, answerable for his personal debts, and subject to the process of the Civil Courts, as other immovable property.

Reg. VIII of 1819, ss. 1 and 3. Article 26 of the Digest.

Legal incidents of a patni talook.

14. (a) A patni talook is a tenure held at a rent fixed in perpetuity, heritable, devisable, capable of being transferred by sale, gift, or otherwise at the discretion of the holder, answerable for the personal debts and subject to the process of the Civil Courts in the same manner as other immovable property.

(b) A patni tenure is not liable to be cancelled for default in payment of the rent thereof, but such tenure may be brought to sale by public auction, and the defaulting patnidar or holder of such patni tenure is entitled, subject to the provisions of this Act, to any surplus proceeds of sale beyond the arrears of rent due upon such tenure.

Right to sublet.

(c) A patnidar is entitled to let out the lands composing his tenure in any manner most conducive to his interest, and any engagements entered into by such patnidar with others are legal and binding between the parties to the same, their heirs and assignees: provided, however, that no such engagement shall operate so as to prejudice the right of the proprietor to hold the patni tenure answerable for any arrear of his rent in the state in which he granted it, and free of all incumbrances resulting from the act of his tenant, the patnidar.

Explanation.—In any case in which the interest in land created by a lease is therein denominated a patni taluk or patni tenure, it shall be presumed that a tenure having the incidents specified in this Section is intended.

Provisions of Section 14 applicable, mutatis mutandis, to patni undertenures.

15. The provisions of Section 14 shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to the following undertenures, namely, a patni taluk of the second degree, which is termed a "darpatni," a patni taluk of the third degree, which is termed a "sepatni," and a patni taluk of the fourth degree, which is termed a "chahar-patni."

Chapter II.—Of Ryots entitled to hold Land at Fixed Rates.

Article 37 of the Digest.

Ryots holding land at rates not changed since Permanent Settlement to continue to hold at those rates.

16. Ryots who hold lands at fixed rates of rent which have not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa made in the year of the Christian era one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, are entitled to continue to hold their lands at those rates.

Explanation I.—In the case of rent payable in kind, a fixed proportion of the produce is a fixed rate within the meaning of this Section.

Explanation II.—The operation of this Section is not affected by the fact of the land having been demised to different persons, or transferred, or separated from other land which formed with it a single holding, or amalgamated with other land into one holding, if the rate of rent has not been altered thereby.

Article 38 of the Digest.

Presumption if rent of land has not been changed for 20 years before suit.

17. Whenever it shall be proved in any suit or proceeding that the rent at which land is held by a ryot has not been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of such suit, it shall be presumed that the land has been held at that rent from the time of such Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, or unless it be proved that such rent was fixed at some later period.

A similar explanation may perhaps be well appended to Section

Explanation.—Such presumption may be made even though the ryot do not plead in express terms that the land has been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement at a rent which has not been changed since that time, provided that there be nothing in his statements inconsistent with its having been so held.

Exception.—In the case of a ryot holding land in an estate not permanently settled, such presumption shall not operate to prevent the enhancement of the rent of such land upon the expiry of a temporary settlement of the revenue, unless the right to hold such land for ever at a fixed rate of rent has been expressly recognized in Settlement Proceedings by a Revenue Authority empowered by Government to make definitively or to confirm settlements.

Exception in the case of temporarily-settled estates.

New.

Ryots holding at fixed rates are liable to enhancement for alluviated land and entitled to abatement for diluviated land under the N.-W. P. Act XVIII of 1873, s. 18.

18 A ryot entitled to hold land at fixed rates shall be liable to pay additional rent for land added to his holding by alluvion and shall be entitled to abatement of rent in respect of any diminution of the area of his holding caused by diluvion. Such increase or abatement of rent shall bear to the rent previously paid the same proportion which the increase or diminution of area respectively bears to the previous area of such holding.

Ryot holding at fixed rates liable to pay additional rent for land gained by alluvion and entitled to abatement for land diluviated.

CHAPTER III.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR TWELVE YEARS AND ACQUIRED A RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY.

See Article 40 of the Digest.

19. Subject to the provisions of Section 11, any ryot, who for a continuous period of twelve years has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated land, and paid rent for the same, has a right of occupancy in the land so held, or occupied and cultivated by him, whether held or occupied under a lease or otherwise.

Right of occupancy acquired by holding, or occupying and cultivating for twelve years.

Illustration.

A holds and cultivates lands for eight years and pays rent for the same. In the ninth year the land is diluviated and the site submerged, and A ceases to pay rent. Seven years afterwards, land is reformed on the same site. A has not a right of occupancy in the land so reformed.

Explanation 1.—In computing such period of twelve years, the time, during which his father or any other person from whom a ryot has inherited, has held or occupied such land, may be added to the time during which the ryot has himself held or occupied; but, in case of a transfer otherwise than by inheritance before the completion of the twelve years, whether with or without the consent of the landlord, the time during which the transferrer has held or occupied may not be added to the time during which the transferree has held or occupied, unless such landlord has expressly consented in writing that it shall be so added

Explanation 2.—A ryot will not be precluded from acquiring a right of occupancy by the fact that the landlord under whom he has held or occupied for the whole or part of such period of twelve years had no title in the land so held or occupied; or by the fact that such landlord was a coparcener.

Explanation 3.—A right of occupancy may be acquired:—

(a) by a person holding or occupying land immediately under, and paying rent directly to, a mukarraridar or istemrardar;

(b) by a person holding or occupying land immediately under, and paying rent directly to, any such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder as is mentioned in Section 11, if such person is not himself an undertenure-holder, and if,

before he was let into possession, no other person has acquired a right of occupancy in the same land under the provisions of this Act, or of Act X of 1859, or of Act VIII of 1869 of the BengalCouncil;

(c) by a person holding or occupying land immediately under, and paying rent directly to, a ryot having a right of occupancy therein, if such land is held or occupied otherwise than for a term, or year by year;

(d) by a person holding or occupying khamar, nijjote, or sir land immediately under, and paying rent directly to, a proprietor, if such land is held or occupied otherwise than for a term, or year by year.

Explanation 4.—A right of occupancy may not be acquired:—

(a) by a proprietor in land which is a portion of his estate;

(b) by any such tenure-holder, as is mentioned in Section 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 or 13, in land, which is a portion of his tenure;

(c) by any such undertenure-holder, as is mentioned in Section 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, or 13, in land, which is a portion of his undertenure;

(d) by a mukarraridar or istemrardar in land in which he has a mukarrari or istemrari interest;

(e) by an ijarahdar or farmer of rents, in land which is a portion of his ijarah; provided that a right of occupancy otherwise duly acquired in land shall not be lost by subsequently holding such land as part of an ijarah or farm;

(f) by a person holding or occupying land immediately under, and paying rent directly-to, a ryot having a right of occupancy therein, if such land is held for a term, or year by year;

(g) by a person holding or occupying khamar, nijjote, or sir land immediately under, and paying rent directly to, a proprietor, if such land is held for a term, or year by year;

(h) by a tenant, who, when he was first let into possession of land by his landlord, contracted in writing with such landlord that a right of occupancy should not be acquired in such land, if such written contract has been duly registered. No contract shall in any other case debar a tenant from acquiring a right of occupancy.

Legal incidents of a right of occupancy

20. The following legal incidents shall appertain to every holding in which a right of occupancy has been acquired under this Act or any Act repealed thereby, that is to say:—

Saleable in execution of a decree for arrears of rent only.

(a) It shall be saleable in execution of any decree passed for arrears of the rent thereof, but shall not be saleable in execution of any other decree.

It is provided in section 64 that a landlord, who has obtained a decree, must sell before resorting to any other process of execution. The bidding at the sale is open to all—See section 208, para. (1).

Transferable by sale or gift, and devisable.

(b) It may be transferred by private sale or gift, and may be devised by will, and the consent of the landlord shall not be necessary to the validity of any such transfer or devise: provided that no transfer or devise of a portion only of such holding shall be valid as against the landlord without his written consent. A transfer under this clause is not complete until possession has been obtained by the transferree.

Provision for Registration of transfers and successions is made elsewhere—See Chapter VIII, ss. 48–54.

Heritable according to the law of inheritance of the tenant.

(c) It shall be heritable according to the law of inheritance to which the tenant is subject, but no division of the holding or of the rent shall be made so as to be binding on the landlord without his written consent. If a ryot who has a right of occupancy in land dies, leaving no heirs and without having made a will, the landlord shall be entitled to take possession of such land.

May not be mortgaged.

(d) No ryot having a right of occupancy in land shall be entitled to mortgage such right or such land or any portion thereof, and any such mortgage shall be void to all intents and purposes, nor shall any Court of Justice take cognizance thereof or give effect thereto in any judicial proceeding whatever.

Ryot may not be ejected from land in which he has such right.

(e) No ryot may be ejected from land in which he has a right of occupancy, whether for non-payment of rent or other cause not being a breach of a stipulation in respect of which such ryot and his landlord have contracted in writing that the ryot shall be liable to ejectment for a breach thereof. Any such ryot, who is ejected on account of a breach of any such stipulation, shall be entitled to compensation for improvements under the provisions of Sections 29 and 30.

Rent of occupancy ryot payable in kind not to exceed fifty per cent. of the gross produce in the case of Staple crops. In the case of other crops, a special contract in writing may be made and enforced: if no such contract, value of twenty-five per cent. of staple crops may be recovered.

21. When the rent payable by a ryot for an occupancy holding is paid in kind, and such ryot does not receive from his landlord seed or labour or other assistance in producing the crop, such rent shall not exceed fifty per centum of the gross produce in the case of any such staple crop as is mentioned in Clause (c) of Section 23. In the case of crops other than such staple crops, if the landlord and tenant have contracted in writing that a certain share of the gross produce shall be paid to the landlord as rent, such contract may be enforced; but, in the absence of any such contract, the landlord shall not be entitled to recover any other or greater rent than twenty-five per centum of the average annual value of the gross produce calculated as provided in Clause (c) of Section 23.

Article 48 of the Digest.

Rent of ryot having a right of occupancy may be enhanced on what grounds.

22. Subject to the other provisions of this Act, a landlord is entitled to enhance the rent payable to him in money by a ryot for land in which such ryot has a right of occupancy. Such rent may be enhanced upon any one or more of the following grounds, and not otherwise:—

(1) on the ground that the rate of rent paid by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity;

(2) on the ground that the quantity of land held by such ryot has been shown by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him ;

(3) on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by such ryot as compared with such powers at the time when the rent was fixed, or at any subsequent time, have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot and from causes not merely temporary or casual;

(4) on the ground that the prices of produce in the locality, or at the usual markets, as compared with similar prices at the time when the rent was fixed or at any subsequent time, have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, and from causes not merely temporary or casual.

Illustrations.

Of Ground (1).

(a) A's paternal grandfather seventy years ago reclaimed and rendered culturable the land which A now holds and cultivates, and which came to him by inheritance from such paternal grandfather. B has for fifteen years held and cultivated land which was in a culturable state when B was first let into possession thereof. A and B have each therefore a right of occupancy. There is evidence that the hereditary descendant of a ryot, who being the first settler reclaimed the land, has a special privilege. A and B are not ryots of the same class.

(b) A is in possession of a holding which has descended to him from his great grandfather who held it at the time of the Permanent Settlement. B was let into possession of his holding twenty years ago. There is evidence that the descendants of ryots, who were in possession at the time of the Permanent Settlement, customarily hold at rates less by four annas in the rupee than ryots who have come into possession at a later period. A and B are not ryots of the same class.

(c) A has acquired a right of occupancy in land which he holds under, and for which he pays rent to, a proprietor. B has acquired a right of occupancy under the circumstances mentioned in clause (c) of Explanation 3 of Section 19. A and B are not ryots of the same class.

Of Ground (2).

(a) A, a ryot, holds his land at one rupee per bigha and has been paying an annual rent of Rs. 17, as for 17 bighas A measurement shows that he holds 23 bighas, and the whole of this land is of the same quality. His rent can be enhanced to Rs 23.

(b) A, a ryot, has a holding usually described in the jama-wasil-baki papers and the ryot's receipts as comprising 27 bigahs, and the rent paid for which is Rs. 33-12. No measurement of this holding has at any time been made, and there is no allegation that its area has been diminished by diluvion; but 15 bighas of land clearly distinguishable are shown by measurement to have been added to the holding by alluvion. This accreted land is of a better quality than any portion of the original holding, and it is shown that two rupees per bigha is the prevailing rate paid by ryots of the same class with A for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity. A is liable to pay Rs. 30 in addition to his former rent of Rs. 33-12.

(c) A was let into possession of a holding in 1860 under a written lease, which describes the holding as comprising 37 bighas of land and gives the boundaries. The land is situated in a cultivated village, and the boundaries are ascertainable and definite. In 1880 the land within these boundaries is measured and found to be 45 bighas. A is not liable to pay enhanced rent in respect of the 8 additional bighas found to be within the boundaries stated in his lease.

(d) A was let into possession of a holding in 1850 under a written lease, which describes the holding as comprising 50 bighas, more or less, and gives the boundaries. The land is situate in a village which in 1850 consisted chiefly of uncleared jangal, and the boundaries are inexact and indefinite. In 1880 A is found to be in possession of 200 bighas of cultivated land, to which the description by boundaries is applicable. A is liable to enhancement.

As to (c) and (d) see IX, B L. R., 169; IV, Kent's Commentaries § 468; II, Smith, L. C. 628 Taylor on Evidence, §§. 11 4-1105.

XXII, W. R. 246: I B. L. R. A. C. 21. Hay's Rep. 1863, p. 560.

(c) A held and cultivated 30 bighas of land at one rupee per bigha from 1863 to 1875. The land so regularly cultivated by him up to 1875 was then bounded on the east by uncleared waste land belonging to A's landlord. In 1876 A began to encroach upon this waste land, and in 1880 is found to be, without the acquiescence of his landlord, in possession of 20 bighas of this waste land in addition to the 30 bighas originally held and cultivated by him. A's landlord may either treat A as a trespasser in respect of these 20 bighas, and sue to eject him therefrom and to recover from him mesne profits in respect thereof; or may accept A as his tenant for the 20 bighas as an addition to A's original holding of 30 bighas. In the latter case A shall be liable to pay additional or enhanced rent for the 20 bighas of land.

Meaning of term "landlord."

Explanation I.—No person is a "landlord" within the meaning of this Section who has not—

New.

(a) a permanent transferable interest in the land of which the rent is payable to him: or

New.

(b) a farming or leasehold interest in the land of which the rent is payable to him.

Meaning of term "land"

Explanation II.—The term "land" in this Section means land used or intended to be used for agriculture, horticulture, pasture, or other similar purpose. When a landlord proceeds upon the fourth ground to enhance the rent of land used or intended to be used for pasture, such rent may be so fixed that the enhanced rate shall bear to the rate then prevailing for arable land in the vicinity the same proportion which the former rate bore to the similar rate prevailing at the time when such former rent was fixed, or at any subsequent time.

New.

Rate fixed by Collector to be deemed a prevailing rate.

Explanation III.—When a Table of Rates has been prepared and sanctioned in the manner hereafter in this Act provided, any such rate so fixed shall be taken to be a prevailing rate within the meaning of the first ground of enhancement specified in this Section.

New.

Landlord entitled to whole increment, when effected solely by his agency or at his expense—otherwise to half only.

23. (a) In any case in which the rent of an occupancy holding is enhanced upon the third or fourth ground specified in Section 22, if the increase of the productive powers of the land or of the price of produce has been wholly effected by the agency or at the expense of the landlord, such landlord shall be entitled to the whole of the benefit of such increase. If such increase has taken place otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the landlord or the ryot, such landlord shall be entitled to one-half of such benefit only.

New.

Limit to enhancement upon the third or fourth ground.

(b) In any case in which the rent of an occupancy holding is enhanced upon the third or fourth ground specified in Section 22, the enhanced rent shall not be more than double the rent previously paid; and shall not bear a higher proportion to such rent previously paid than the increased productive powers or increased prices bear respectively to the former productive powers or the former prices. In estimating the increased productive powers or the increased prices, the Court or the Collector shall have regard to such an average of years as under the circumstances may appear reasonable.

Calculation to be based upon a reasonable average of years.

(c) In any case in which the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy is enhanced upon the first, third, or fourth ground specified in Section 22, the enhanced rent shall not be more than one-fourth, or, in the case of any such ryot as is mentioned in clause (c) of Explanation 3 of Section 19, three-tenths of the average annual value of the gross produce of the land for which such rent is payable. Such average annual value shall be calculated for staple crops only, and upon the prices at harvest time of a reasonable number of years. The Board of Revenue may from time to time make, and, when made, alter, add to, and revoke rules for calculating such average annual value, and shall also determine and notify by an advertisement in the Calcutta Gazette what crops shall be deemed to be staple crops, for the purposes of such calculation, in any district or in any area less than a district to be described in such notification. When such staple crops have been so determined and notified for any such district or area, one year's previous notice shall be given of any alterations in such staples.

Rent enhanced on first, third, or fourth ground not to exceed one-fourth of the average annual value of gross produce, calculated for Staple crops.

Board of Revenue to make rules for calculating average value and to determine and notify staples.

(d) The Court or the Collector may, if it seems expedient, in any case in which enhancement of the rent of an occupancy holding is allowed, direct that such enhancement shall be gradual,—that is to say, that the rent shall increase yearly by degrees for any number of years not exceeding five until the limit of the enhancement allowed has been reached.

Progressive enhancement may be directed.

New.

(e) In any case in which the rent of a ryot is found to be liable to enhancement on the fourth ground specified in Section 22, if such ryot has been paying an annual sum by way of Road Cess, Public Works Cess, or the like, the enhanced rent which such ryot shall be otherwise found liable to pay shall be reduced by an amount equal to such annual sum.

Ryot entitled to a deduction for road cess, &c.

Illustration.

A, a ryot having a right of occupancy, was paying an annual rent of Rs. 8. It is found in enhancement proceedings that this rent can fairly be enhanced on the fourth ground to Rs. 12; but, as A was paying four annas annually as road cess, the amount of rent which A will be liable to pay in future will be Rs. 12, less 4 annas, or Rs. 11-12.

24. The rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy shall not be liable to enhancement (1) when he holds under a written lease for a term certain, which has not expired; (2) when such ryot and his landlord have contracted that such rent shall not be enhanced.

No enhancement in certain cases of the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy.

25. Subject to the provisions of Clause (a) of Section 105, of Clause (a) of Section 111, and of Section 114, a ryot having a right of occupancy is entitled, on any one or more of the following grounds and not otherwise, to an abatement of the rent payable by him in money, namely:—

Ryot having right of occupancy when entitled to abatement of rent.

(1) on the ground that the quantity of land held by such ryot has been shown by measurement to be less than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him;

(2) on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by such ryot as compared with such powers at the time when the rent was fixed, or at any subsequent time, have decreased from some cause beyond the ryot's control, and not merely temporary or casual;

(3) on the ground that the prices of produce in the locality or at the usual markets, as compared with similar prices at the time when the rent was fixed or at any subsequent time, have decreased from some cause beyond the ryot's control, and not merely temporary or casual.

CHAPTER IV.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR THREE OR MORE BUT LESS THAN TWELVE YEARS.

26. Any ryot, who for a continuous period of three or more, but less than twelve years has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated land other than khamar, nijjote or sir land let on lease for a term or year by year, shall not be evicted from such land by the landlord thereof otherwise than (a) for non-payment of rent, or (b) for a breach of some condition of his lease which expressly provides that eviction shall be the penalty of such breach, or (c) for refusal to pay an increased rent demanded by his landlord. Such increased rent and the grounds upon which it is demanded shall be specified in a notice which shall be served upon such ryot (a) in districts or parts of districts in which the Fusli or Umli year prevails, in or before the month of Jeyt; or (b) in districts or parts of districts in which the Bengali year prevails, in or before the month of Pous. Such grounds shall not be limited by any of the provisions of this Act

Ryot who has cultivated or held land for three years protected from arbitrary eviction.

Notice of demand of increased rent to be served on ryot.

27. (a) When any such ryot has been served with a notice of demand of increased rent under the provisions of Section 26, he shall be liable to pay such increased rent from the first day of the year next ensuing after the service of such notice, if he remains in possession of the land mentioned in such notice after such day.

Any such ryot served with such notice to be liable for the increased rent demanded, if he remains in possession of the land.

Any such ryot, if unwilling to pay such increased rent, may relinquish the land.

(b) If such ryot is unwilling to pay the increased rent demanded and desires to give up the land mentioned in the notice, he may at any time before the end of the year, in which such notice is served, give notice of relinquishment to his landlord. Such notice of relinquishment shall be served through the Civil Court, and shall, if such landlord, within the first month of the year next ensuing after service of notice, pays to such ryot or lodges in court the compensation for disturbance provided by Section 28, determine the tenancy of such land as between them.

Any such ryot so relinquishing his land entitled to one year's increased rent as compensation for disturbance.

28. Any such ryot, who, being unwilling to pay the increased rent demanded for the land held by him, relinquishes such land in the manner stated in clause (b) of Section 27, shall be entitled to receive as compensation for disturbance a sum equal to the increased rent of one year as demanded in the notice aforesaid. Such ryot, if such sum is not paid to him or lodged in Court as provided in the said clause (b), shall be entitled to retain possession of the land at the previous rent, or may at his option sue for such amount in the Civil Court.

Ryot who has held for three but less than twelve years, if evicted, entitled to compensation for improvements.

29. A ryot who for a continuous period of three or more but less than twelve years has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated land other than khamar, nijjote, or sir land let on lease for a term or year by year, shall, if evicted from such land on any of the grounds mentioned in Section 26, or if he relinquishes it under Clause (b) of Section 27, be entitled to receive compensation for any improvements which he may have made on such land at any time while he held or occupied it as aforesaid.

Explanation.—The term "improvements" in this Section means works by which the cultivation of land has been lastingly facilitated, or the productive powers of land have been lastingly increased, and includes—

(a) the erection of a dwelling-house and offices suitable for the habitation of a cultivating ryot;

(b) the making of tanks, wells, and other works for the storage, supply or distribution of water for agricultural purposes;

(c) works for the drainage of land, or for the protection of land from floods or from erosion or other damage by water;

(d) the reclaiming, clearing or enclosing of land for agricultural purposes;

(e) the renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or alterations therein, or additions thereto;

(f) the planting of fruit trees.

New.

Compensation for Improvements.

In the case of a ryot who has held for twelve years and has therefore acquired a right of occupancy, no compensation for improvements is ordinarily required, as we have decided that his holding is to be brought to sale in execution of a decree for rent, and the price realized will include the value of the improvements. The ryot will receive the surplus sale-proceeds after the landlord's claims for rent have been satisfied. This is, however, concerned only with the case of non-payment of rent. In the possible case of eviction for breach of a condition of a lease, provision for giving compensation for improvements to a right-of-occupancy ryot has been made in clause (e) of Section 20.

We have decided not to make any rules for compensation for improvements made by a ryot who has not held for three years.

It remains to deal with ryots who have held for three or more than three years, but less than twelve years: and the text deals with these.

Landlord and ryot may agree as to payment of compensation. If they do not agree, Civil Court may decide. Principles of decision.

30. The landlord and the ryot may agree on the amount and mode and time of payment of the compensation mentioned in Section 29. If they do not agree, the Civil Court may upon the petition of either of them determine the amount of such compensation, and in so doing shall take into consideration the following principles :—

38 & 39 Vic. Cap 92, s. 7.

(a) The amount of the ryot's compensation in respect of an improvement shall be the sum laid out by the ryot on the improvement with a deduction of a proportionate part thereof for each year while the tenancy endures after the year of tenancy in which the outlay is made, and while the improvement continues unexhausted.

38 & 39 Vic Cap 92, s 11.

(b) In determining the amount of compensation in respect of an improvement there shall be taken into account in reduction thereof any sum reasonably necessary to put the same into good repair or condition.

Id. s 19 and The Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Act, 1870.

(c) Any deterioration of the holding caused by the act of the ryot shall be taken into account.

Decree to be made for amount of compensation.

The Civil Court, having determined the amount of compensation, shall make a decree for the same. Such decree, if the amount of compensation awarded thereby does not exceed fifty rupees, shall be final and conclusive.

Three years' ryot may claim abatement, and, if landlord refuse, may relinquish land and claim compensation.

31. Any such ryot as is mentioned in Section 26 may, on the grounds mentioned in Section 25 or any of them, claim abatement of the rent payable by him in money. If the landlord of such ryot is unwilling to allow the abatement to which such ryot would be so entitled, such ryot may relinquish the land in the manner provided in Section 27, and, in this event, he shall be entitled to compensation under the provisions of Sections 28, 29, and 30. The compensation recoverable under Section 28 in any such case shall be a sum equal the unabated rent of one year.

CHAPTER V.—OF RYOTS WHO HAVE HELD LAND FOR LESS THAN THREE YEARS.

See Article 50 of the Digest

Ryot, who has held for less than three years, may be evicted at the will of his landlord, but only through the Court.

32. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Act, no ryot who has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, land for less than three years, whether under a written agreement or not, shall be entitled by reason of such holding or occupying to retain possession of such land against the will of his landlord: but a ryot, who does not quit of his own accord, shall not be evicted otherwise than by the action of the Civil Court.

See Articles 49 and 52 of the Digest.

Such ryot may not sue for determination of future rent or for abatement.

(2) No ryot, who has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, land for less than three years, may maintain a suit against his landlord—

(a) for the determination of the rent at which he shall be entitled to continue to hold or occupy and cultivate such land; or (b) for abatement of the rent previously paid by him for such land.

See Article 50 of the Digest.

33. (1) When any such ryot as is mentioned in Section 32 has been let into possession otherwise than for a term certain, or having been let into possession for a term certain has held over on the expiry of such term with the consent, express or implied, of his landlord, such ryot may not be ejected unless a notice to quit has been served upon him as hereinafter provided.

Any such ryot let into possession otherwise than for a term, or holding over on expiry of term, may not be ejected without notice to quit.

New.

(2) Such notice to quit shall be in writing and shall be served through the Civil Court (a) in districts or parts of districts in which the Fusli or Umli year prevails, in or before the month of Jeyt; or (b) in districts or parts of districts in which the Bengali year prevails, in or before the month of Pous.

Notice to quit when to be given, and how to be served.

New.

34. When a ryot, who in the case mentioned in Clause 1 of Section 33 has in accordance with the provisions of Clause 2 of the same Section been served with a notice to quit land, refuses to give up such land from the first day of the year next ensuing after service of such notice; or

Ryot served with notice to quit as provided in Section 33, when a ryot, who has been let into possession of land for a term less than three years, refuses to give up such land upon the expiry of such term and has not the consent, express or implied, of his landlord to hold over,

or ryot holding after expiry of term of less than three years without landlord's consent, the landlord may, within three months from the expiry of the year in which such notice was served or from the expiry of such term, sue to eject such ryot; and, in any case in which such a suit has been instituted, no time subsequent to the year in which such notice was served or subsequent to the said term shall be taken into account so as to give to any such ryot any benefit which is by this Act given to ryots, who have held, or occupied and cultivated, land for three years or any longer period;

may be sued and ejected by Court. Period of wrongful holding not to count.

and such landlord, if he obtains a decree for ejectment against such ryot, shall be entitled to recover in execution of such decree the full letting value of the land for such time as he may be kept out of possession after the expiry of such year or such term as aforesaid, together with reasonable compensation for any other damage or loss that may have been caused to him by being so kept out of possession.

Such ryot when ejected liable for full letting value of the land, and also for damages.

New
See North-Western Provinces Rent Act, XVIII of 1873, s. 21.

Ryot who has held land for less than three years, not liable to pay higher rent, unless there be a written agreement or unless a notice has been served. Notice to state grounds of enhancement.

35. (1) No ryot who has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, land for less than three years shall be liable to pay a higher rent than that paid by him for the previous year, unless a written agreement has been entered into by him and his landlord for the payment of such higher rent; or unless a notice demanding such higher rent has been served upon him within the time provided in Clause 2 of Section 33 for the notice therein mentioned. Such notice shall set forth the grounds upon which such higher rent is claimed, but such grounds shall not be limited by any of the provisions of this Act.

See Article 51 of the Digest.

Such ryot served with such notice may relinquish land. If he do not, he is liable to pay increased rent demanded up to limit of double former rent.

(2) When a notice demanding higher rent has been served upon any such ryot as provided in Clause 1, such ryot, if he is unwilling to pay such enhanced rent, may relinquish the land before the first day of the year next ensuing after service of such notice. If he does not so relinquish the land, he shall be liable to pay the increased rent demanded by such notice from such first day of the year next ensuing: provided that he shall not in any case be liable under this rule to pay more than double the former rent.

Article 51 of the Digest.

Explanation.—When any such ryot is served with a notice to quit or pay a specified increased rent, and he elects to remain in possession of the land mentioned in such notice, the tenancy is not thereby determined, and such notice shall be treated as a notice under Clause 1.

Chapter VI.—Of the use of Land for Building Purposes.

Ryot may not use land for building or other purpose inconsistent with use for which it was let.

36 When land used or let to be used for agriculture, horticulture, pasture, or any other similar purpose is held by any such ryot as is mentioned in Section 16 or in Section 26, such ryot shall not, without the permission of the landlord of such land, use any portion thereof for building or any other purpose inconsistent with that for which it was used or let to be used as aforesaid: provided that a ryot may without such permission erect upon such land a brick-built or other dwelling house suitable for the use and occupation of himself and his family, together with such outhouses and offices as may be necessary thereto.

Rule does not extend to erection of a suitable residence.

Ryot using land for other purpose may be served with notice of objection.

37. If any such ryot begins to use any such land without the permission of the landlord thereof for building or any other purpose inconsistent with that for which it was used or let to be used as aforesaid, such landlord may serve such ryot through the Civil Court with a notice requiring him to desist from such change of the use of the land, and to restore it to its former condition, if such condition has been altered.

If ryot does not obey notice served in reasonable time, and landlord obtains injunction, ryot disobeying injunction may be ejected.

38. In any case in which such notice is served upon such ryot within a reasonable time after he began to change the use of the land, if such ryot fails to comply with the requirements of such notice, and if such landlord having applied to the Civil Court under the provisions of The Specific Relief Act, 1877, obtains a mandatory injunction to restrain such ryot from changing the use of the land, and to direct him to restore it to its former condition, where such condition has been altered, then, if such ryot for one month after the date of the decree granting such injunction, or, where such decree has been made ex parte, after the date of service upon him of notice of such injunction, fails to obey the same, he shall be liable to be ejected by the Court from the land in respect of which the injunction was granted; he shall also be liable to pay by way of damages such sum as the Court which granted the injunction may find to be necessary to restore the land to its former condition, where such condition has been altered; and he shall not be entitled to compensation in respect of any buildings or works erected or executed upon such land.

The Draft here supposes the landlord to be on the alert and to keep himself informed of what is going on upon his property. In this case eviction is the penalty, if the ryot pertinaciously continues to do what he has no right to do.

If notice not served within reasonable time, and no evidence that landlord was earlier aware of the change of the use of the land, ryot not liable to ejectment, and entitled to compensation for loss from removing buildings, &c.

39. In any case in which such notice is not served upon such ryot within a reasonable time after he began to change the use of the land, if there is no evidence that the landlord was aware thereof for some considerable time before he took steps to have such notice served, and if the landlord obtains a mandatory injunction as aforesaid, such ryot may be compelled to obey such injunction in any manner provided in that behalf by The Code of Civil Procedure, but he shall not be liable to ejectment, and he shall be entitled to receive from his landlord such compensation as the Court which granted the injunction may find to be a reasonable equivalent for any loss sustained by him in consequence of his having to remove any buildings or works erected by him before he received the notice mentioned in Section 37.

The Draft here supposes the landlord to be negligent in looking after his property, and in consequence not to have given the ryot notice of objection at as early a period as he otherwise might have done, had he been diligent.

Landlord being aware and without objection allowing ryot to spend money;

40. If the landlord, being aware that any such ryot has begun to use any such land for building or any other purpose inconsistent with that for which it was used or let to be used as aforesaid, without objection allows such ryot to expend money on such building or other purpose;

or landlord serving no notice of objection for two years.

or, if the landlord fails to serve the ryot with such notice as is mentioned in Section 37 within two years after such ryot so began to change the use of the land;

such landlord shall be estopped from afterwards objecting to such changed use, and such land shall be deemed to have been let for building or such other purpose to which its use has been altered.

estopped from afterwards objecting to change of use of the land

Possession for twelve years of land let for building or other such purpose gives a right of occupancy.

41. (a) When land used or let to be used for building or any purpose other than agriculture, horticulture, pasture, or the like, has been in the immediate possession of a tenant, whether under or without a lease, for the full period of twelve years after the commencement of this Act, such tenant shall, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, acquire a right of occupancy in such land, and shall not be liable to be ejected.

Explanation.—The possession of the father or other person from whom the tenant inherits shall be deemed to be the possession of the tenant, within the meaning of this rule, for the purpose of acquiring a right of occupancy.

Such interest to be heritable, transferable, and devisable.

(b) The interest of the person who has so acquired a right of occupancy shall be heritable, transferable, and devisable, and shall be liable to sale in execution of any decree of the Civil Court.

In default of payment of rent, land with buildings, &c, may be sold.

(c) If such tenant makes default in paying the rent of such land, the land together with the buildings or other works thereupon may be brought to sale in execution of a decree for arrears of such rent and shall be subject to the provisions of Section 64: provided that any such tenant may be ejected for a breach of any condition of his tenancy for which breach he is liable to ejectment by virtue of a contract between him and his landlord.

Consider procedure to be followed.

Rule for enhancing the rent of land used for building or other such purpose.

42. When a tenant has acquired a right of occupancy in any land under the provisions of Section 41, if the rent of such land has not been enhanced during the previous ten years, the landlord thereof shall be entitled from time to time to enhance such rent, so that it may be equal to the rent paid by other tenants for land in the neighbourhood having similar advantages and used for similar purposes, or so that it may be equal to five per centum per annum of the market value of such land.

CHAPTER VII.—OF MERGER.

Nemo potest esse dominus et tenens.

When same person becomes owner of an estate and a tenure therein, the tenure to be merged in the estate.

43. (a) When by purchase at a private or public sale, by gift, succession, or will, the proprietor of an estate becomes the owner of a tenure in such estate, such tenure shall, unless such proprietor can show that he had a contrary intention, be presumed to be merged in the proprietary interest and to be extinguished by the fact of the same person being owner of the estate and the tenure, subject, however, to the following conditions:—

Kent, vol. IV, p. 108; Woodfall, 281

(1) Such person must be owner of the estate and the tenure in the same right and at the same time.

Kent, vol. IV, p. 112.

(2) The presumption shall not arise in the case of a minor until he becomes of full age, or in the case of a person of unsound mind until he becomes of sound mind.

[1] Kent, vol. IV, pp 110, 111.

(3) Such merger shall not operate to the prejudice of any person having a lien[1] upon such tenure or of any undertenure-holder or ryot.[2]

8 and 9 Vic., cap. 106, s. 9

(4) Subject to the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to sales of land for arrears of Government revenue, and subject to the provisions of this Act as to sales for arrears of rent without, or in execution of, a decree, such proprietor shall have the same rights and be subject to the same liabilities which the previous holder of such tenure had or was subject to, in respect of those persons between whom and such tenure-holder the relation of landlord and tenant existed:

Proviso.

provided that when, in the case of two or more persons being coparceners, one or more, but not all, of such persons become the owners of a tenure in such estate, no merger shall take place.

Deed declaratory of intention must be registered within three months and published upon land comprised in tenure.

(b) Upon the expiry of three months from the date when such person so became owner of the estate and the tenure, such contrary intention may be proved in the following manner and not otherwise, that is to say, by the production of a deed declaratory of such intention and duly registered within such period of three months, and by proof that a copy of such deed was published in the manner provided in sub-clauses 4 and 5 of Clause (a) of Section 203 for the notification therein mentioned.

Provisions of Section 43 to apply to other cases in which the owner of a superior interest acquires an interest immediately inferior.

44. The provisions of Section 43, so far as they are applicable, shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to a tenure-holder acquiring an undertenure of the first degree; to an undertenure-holder of the first degree acquiring an undertenure of the second degree; and so on in order; and also to a proprietor, tenure-holder or undertenure-holder acquiring an occupancy holding, the rent of which was previously payable directly to such proprietor, tenure-holder or undertenure-holder.

New

Proprietary interest merged in paramount title, when an estate is purchased by Secretary of State for India in Council.

45. It is hereby declared to be, and to have always been, the law in the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal that, when the Secretary of State for India in Council acquires an estate by purchase or otherwise, the proprietary interest in the land included in such estate is merged in the paramount title of such Secretary of State, and extinguished by the fact of such proprietary interest and such paramount title meeting in the same person. The third and fourth conditions mentioned in Clause (a) of Section 43 shall apply to every such estate acquired by the Secretary of State for India in Council. Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to interfere with the operation in any such estate of Act VIII of 1879 passed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council, or of any Act for the time being in force for the recovery of Public Demands.

Illustration.

An estate named Sultanpur is purchased by the Collector of Burdwan on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council at a sale for arrears of land revenue. A, B, and C are ryots holding land included in this estate, and before the sale they paid certain annual sums as rent direct to the proprietor of Sultanpur. After the sale they are liable to pay the same annual sums to the Secretary of State for India in Council, and such sums are so payable not as rent, but as land revenue.

CHAPTER VIII.—OF THE REGISTRATION OF TRANSFERS OF TENURES, UNDERTENURES, AND OCCUPANCY-HOLDINGS.

See Article 25 of the Digest.

46. Every succession to, or transfer of, a tenure or undertenure or any portion thereof, or of an occupancy holding shall within three months after such transfer or succession be registered in the sarrishta or Rent-Office of the landlord to whom the rent of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding is payable; and such landlord shall admit to registry and otherwise give effect to every such transfer or succession: provided that no landlord shall be bound to admit to registry or give effect to any division or distribution of the rent of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, nor shall any such division or distribution be valid against such landlord without his consent in writing.

Tenant to register transfer of his tenure, undertenure or holding in his landlord's sarrishta. No division of the rent binding on landlord without his consent in writing.

Explanation 1.—The term "transfer" in this Section means and includes a transfer by private sale, gift, or exchange, or by sale in execution of a decree.

Explanation 2.—The term "succession" in this Section includes devolution by will or by inheritance. In the case of a succession, when there are more heirs than one, all such heirs shall be entitled to have their names registered.

See Article 27 of the Digest. Except in the case of patni taluka, the existing law does not provide for a fee upon a transfer or succession.

47 In every case of succession to, and transfer of, a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, not being a transfer by sale in execution of a decree for arrears of its own rent, the landlord thereof is entitled to a fee, which shall be paid upon the registration of such transfer or succession. Such fee shall be two per centum upon the annual rent of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, provided that no such fee shall be less than one rupee or more than one hundred rupees. In default of payment of such fee, such landlord may refuse to register such transfer or succession.

Landlord entitled to fee on transfer of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding.

See Note 6, page 12 of the Digest.

48. (a) In every case of transfer of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, not being a transfer by sale in execution of a decree, the transferrer shall cease to be, and the transferee shall become personally liable for the rent of such tenure, undertenure, or holding from and after the date of application for registry.

Effect of transfer and of registration of transfer or succession upon liability for rent.

(b) In every case of transfer of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding by sale in execution of a decree for arrears of the rent thereof, the transferree shall be personally liable for such rent from and after the date of the confirmation of such sale by the Court. The former tenant shall be personally liable for such rent up to such date.

(c) In every case of transfer of a tenure, or undertenure by sale in execution of a decree, not being a decree for arrears of the rent thereof, it shall be the duty of the tenant whose interest is so transferred to give notice of such transfer to his landlord. If he gives such notice within a reasonable time, he shall cease to be, and the transferree shall become, personally liable for the rent from the date of the confirmation of the sale. If he omits to give such notice within a reasonable time, he shall remain personally liable for the rent until he gives notice of the transfer.

(d) In every case of succession to a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, the person succeeding shall, upon taking possession, be personally liable for such rent from and after the death of the previous tenant.

Consequence of non-registration of transfer other than transfer by sale in execution.

49. If in any case of transfer of a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding, not being a transfer by sale in execution of a decree, application for registration of such transfer is not made and the proper fee tendered within three months as provided in Section 46, the transferrer shall remain liable for the rent, and the landlord shall not be bound to recognize the transfer. Such landlord shall, however, admit such transfer to registry after the expiry of the said period of three months upon payment of a fee of twenty per centum of the amount of one year's rent, provided that no such fee shall be less than ten rupees or more than one thousand rupees.

See Article 29 of the Digest.

Consequence of non registration of a succession, or of a transfer by execution sale, in case of a tenure or undertenure.

50. (a) If in any case of succession to a tenure or undertenure, or in any case of transfer thereof by sale in execution of a decree, application for registration of such succession or transfer is not made by all or any of the transferrees or successors, and the proper fee tendered within three months as provided in Section 46, the landlord shall be entitled to attach and hold possession of such tenure or undertenure.

Landlord may collect rents of tenure or undertenure attached, but must account for balance after deducting his own rent, &c.

(b) After the attachment of such tenure or undertenure, and until such succession or transfer is registered, such landlord shall be entitled to collect the rents from the undertenure-holders or ryots, and after deducting therefrom the cost of the attachment, the expenses of collection, and the rent due to himself, he shall hold the balance in trust for the person entitled by succession or by purchase at such sale.

If collections insufficient, person entitled by succession or purchase liable for the deficiency.

(c) If the rents so collected from the undertenure-holders or ryots are insufficient to discharge the cost of the attachment, the expenses of collection and the rent due to such landlord, the person so entitled by succession or purchase at the execution sale shall be liable for the deficiency, and such landlord may proceed against him for the recovery of the same, subject, however, to the provisions of Section 64.

Landlord may after three months admit tenure or undertenure to registry on payment of fine.

(d) Such landlord shall at any time after the expiry of the said period of three months admit to registry such succession or transfer by execution sale, upon payment of a fee of twenty per centum of the amount of one year's rent, provided that no such fee shall be less than ten rupees or more than one thousand rupees.

See Section 23 of Mr. Mackenzie's Bill

51. If in any case of succession to a holding or in any case of transfer thereof by sale in execution of a decree, such succession or transfer is not registered within three months as provided in Section 46, by all or any of the transferrees or successors, the landlord shall be entitled to attach and hold possession of such holding, and may cultivate it or let it for cultivation. Such landlord shall at any time after the expiry of the said period of three months admit to registry such succession or transfer by execution sale, upon payment of a fee of twenty per centum of the amount of one year's rent, provided that no such fee shall be less than ten rupees or more than one thousand rupees. If the person entitled by succession or by transfer by an execution sale fails to apply for registration and to tender the proper fee before the expiry of the Fuslee or Umlee or Bengalee year, whichever prevails in his district, next ensuing after such succession or transfer, such holding shall be at the absolute disposal of such landlord.

Consequence of non-registration of a succession, or of a transfer by execution sale, in case of a holding.

See Digest, page 29, note 4, and Article 28.
For the period of limitation for such suits, see the Third Schedule, Article 16.

52. If a landlord fails or refuses to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to a succession to, or transfer of, a tenure, under-tenure or occupancy holding, in the manner provided in Section 46, the transferrer in any case of transfer by private sale, gift, or exchange, or in any case the transferee or successor may sue such landlord in the Civil Court, and if no sufficient grounds are shown why such succession or transfer should not be registered, such Civil Court shall make a decree directing the registry thereof, and may further award damages in any case in which pecuniary loss has resulted from such neglect or refusal to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to such succession or transfer.

If landlord fails or refuses to register, civil suit will lie to compel him. Damages may be awarded where pecuniary loss has resulted.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 5.
Article 27 of the Digest.

53. (a) In every case in which a patni tenure is transferred by private sale, gift or exchange, or by sale in execution of a decree, the proprietor shall be entitled to demand from the transferree substantial security to the amount of half the yearly rent payable for such tenure, and such proprietor may refuse to register such transfer until such security has been tendered and accepted.

Transferree or devisee of Patni tenure to give security to the extent of half the yearly rent.

(b) If in any case of a transfer such security be required and be not furnished within three months from the date of such transfer, the proprietor shall be entitled to attach and hold possession of the tenure to the exclusion of the transferree until the said security shall be furnished. The provisions of Clauses (b) and (c) of Section 50 shall apply to every such attachment.

If security be not furnished within one month, proprietor may attach the tenure.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 6.
Article 28 of the Digest.

(c) If the security tendered by any transferree is rejected by the proprietor, and such transferree is dissatisfied with such rejection, he may make an application to the District Judge for an order directing such proprietor to receive such security and register such transfer. Such District Judge, if satisfied of the sufficiency of the security tendered, may make such order, or, if not so satisfied, may make an order rejecting such application. No appeal shall lie from any such order.

Application to District Judge, if security tendered be refused. District Judge may make order. No appeal from such order.

54. The Board of Revenue may prescribe for any class of landlords a form in which they shall maintain a Register of all successions to, or transfers of tenures, undertenures and occupancy holdings, the rent of which is payable to such landlords, and, may make, and when made, cancel or alter Rules for the maintenance of such Register; and may further provide a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for the breach of any such Rule. Every person concerned in any such succession or transfer shall be entitled, upon payment of a fee of four annas, to receive a copy of the entry relating thereto made in such Register. Such copy shall be signed by such landlord, or by the person who usually receives the rents on his behalf, and shall be sealed with such landlord's seal, when he commonly uses a seal.

Board of Revenue may prescribe form of Register of successions and transfers. Persons concerned entitled to copies of entries on payment of fee of 4 annas.

Consider, should this copy be made primâ facie evidence of the succession or transfer.

CHAPTER IX.—OF RENT, INSTALMENTS OF RENT, RECEIPTS FOR RENT, DEPOSITS OF RENTS, APPORTIONMENT OF RENT, AND HYPOTHECATION FOR RENT.

55. (a) Rent payable by a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder shall be paid upon such dates and in such instalments as are customary or may have been agreed upon between such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder and his landlord; and, in the absence of any such custom or agreement, upon the dates mentioned in Clause (b) of this Section, and in instalments fixed in the manner provided in the same clause.

Rent of tenure-holder or undertenure-holder payable in what instalments and upon what dates.

(b) Rent payable by a ryot shall be paid in four quarterly instalments which shall become due upon the first day of Asarh, the first day of Asin, the first day of Pous, and the first day of Cheit respectively. When any agreement has been made or any custom has existed before the commencement of this Act regulating the instalments in which such rent is payable,

Consider if this will suit Behar.

Rent of ryots payable in what instalments and on what dates.

(a) the amount of the instalment payable on the first day of Asarh shall be the total of the instalments payable according to such agreement or custom in the months Beisakh, Jeyt, and Asarh:

(b) the amount of the instalment payable on the first day of Asin shall be the total of the instalments payable according to such agreement or custom in the months Srabun, Bhadro, and Asin:

(c) the amount of the instalment payable on the first day of Pous shall be the total of the instalments payable according to such agreement or custom in the months Kartik, Aghun, and Pous; and

(d) the amount of the instalment payable on the first day of Cheit shall be the total of the instalments payable according to such agreement or custom in the months Magh, Falgun, and Cheit.

In the absence of any such agreement or custom, the portion of the whole rent which shall be paid for each quarterly instalment aforesaid shall be fixed by the Collector after such inquiry as he may deem necessary, and with reference to what he may find to be the most usual practice in the district. Notice of the portion of rent so made payable upon the first day of Asarh, the first day of Asin, the first day of Pous, and the first day of Cheit respectively, shall be given—by posting a copy of the Collector's order fixing such instalments at every police station in the district, and in each of the courts or offices of the following officials, that is to say, the District Judge, the Collector, the Magistrate, and all Moonsifs, Officers in charge of Sub-divisions and Sub-Registrars of Assurances in the district; and by proclaiming such order by beat of drum at the head-quarters of the district and of every sub-division therein, and in any other places which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may direct.

See Article 101 of the Digest.

What to be deemed an arrear of rent. Interest on arrears.

56. Every instalment of rent not paid or discharged before sunset of the day or date upon which it is payable according to the provisions of Section 55, shall be deemed to be an arrear of rent, and shall bear interest from such day or date up to the date of any decree that may be passed therefor at the rate of twelve per centum per annum; and such interest shall be decreed in every case in which any such arrear is recovered in any Civil Court, unless the tenant can show that he was prevented by causes beyond his control from paying or discharging such instalment upon the day or date upon which it was payable.

Receipts for Rent.

See Article 61 of the Digest and Section 34 of Mr. Mackenzie's Bill.

Tenant making payment to his landlord entitled to a receipt. What particulars to be inserted in such receipt. Landlord to keep counterpart.

57. (a) Every tenant who makes a payment to his landlord of rent, or of any money recoverable as rent, is entitled to obtain thereupon and without delay a written receipt for the amount paid by him. Such receipt shall specify the date of payment; the amount paid, or, where rent is paid in kind, the quantity of produce delivered; the tenure, undertenure, holding, or land in respect of which such rent or money is paid, or produce delivered; and the instalment and year on account of which such payment is admitted to have been made. The landlord shall retain a counterpart of such receipt, and similar particulars shall be inserted in such counterpart.

Tenant entitled to statement of account at close of the year. Landlord to keep counterpart.

(b) Every tenant shall be entitled to receive from his landlord upon the expiry of the Fusli or Umli or Bengali year, whichever prevails in his district, a statement of account showing the tenure, undertenure, holding, or land for which such tenant pays rent to such landlord; the annual rent payable therefor; the amount of rent in arrear at the beginning of such year; the payments made during the year; the portion of each payment credited to the rent of such year and the portion credited to the arrears of previous years; and the amount, if any, remaining unpaid at the close of such year. The landlord shall retain a counterpart of such statement, and similar particulars shall be inserted in such counterpart.

(c) Every landlord shall provide himself with forms of such receipts and statements of account, with the counterparts thereof attached. Such forms shall be bound together in books containing each not less than twenty-five such receipts or statements, which shall be numbered consecutively. Each receipt or statement and the counterpart thereof shall bear the same consecutive number.

Landlords to provide themselves with book-forms of such receipts and account-statements, and the counterparts thereof.

(d) Every landlord, who after six months from the commencement of this Act omits or refuses to give to any tenant on demand a receipt or statement of account containing the above particulars shall be liable to the penalty provided by Section 88.

Penalty for omitting or refusing to furnish receipt or account-statement in form prescribed.

Deposit of Rent in the Collectorate.

58. (1) Subject to the conditions specified in Section 59, a tenant may in any of the cases hereinafter mentioned deposit the rent payable by him in the Collectorate Treasury of the District, or, where there is a Sub-division, in the Treasury of the Sub-division, within which District or Sub-division the tenure, undertenure, holding, or land for and in respect of which such rent is payable, or any portion thereof is situate: that is to say—

Tenant may in what cases deposit in the Collectorate his rent which has become due.

See Article 99 of the Digest.

(a) when such rent was duly tendered by such tenant or his agent at the mal kachahri or other place where such rent was payable, and such rent so tendered was not accepted:

(b) when such rent is payable to coparceners jointly and such tenant was unable to obtain the joint receipt of such coparceners therefor, and no manager has been appointed by them or by the District Judge:

(c) when such tenant entertains a bonâ fide doubt as to who is entitled to receive such rent.

(2) Subject to the conditions and in the cases aforesaid, such rent may also be deposited with any Public Officer specially empowered by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to receive such deposits of the rents of tenures, undertenures, holdings, and land situate within a specified area. When a Public Officer has been so specially empowered, no deposit of the rent of any tenure, undertenure, holding or land situate within such area shall be received at any Collectorate or Sub-divisional Treasury.

Public officer may be specially empowered to receive deposits of rent.

59. Such deposit of rent shall be subject to the following conditions, that is to say—

Conditions on which rent may be deposited.

(a) Such rent shall be deposited, in any case in which a tender has been made, within ten clear days from the first date on which after such tender the Collectorate or Sub-divisional Treasury or Public Office, as it may be, is open, and in any other case within fifteen clear days from the first date on which after such rent fell due such Treasury or Public Office is open.

When the Collectorate or Sub-divisional Treasury or Public Office is closed on the tenth day, the deposit may be made on the day on which such Treasury or Public Office re-opens.

(b) Such deposit shall be made by presenting a written application and with such application a written declaration in, or as nearly as possible in, the form A in the Second Schedule annexed to this Act. Such declaration shall be made by the tenant, or, if he is not personally cognizant of the facts forming the subject-matter thereof, then by a person so personally cognizant.

(c) The rent deposited shall be the full amount of rent due by such tenant to such landlord in respect of the tenure, undertenure, holding or land mentioned in Section 58, and when a tender has been made, of the interest, if any, due at the time of such tender.

Receipt to be granted under his seal by Treasury or Public Officer for rent so deposited, and to be a valid acquittance.

60. The Officer in Charge of the Collectorate Treasury or Treasury of the Sub-division or such Public Officer as aforesaid shall receive any deposit of rent made under any of the circumstances specified in Section 58 and in compliance with the conditions mentioned in Section 59, and shall give a receipt for the same under his official seal. Such receipt shall be and operate as a full acquittance for the rent payable by such tenant and deposited as aforesaid, in the same manner and to the same extent as if such money had been received

(a) in case (a) of Section 58, by the person to whom such rent was tendered;

(b) in case (b) of Section 58 by the coparceners jointly; or

(c) in case (c) of Section 58, by the claimants jointly or by the claimant entitled to the receipt of such rent.

Provision for service of notice is made in a general section applicable to service of all notices—See section 159.

Notice of the deposit to be given to the persons entitled, or claiming to be entitled, to the rent:

61. (a) The Officer in Charge of the Collectorate Treasury or the Treasury of the Sub-division or such Public Officer as aforesaid shall forthwith have posted in a conspicuous place in his office a notification of such deposit, addressed, according to the purport of the application made by the depositor and the declaration therewith presented, to the person entitled to receive such rent or to the coparceners or claimants aforesaid. If no application for payment is made under Clause (b) within fifteen days after the posting of such notification, such Officer shall within fifteen days after the expiry of the said fifteen days, cause a notice of such deposit to be served upon such person, or coparceners or claimants as aforesaid.

and rent deposited may upon their application be paid to such persons on their receipt or joint receipt, or receipt of duly appointed agent.

(b) Such rent so deposited may, upon an application being made to this effect and after deducting the cost of serving any notice served under Clause (a), be paid (1) to such person entitled to the same, or (2) to such coparceners upon their joint receipt, or, if a common manager be appointed on their behalf by themselves or by the District Judge, to such common manager, or (3) to such claimants upon their joint receipt, or to any of them who has obtained a decree declaring or establishing his title. Any person to whom payment may be made in accordance with these provisions may receive such payment through a duly authorized agent.

Refund to depositor or payment at joint request of him and landlord.

(c) If no payment be made under Clause (b) for a period of three years from the date of such deposit, the amount deposited may be repaid to the depositor upon his application and on his giving back the receipt mentioned in Section 60. Such amount may at any time within such period of three years be paid, on the return of such receipt and upon the joint application of the depositor and of the person or persons entitled to payment under Clause (b), in any manner requested in such application.

Apportionment of Rent.

Apportionment of rent in what cases.

62. When two or more persons become separately entitled to separate portions of an area of land which forms the subject of a separate tenancy, and such portions of such area have been or can be divided by metes and bounds, such persons shall be entitled to have such rent apportioned, and after its apportionment to receive separately the shares of rent apportioned upon such portions respectively.

Apportionment how to be made.

63. Such apportionment may be made by mutual agreement between such persons and the tenant by whom such rent is payable. If such persons and such tenant cannot agree amongst themselves as to the manner in which such apportionment shall be made, the Civil Court may, upon the application of any such persons, or of such tenant, proceed to make such apportionment, and may to this end direct a measurement of the whole or any portion of such land.

Hypothecation for Rent.

New

Every tenure, undertenure, and holding to be deemed hypothecated for its own rent, which shall be a first charge thereupon.

64. Every tenure, undertenure, and occupancy holding shall be deemed to be hypothecated for the rent thereof, and such rent shall be a first charge thereupon. When such rent is in arrear, the landlord shall not be entitled to resort to any other process for the recovery thereof, until he has first brought such tenure, undertenure, or holding to sale either in a summary manner or in execution of a decree for such rent, as he is by this Act empowered in that behalf.

CHAPTER X.—OF COPARCENERS.

See Article 16 of the Digest.

District Judge may direct coparceners, who disagree, to be served with notice to show cause why they should not appoint a common manager.

65. (1) When coparceners, who jointly own an estate, tenure or undertenure, disagree as to the joint management thereof, and in consequence there has ensued or is likely to ensue,

(a) inconvenience to the public, or

(b) injury to private rights,

the District Judge may, upon the application in case (a) of the Collector, and in case (b) of any one having an interest in such estate, tenure or undertenure, direct a notice to be served upon all such coparceners, calling upon them to show cause why they should not appoint a common manager.

(2) If such coparceners fail to show such cause within one month after service of such notice, or if they show cause which in the opinion of the District Judge is not sufficient, such District Judge may make an order directing such coparceners to appoint a common manager. A copy of such order shall be served upon any coparcener who did not appear before it was made.

If no cause, or cause not sufficient, is shown, District Judge may make an order directing the appointment of a manager.

66. (1) If such coparceners do not within one month after the making of such order, or, where such order has been so served, within one month after such service, appoint a common manager and report such appointment for the information of the District Judge, such District Judge may,

If such order be not obeyed, District Judge may appoint manager.
Removal of manager so appointed.

(a) direct that such estate, tenure, or undertenure be managed by the Court of Wards in any case in which such Court of Wards assents to undertake the management thereof: or,

(b) in any case, appoint a manager, in which event such coparceners shall be bound by such appointment.

(2) The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may appoint a person for any district to manage all estates, tenures, and undertenures to which the provisions of this Section apply, and when any such appointment has been made, such person shall be appointed manager under sub-clause (b) of Clause (1) by the District Judge.

(3) In any case in which the Court of Wards undertakes the management of an estate, tenure or undertenure under sub-clause (a) of Clause (1), so much of the provisions of The Court of Wards Act, 1879, as relate to the management of immovable property shall apply to such management.

"The Court of Wards Act, 1879" to apply to management by Court of Wards.

67. In any case in which a manager is appointed under sub-clause (b) of Clause (1) of Section 66, the District Judge may settle and from time to time alter the remuneration of such manager, which may be a fixed salary or a percentage of the monies collected by him as manager. Such manager shall give such security for the proper discharge of his duties as to the District Judge shall appear reasonable and sufficient. For the purposes of management he shall have and be entitled to exercise the same powers which the coparceners jointly might but for his appointment have exercised. He shall keep regular accounts, and shall allow the coparceners or any of them to inspect and take copies of such accounts. He shall be removable by the order of the District Judge and not otherwise, and may be removed upon the application of the Collector, or any person interested in the estate, tenure, or undertenure.

Salary of manager. Manager to give security. Powers of manager. Duty to keep accounts. Removal.

68. The District Judge may at any time direct that the management be restored to the coparceners, if he is satisfied that such management will be conducted by them jointly without inconvenience to the public or injury to private rights.

Management may be restored to coparceners, if prepared to conduct it properly.

69. Except in the cases hereinafter excepted, rent payable to coparceners shall be paid upon the joint receipt of all such coparceners, or, where a manager has been appointed by them or by the District Judge, upon the receipt of such manager; and all such coparceners must be made parties to any suit brought for the recovery of arrears of any such rent. Any such suit brought by one or more coparceners and not by all, or to which all have not been made parties,[a] shall be dismissed with costs.

Rent to be paid to coparceners on their joint receipt or on that of a manager. One coparcener may not sue for his share of rent separately.

See Article 60 of the Digest.

Exception 1.—When an agreement has been made between a tenant and one or more of several coparceners with the consent of the other or others of them, that the share of rent to which such one or more coparceners is or are entitled shall be paid directly to him or them, such share of rent shall be so payable and recoverable.

Exception 1—where tenant has contracted to pay a share of the rent separately.

Exception 2.—When a tenant has usually paid to one or more of several coparceners, without objection from the other or others of them, the share of rent to which such one or more coparceners is or are entitled, such share of rent shall be so payable and recoverable.

Exception 2—where tenant has been in the habit of paying a share of the rent separately.

Exception 3.—When a coparcener is unable to obtain his share of the rent payable by a tenant in consequence of collusion between such tenant and the other coparceners, he may sue to recover his share of rent separately, and shall in such suit make such other coparceners defendants.

Exception 3—where coparcener cannot get his share of rent in consequence of collusion.

70. A coparcener may not, otherwise than conjointly with his other coparceners or through a manager appointed by all the coparceners or by the District Judge, bring a tenure to summary sale under the provisions of Chapter XVI, or measure lands in the possession or occupation of the tenants of such coparceners, or enhance the rents of such tenants, or, where a suit is necessary to effect such measurement or enhancement, maintain such suit without making such other coparceners parties thereto.

One coparcener may not bring tenure to summary sale, or measure the lands or enhance the rents of the tenants.

Chapter XI.—Of some Miscellaneous rights of Landlords and Tenants.

71. Proprietors are competent to grant leases, for any period even to perpetuity, and in any form and at any rent most convenient to the contracting parties and most conducive to their respective interests, of land which was not at the time of the Permanent Settlement held by tenure-holders, undertenure-holders or ryots, or which being so held has since that time come into the khas or actual possession of such proprietors, subject, however, to the other provisions of this Act and to the following conditions, and not otherwise:—

Proprietors competent to grant leases for any period, in any form and at any rent.

(1)—All engagements contracted with tenants shall be specific as to the conditions thereof and as to the amount of rent reserved.

Conditions.

[a] The practice in India is to make pro formâ defendants those persons who have co-existent rights with the plaintiff to sue, but who refuse to join as plaintiffs, the fact of this refusal being stated in the plaint. As to the practice in courts of equity in England, which has not been materially altered by the Rules under the Judicature Act, see Daniell's Chancery Practice, Vol. I, pp. 179, 186; see sections 26 and 30 of The Code of Civil Procedure, and consider "with the permission of the Court" in the latter section.

(2)—All impositions upon the tenants under the denomination of abwab, mahtut, and other appellations in addition to the actual rent shall be deemed illegal and shall subject the person imposing them to the penalty provided by Section 87; and all stipulations and reservations for the payment of such shall be null and void.

(3)—No person contracting with a proprietor or employed by him in the management of the collections shall take charge of the lands or collections without written authority signed by such proprietor.

A proprietor may make a grant of land free of rent, but such grant shall be binding only upon the grantor or his heirs or any person claiming through him or them.

72. A landlord may not—

Landlord may not impose abwabs on his tenants;

(a)—under any pretence whatever, impose on his tenants any new cess or other payment not taken into account in fixing the Government revenue, or not sanctioned by law or by ancient custom approved by the Revenue Authorities; or compel the attendance of his tenants, or enforce payment of rent otherwise than according to law.

(b)—or compel the attendance of his tenants for the adjustment of their rents or for any other purpose; or adopt any means of compulsion for enforcing payment of rent other than the means provided by this Act.

Landlord bound to put and maintain tenant in possession.

73. A landlord is bound to maintain his tenant in the peaceable and quiet possession and enjoyment of the tenure, undertenure, holding or land in respect of which the relation of landlord and tenant exists between them, so long as such relation exists. This duty extends only to interruption or disturbance by the landlord or any one claiming under or paramount to him. It does not extend to interruption or disturbance by third parties.

In the case of a new letting the landlord is bound, upon the tenant's request, to put him in possession of the property demised.

Lease may not be granted for term exceeding lessor's interest.

74. A person having an interest in land is not competent to grant a valid lease of such land for a term exceeding his own interest.

Lease for term exceeding lessor's interest valid to the extent of such interest and voidable as to excess merely.

When a lease has been granted for a term exceeding the lessor's interest, such lease is valid to the extent of such interest and is voidable only as to the excess: provided that, if such lessor after granting such lease acquire such excess, such lease shall be valid for such excess between such lessor and such lessee and persons claiming under them or either of them respectively.

If a person grants a lease of land in which he has no interest to a lessee who obtains possession of such land under such lease, and if such person afterwards acquires an interest in such land, such lease shall be valid to the extent of such after-acquired interest between such lessor and such lessee and persons claiming under them or either of them respectively.

Lease granted by person having no interest valid to extent of interest subsequently acquired.

75. Subject to the provisions of Section 70 and if not restrained from so doing by express engagement with the occupants of the land, a landlord is entitled to make a general survey and measurement of all land comprised in any estate, tenure, undertenure or holding, of the rents of which he is in receipt, and is further entitled to enter upon such land for the purpose of making such survey and measurement.

Landlord entitled to make general survey and measurement, unless restrained by contract.

Illustrations.

(a)—A, a proprietor, grants a portion of his estate in patni to B, the patni rent payable to A being fixed at Rs. 500. The ryots, as a necessary consequence, pay their rents to B. Both A and B are entitled to make a general survey and measurement of the lands comprised in the patni lease.

(b)—A is the proprietor of an estate. B holds lakheraj land situated within the local limits of A's estate. A is not entitled to measure B's lakheraj land.

76. (a) In any case in which a measurement of land is made by order of a Civil Court or of a Collector in any suit between landlord and tenant, such measurement shall be made according to the Government measure of 14,400 square feet to one standard bigha. If the rights of the parties to such suit are regulated by any different local measure depending upon a standard pole of the pergunnah in which the land is situate, the Government measure shall be converted into such local measure for the purposes of such suit.

Measurement in suits between landlords and tenants to be made according to Government standard of measurement.

Conversion into local measure, when necessary.

(b) If any dispute as to the length of such standard pole arises in any suit under this Act, the Collector shall in any suit before himself, or in any suit before a Civil Court on a reference made for this purpose by such Civil Court, determine the proper length thereof. An appeal shall lie from the Collector's decision to the District Judge. If no such appeal be preferred, the decision of the Collector shall be final and conclusive.

Determination of the length of the standard pole in case of dispute.

77. (a)—A tenant is bound to use the land which he holds as tenant in a reasonable manner for the purpose for which it was let or has been customarily used. A ryot may not without the consent of his landlord materially alter the condition of the land held by him, so as to render it permanently unfit for agricultural or horticultural purposes: provided that any ryot may without such consent make any of the improvements mentioned in Section 29.

Tenant may not permanently alter condition of the land. Proviso as to improvements.

(b)—A ryot is entitled, any custom to the contrary notwithstanding, to cut down and appropriate trees on his holding planted by himself or by any ryot from whom such holding was derived by public or private sale, gift, devise, or inheritance.

Ryot entitled to cut trees planted by himself or his predecessor in title.

Tenant not liable to transferree of landlord's interest for rent paid to former landlord without notice of the transfer.

78. No tenant shall, in any case in which his landlord's interest has been transferred, be liable to the transferree for rent which became due after the transfer and was paid to the landlord whose interest was so transferred, unless such transferree has given notice of the transfer to such tenant.

Relation of landlord and tenant in what cases determined by what occurrences.

79. Subject to the other provisions of this Act, a tenancy is determined as between the parties thereto by any of the following occurrences in the following cases respectively, that is to say—

(1)—in the case of a lease for a term—by the expiry of such term, unless the tenant holds over without objection made by the landlord or unless the tenant has a right to the possession of the land otherwise than by virtue of the lease:

By expiry of term—exception.

(2)—in the case of a lease by a landlord whose interest is for a limited time only and who has no power to create a tenancy extending beyond the period of such interest—by the expiry of the term of such interest and the determination of such landlord's possession, unless the tenant has a right to the possession of the land otherwise than by virtue of the lease:

By determination of landlord's limited interest.

Exception.

(3)—in the case of a ryot holding otherwise than under a lease for a definite term—by relinquishing the whole of the land held or cultivated by him as one holding: provided he has given notice of his intention in writing to the person entitled to the rent of such land or to his authorized agent—in districts or parts of districts where the Fusli or Umli year prevails, in or before the mouth of Jeyt—and in districts or parts of districts where the Bengalee year prevails, in or before the month of Poos—of the year preceding that in which the relinquishment is to have effect.

By relinquishment of land by ryot after notice given.

If such ryot has not given such notice and the land is not let to any other person, he shall continue liable for the rent of such land.

If the person entitled to such rent, or his agent, refuses to receive such notice, and to sign a receipt for the same, such ryot may make an application to the Court within the jurisdiction of which the lands or any portion of them are situate, and such Court shall thereupon cause the notice to be served on such person or his agent:

(4)—in the case of a non-transferable holding—by abandonment, when the tenant, having ceased to cultivate the land or pay rent therefor, has been absent from the neighbourhood for a year, and the landlord elects to treat the tenancy as determined :

By abandonment.

By ejectment of ryot for non-payment of rent.

(5)—in the case of a non-transferable holding for which an arrear of rent is due at the end of the Bengali year or at the end of the month of Jeyt of the Fusli or Umli or Willayutti year—by ejectment from the land in respect of which such arrear is due.

No ryot shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree or order of the Civil Court. The right to eject for non-payment of the rent of any one year shall be deemed to have been waived by the receipt of rent for a subsequent year :

By ejectment of farmer or lease-holder for non-payment of rent.

(6)—in the case of a farmer or other lease-holder not having a permanent or transferable interest in the land, when an arrear of rent is due and unpaid—by cancelment of the lease and ejectment of the lease-holder.

No such lease shall be cancelled and no such lease-holder shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree or order of the Civil Court :

By notice to quit in certain cases.

(7)—in the case of a ryot not having a right of occupancy and not being such a ryot as is mentioned in Section 26, or of a tenant for a term holding over after the expiry of his term with the express or implied consent of his landlord—by a notice to quit as provided in Section 33.

Explanation —The institution of a suit for ejectment is not equivalent to a notice to quit.

By disclaimer when a tenant disclaims his landlord's title and sets up an adverse title.

(8)—in the case of any tenant—by disclaimer when in a suit to which his landlord is a party the tenant disclaims such landlord's title and sets up an adverse title in himself or another by matter in writing or reduced to writing by the Court under the provisions of this Act or of The Code of Civil Procedure, and such landlord elects within six months to treat such disclaimer as a forfeiture of the tenancy; provided that no such forfeiture by disclaimer shall be allowed in any case in which such tenant having been let into possession by such landlord can show that such landlord's title had expired or been defeated or annulled at the time at which such disclaimer was made : or, not having been let into possession by such landlord, can show that he admitted his title as landlord under a bonâ fide misapprehension or mistake.

Illustration.

B, having taken from A, a proprietor, an ijárah of an estate from the 1st Baisakh 1271 to the last day of Cheit 1288 B.S., lets twenty bighas of land, situate in such estate, to C, a ryot, in 1272 and puts C in possession. The term of the ijárah being about to expire, A in Cheit 1288 gives notice to C, not to pay to B any of the rent for 1289. B sues C for the first instalment of the rent of 1289, and C in this suit denies B's title as landlord. B having subsequently obtained from A a ten years' extension of the ijárah seeks to eject C for so denying his title. C having shown the above facts, is not liable to be ejected.

(9)—when the landlord's estate, tenure or undertenure is sold for arrears of revenue or rent under any law for the time being in force which entitles the purchaser of such estate, tenure, or undertenure to avoid a lease or determine a tenancy, and such purchaser elects to avoid such lease or determine such tenancy.

By sale for arrears of revenue or rent when purchaser elects to determine.

Explanation.—When the relation of landlord and tenant exists between two persons in respect of any property, the non-payment of rent for such property by such tenant to such landlord shall not of itself determine such relation.

Mere non-payment of rent does not determine relation of landlord and tenant.

80. When a ryot is ejected in execution of a decree from land upon which there are, at the time of such ejectment, growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth, which such ryot, but for such ejectment, would have been entitled to reap or gather, such ryot shall, notwithstanding such ejectment, be entitled to reap or gather such crops or products, and may use the land for the purpose of tending, reaping, gathering, and removing the same; and in the event of his so doing he shall be liable to pay a reasonable rent for the time during which he uses the land as aforesaid:

See Section 32.

Ryot ejected from land entitled to the away-going crops, and to enter on land to remove them.

provided that the landlord may purchase such crops or products at a fair valuation if, when he applies for execution of his decree, he gives notice of his intention to do so. In any case in which the landlord and the ryot cannot agree as to such valuation, the Court may, upon the application of either of them, determine the value of such crops or products, and the order so determining such value shall have the force of a decree.

Landlord may, if he wishes, purchase such crops or products at a valuation to be made by Court in case of dispute.

Chapter XII.—Of Special Provisions for Behar

81. Every ryot, who on the day of is in occupation of land other than zerat land, and has occupied the same continuously for the three years next preceding such date, has a right of occupancy in such land which he has so occupied for three years continuously, if, during each of the twelve years next preceding such aforesaid date, he has occupied any land other than zerat

Ryot has right of occupancy in land held for three years, if he held any land in same estate for twelve years previously.

land in the estate in which such first mentioned land is included, or in any estate, which with such estate at any previous time formed a single estate.

Explanation :—"Zerat" land is land, the cultivation of which has been carried on for twelve years continuously, wholly on behalf of the proprietor and at his sole risk, with his own stock, or by his servants or by hired labourers, or partly by some and partly by others of these persons.

Ryot to have right of occupancy in land received in exchange from his landlord for land in which he had a right of occupancy.

82. When the whole or any portion of the land in which a ryot has a right of occupancy is given by him with his consent to his landlord in exchange for other land, forming a portion of the same estate, tenure, or undertenure, such ryot shall have a right of occupancy in the land received by him in exchange therefor.

Rent payable in kind not to exceed half the gross produce, and in the absence of any express stipulation to be half the gross produce.

83. When rent is payable by delivering to the landlord a certain proportion of the actual gross produce, such proportion shall in no case exceed one-half, and in any case in which there is no written agreement specifying a different proportion, shall be presumed to be one-half.

When rent is payable in kind or in money value of a portion of the crop, landlord or tenant may, in case of dispute, petition Collector to depute an officer to make an award.

84. (a) When rent is payable by delivering a certain proportion of the actual gross produce of the land, or by paying the equivalent money value thereof determined by an estimate or appraisement of the standing crop, or by some similar proceeding, and in order to settle the quantity of produce to be delivered, or determine the equivalent money value to be paid, it is necessary that both parties—that is to say, the landlord and the tenant—should be present together upon the land either in person or by agent, then, if such parties cannot amicably arrange to be present together upon the land for such purpose as aforesaid, or if any dispute arises between such parties as to the settlement of the quantity of produce to be delivered or as to determining the equivalent money value to be paid, in any such case either of such parties may make an application to the Collector of the district that a proper officer may be deputed to settle the quantity of produce or determine the equivalent money value aforesaid, and to make an award accordingly.

Collector to depute an officer, whose award shall be binding, unless set aside by the Civil Court.

(b) The Collector shall, upon any such application being made to him, depute a proper officer for such purpose. Such officer shall give to both parties reasonable notice of the time and place at which he intends to proceed to make his award, and shall at such time and place proceed to make such award accordingly, and may direct the costs thereof to be paid by the party whom he finds to be in the wrong. If either party, having received notice, fails to attend, he shall nevertheless be bound by the award made in his absence. The award when made may be acted upon at once. Either party, if dissatisfied, may institute a suit in the Civil Court to set aside such award. If no such suit is instituted, such award shall be final.

Danabandi or appraisement papers to be deposited in the Collector's office within fifteen days after the appraisement.

85. When the rent payable for land is the equivalent money value of a fixed proportion of the actual gross produce thereof, and such equivalent money value is determined by an estimate or appraisement (danabandi) of the standing crop or by some similar proceeding, the danabandi or appraisement papers shall, within fifteen days after the making of the appraisement, be lodged in the office of the Collector of the district.

Ryot or landlord entitled to have rent, payable in kind or in equivalent value of share of gross produce, commuted to an annual money rent. Principle upon which such commutation should be made Procedure for making.

86. Every ryot having a right of occupancy or the landlord of such ryot shall be entitled to have rent payable in the manner mentioned in Section 84 commuted into an annual money rent payable without direct reference to the crops produced at each harvest, but liable to enhancement under the provisions of this Act.[a] Such annual money rent shall be fixed according to the prevailing money rent payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity, or, if no such prevailing rate obtains in the vicinity, then according to the average value of the landlord's share of the actual gross produce for the preceding five years, a reasonable deduction being made therefrom in consideration of the whole risk of cultivation being taken by the ryot.

The provisions of Chapter XV as to proceedings before the Collector shall, so far as they are relevant, be applicable to the settlement of annual money rents under this Section.

[a] In effecting this commutation we get a corn rent—a rent reserved in produce; and it would be easy to arrange for future enhancement of the commuted money rent by declaring that, after ten years, such money rent may be enhanced to the average price during these ten years of the same amount of produce.

Chapter XIII.—Of Damages and Penalties.

Damages for exaction by landlord from tenant of sum in excess of the rent payable.

87. Every tenant, from whom any sum of money or any portion of the produce of his land is illegally exacted by his landlord in excess of the rent lawfully payable by such tenant, shall be entitled to recover from such landlord such sum so exacted together with damages not exceeding double such sum.

See section 67, clause (d).

Damages recoverable for withholding receipts for rent.

88. Every tenant, from whom a receipt is withheld for any sum of money paid by him as rent, shall be entitled to recover from the person receiving such rent damages not exceeding double the amount so paid.

Damages for extorting payment of rent by duress

89. If payment of rent, whether the same be legally due or not, is extorted from any tenant by illegal confinement or other duress, such tenant shall be entitled to recover such damages, as may be deemed a reasonable compensation for the injury done him by such extortion. An award of compensation under this Section shall not bar or affect any penalty or punishment to which the person practising such extortion may be subject by law.

The Court may award damages not exceeding 25 per cent on rent not paid without reasonable or probable cause.

90. If in any suit brought for the recovery of arrears of rent, it shall appear to the Court that the defendant has, without reasonable or probable cause, neglected or refused to pay the amount of rent due by him, and that he has not, on or before the date upon which such rent was payable according to the provisions of Section 55, tendered such amount to the plaintiff or his duly authorized agent, or in case of the refusal of the plaintiff or such agent to receive the amount so tendered, has not before the institution of the suit deposited such amount in the Collectorate as provided in Section 58, it shall be lawful for the Court to award to such plaintiff, in addition to the amount decreed for rent and costs, such damages, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the amount of rent decreed, as such Court may think fit. Such damages, when awarded, as well as the amount of rent and costs decreed in the suit, shall carry interest at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date of decree until payment or realization thereof.

Explanation.—The Court may not give, in addition to damages, interest before decree upon the rent decreed.

The Court may award compensation not exceeding 25 per cent. on amount claimed to defendant improperly sued for rent.

91. If in any suit brought for the recovery of arrears of rent it shall appear to the Court that the plaintiff has instituted such suit against the defendant without reasonable or probable cause or that the defendant had duly deposited in the Collectorate, in accordance with the provisions of Section 58, the full amount which the Court shall find to have been due to the plaintiff on the date of such deposit, it shall be lawful for such Court to award to the defendant, by way of compensation, such sum, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the whole amount claimed by the plaintiff, as such Court may think fit; and such sum, with interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum until payment or realization thereof, shall be recoverable from the plaintiff in like manner as sums ordered to be paid by decrees of such Court.

CHAPTER XIV.—OF LIMITATION.

See Articles 76, 77, 78 and 79 of the Digest; and Section 4 of The Indian Limitation Act, XV of 1877.

Suits and applications in Third Schedule to be instituted and made within the time there prescribed; otherwise to be dismissed.

92. Subject to the provisions of Section 93, the suits, appeals, and applications specified in the Third Schedule annexed to this Act shall be instituted and made within the time prescribed in such Schedule for each of them respectively; and every such suit or appeal instituted, and application made, after the period of limitation so prescribed shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been pleaded.

Portions of the Indian Limitation Act applicable to such suits and applications.

93. The following portions of The Indian Limitation Act, 1877, shall apply to the suits, appeals, and applications mentioned in Section 92, that is to say—of Part II, the Explanation to Section 4 and Section 5; and the whole of Part III.

See Explanation to Article 78 of the Digest and the cases noted opposite thereto.

Computation of time where, until termination of litigation as to their mutual rights, landlord could not previously have sued tenant for rent.

94. When the result of litigation between any persons is such that they stand in the relation of landlord and tenant to each other and have stood in this relation while such litigation was pending, but, until their mutual rights were finally determined by such litigation, such landlord was unable to sue such tenant for rent, the period of limitation for suing for any such rent shall be computed from the termination of such litigation.

PART II.

THE PROCEDURE IN SUITS BETWEEN LANDLORDS AND TENANTS.

CHAPTER XV.—OF PROCEEDINGS TO ENHANCE THE RENT PAYABLE IN MONEY BY RYOTS HAVING A RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY, OR BY TENURE-HOLDERS OR UNDERTENURE-HOLDERS.

95. (a) A landlord who has a permanent transferable interest in land held by a ryot having a right of occupancy therein may, at his option and as in this Chapter hereafter provided, proceed in the Civil Court or before the Collector to enhance the rent of such ryot upon any one or more of the first three of the grounds specified in Section 22, and may proceed before the Collector only to enhance such rent upon the fourth of such grounds.

Landlord having permanent transferable interest, to proceed before what tribunal for enhancement of rent.

(b) A landlord, who has a farming or lease-hold interest in land held by a ryot having a right of occupancy therein, may proceed in the Civil Court, as in this Chapter hereafter provided, to enhance the rent of such ryot upon any one or more of the first three of the grounds specified in Section 22; and, if a period of not less than ten years of such interest remains unexpired, but not otherwise, he may proceed before the Collector to enhance such rent upon the third and fourth of such grounds or either of them.

Landlord having a farming or lease-hold interest, to proceed before what tribunal for enhancement of rent.

This procedure does away with the notice of enhancement and all the difficulties and technicalities connected therewith.

I.—Proceedings in the Civil Courts.

96. A landlord intending to proceed in the Civil Court to enhance the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy upon any one or more of the first, second, or third grounds specified in Section 22, shall present a plaint to such Court or such Officer as it appoints in this behalf. Such plaint shall, in order to affect the rent of the following year, be presented, (a) in districts or parts of districts in which the Fusli or Umli year prevails, in or before the month of Baisakh; or (b) in districts or parts of districts in which the Bengali year prevails, in or before the month of Aughan.

Enhancement proceedings in the Civil Court to be commenced by plaint. Such plaint when to be filed, if intended to affect the rent of the following year.

97. Such plaint shall set forth the ground or grounds specified in Section 22, upon which enhancement is claimed in respect of each holding mentioned therein.

Plaint to set forth the grounds of enhancement.

(1) When enhancement is claimed on the first of such grounds, the plaint shall further state—

(a) the quantity of land held by the ryot, and, when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class;

(b) the rate of rent actually paid for such land or each class of such land; and

(c) the alleged prevailing rate which the plaintiff claims instead of the rate actually paid.

Particulars to be given when enhancement is claimed on the first ground.

(2) When enhancement is claimed on the second of such grounds, the plaint shall further state—

(a) the quantity of land for which rent was previously

Particulars to be given when enhancement is claimed on the second ground.

paid by the ryot, and, when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class;

(b) the amount of rent paid for such land and the rate or rates at which such rent was calculated for each class;

(c) the quantity of land in excess of that specified under (a) for which the plaintiff claims to receive additional rent;

(d) the amount of additional rent claimed for the land specified under (c); and (e) the total rent claimed, that is to say, the total of (b) and (d).

Particulars to be given when enhancement is claimed on the third ground.

(3) When enhancement is claimed on the third of such grounds, the plaint shall further state—

(a) the quantity of land held by the ryot, and, when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class;

(b) the amount of rent previously paid for such land, and the rate or rates at which such rent was calculated;

(c) the cause and extent of the alleged increase in the productive powers of the land; and

(d) the enhanced rent or rates of rent which the plaintiff claims to receive in consequence of such increase.

The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to suits for enhancement brought in the Civil Courts.

98. (a) The Civil Court to which any such plaint has been presented shall proceed to deal therewith in accordance with the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure, and all the proceedings of such Court in the suit, so instituted by the presentation of such plaint, shall be governed by the provisions of the said Code.

Civil Court to decide all questions fairly raised between the parties

(b) Such Court shall have full power to decide upon the landlord's right to enhance and upon the fairness of the enhanced rent demanded, and may declare the landlord entitled to such enhanced rent or to any less rent which may be found to be fair and equitable, and shall decide all questions directly raised between the parties so as to avoid, as far as may be possible, a multiplicity of suits. In any case in which the Court decrees enhancement of rent, such enhancement shall take effect from the commencement of the Fusli or Umli or Bengali year following that in which the plaint was presented to the Court.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues to enhance the rent of B, a ryot having a right of occupancy, on the first of the grounds specified in Section 22, alleging that B holds 20 bighas of land at one rupee per bigha and pays a rent of Rs. 20; that the prevailing rate, payable by the class of ryots to which B belongs for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity, is one rupee and eight annas per bigha; and therefore that B's rent should be enhanced to Rs. 30. B pleads that he holds 15 bighas only, and denies that such prevailing rate is more than the one rupee per bigha which he pays. A fails to prove that the prevailing rate is one rupee and eight annas. The Court shall nevertheless decide whether B holds 15 or 20 bighas, and whether his rent is Rs. 15 or Rs. 20.

(b) A sues to enhance the rent of B, a ryot having a right of occupancy, on the second of the grounds specified in Section 22, alleging that B previously held ten bighas of land at one rupee and eight annas per bigha, that eight more bighas have been recently added by alluvion to B's holding; and that B should pay a rent of Rs. 27 instead of Rs. 15 which he previously paid. B denies that any land has been added to his holding by alluvion, and alleges that he previously held not ten, but fifteen bighas, and that the rate of rent was one rupee, not one rupee and eight annas. There is no satisfactory evidence of alluvion. The Court shall nevertheless try whether B previously held ten or fifteen bighas, and whether the rate of rent was one rupee or one rupee and eight annas.

(c) A sues to enhance the rent of B, a ryot having a right of occupancy, on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by B have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of B in consequence of the construction by Government of a canal which has drained and improved B's land. B denies that the productive powers of his land have increased, and alleges that his land is not liable to enhancement as it is held at a rate, which has not been changed since the time of the Permanent Settlement. A fails to prove the alleged increase of the productive powers of the land. The Court shall nevertheless try whether B's land is held at a rate of rent which has not been changed since the time of the Permanent Settlement, and so is protected from enhancement.

II.—Proceedings before the Collector.

Application may be made to Collector for enhancement or settlement of rents.

99. A landlord, who intends to proceed before the Collector to enhance the rent of ryots having a right of occupancy on any one or more of the four grounds specified in Section 22, or who in the case mentioned in Section 112 desires to ascertain the particulars therein mentioned, shall make an application for this purpose to the Collector of the district, in which are situate the lands, or any portion of the lands, to the rent of which he is entitled.

Jurisdiction where lands situate in two or more districts.

When the lands are situate in two or more districts included in the division of the same Commissioner, such Commissioner, and when the lands are situate in two or more districts not included in the division of the same Commissioner, the Board of Revenue may, for any reason which appears sufficient, direct that such application be transferred to any other Collector within whose Collectorate any portion of such lands is situate; and such latter Collector shall in any such case have power to proceed as if such application had in the first instance been made to himself.

A landlord, who has made an application under this Section, is in this Chapter hereafter termed The Applicant. The provisions of Section 168 as to the signature and verification of a plaint shall be applicable to every such application.

Applicant may ask for—
1. A Table of Rates; or
2. An Enhanced Jamabandi; or
3. A Settlement Jamabandi.

100. The Applicant may in his application pray that the Collector shall prepare for the estate, tenure or undertenure, in respect of which the application is made, (1) a Table of Rates; or (2) an Enhanced Jamabandi; or (3) a Settlement Jamabandi.

Meaning of a "Table of Rates."

A "Table of Rates" means a table or schedule which exhibits the classes of land in an estate, tenure or undertenure, according to the classification usual in the locality, and the rates of rent payable for each class. When enhancement is claimed on the first or second of the grounds specified in Section 22, such Table shall exhibit the prevailing rates payable immediately before its preparation. When enhancement is claimed on the third or fourth of the said grounds, such Table shall exhibit such prevailing rates, and shall further exhibit the enhanced rates allowed by the Collector upon such grounds respectively.

Meaning of a "Jamabandi."

A "Jamabandi" means a table or schedule which exhibits the names of the ryots in an estate, tenure or undertenure; the quantity of land or, when such land consists of different classes, the quantity of each class held by each ryot; the rate of rent previously payable for each class of land; the total rent payable by each ryot for the total land of each class held by such ryot; and the grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

Meaning of an "Enhanced Jamabandi."

An "Enhanced Jamabandi" is a Jamabandi which further exhibits—

(a) when enhancement is allowed on the first of the grounds specified in Section 22—the prevailing rate of rent allowed for any class of lands instead of the rate previously payable; the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot:

(b) when enhancement is allowed on the second of such grounds—the additional land of each class proved to be in the possession of each ryot; the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot:

(c) when enhancement is allowed on the third or fourth of such grounds—the enhanced rate of rent allowed for each class of land; the new total rent payable, in consequence, for all the land of such class held by each ryot; and the new grand total of rent payable by each ryot.

Meaning of a "Settlement Jamabandi."

A "Settlement Jamabandi" is a Jamabandi prepared by the Collector upon the application of a landlord, who is unable to ascertain the ryots liable to pay rent to him, the rents payable by such ryots, or the plots of land in respect of which such rents are payable by each of such ryots.

A.—Proceedings to obtain a Table of Rates.

Applicant for Table of Rates to present with his application a copy of the Table according to which he claims to collect rents from occupancy ryots.

101. (a) When The Applicant prays that the Collector shall prepare a Table of Rates for the estate, tenure, or undertenure in respect of which the application is made, he shall with his application present a copy of the Table of Rates which he alleges to be fair and equitable, and according to which he claims to collect enhanced rents from ryots having a right of occupancy. He shall further distinctly specify in such application the grounds upon which he claims to enhance such rents; and, in the case of the third and fourth grounds specified in Section 22, the period at which such grounds came into operation.

(b) The Collector shall thereupon give notice to all such ryots in the estate, tenure, or undertenure, in respect of which the application is made, and shall by such notice call upon them to appear within one month and agree to the rates specified in such copy or state their objections, if any, to such rates.

Notice to be given to ryots to assent or object within one month.

102. (a) If within one month after the publication or service of such notice all the ryots, whose rents The Applicant seeks to enhance, assent to the rates so specified, the Collector shall prepare a Table of Rates accordingly, and the provisions of Section 105 shall be applicable thereto. If all such ryots do not assent to the rates so specified, or if they or any of them appear and object to such rates, the Collector shall proceed to prepare a Table of Rates for the estate, tenure, or undertenure, in respect of which the application has been made. Upon the conclusion of his proceedings he shall draw up a statement thereof, and shall therein set forth the grounds upon which he allows or disallows the rates claimed by The Applicants, or any of them; or allows any lower rates in substitution thereof.

If ryots do not assent to such rates, or if they or any of them object thereto, Collector to proceed to prepare a Table of Rates—to give reasons for allowing or disallowing any rate claimed by The Applicant.

(b) The Table of Rates so prepared shall be published together with a notice intimating to The Applicant and the ryots that any objections, which he or they may desire to make to such Table of Rates or to any portion thereof, must be made by a written petition to be presented to the Collector within one month after such publication.

Table of Rates to be published with notice to Applicant and ryots that they may object.

103. If any such objections are presented, the Collector may proceed to consider the same, and may alter or amend the Table of Rates prepared by him. Upon the expiry of the said period of one month, or upon so amending or altering the Table of Rates, the Collector shall submit such Table of Rates together with his proceedings and any petitions of objection that may have been presented by The Applicant or by the ryots, to the Commissioner of the Division or through the Commissioner of the Division to the Board of Revenue for revision. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time by an order, which shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, direct what cases shall be finally revised by the Board of Revenue or by a Commissioner, regard being had to the total amount of rents involved or to the area of the lands or the number of ryots affected.

Collector may upon such objections alter or amend the Table of Rates.

Collector to submit Table of Rates together with his proceedings and petitions of objection to Superior Revenue Authorities for revision.

Lieutenant-Governor to regulate powers of revision of Board and Commissioner.

104. The Board of Revenue or the Commissioner shall have full power to revise, amend, or alter in any manner which appears proper, the Table of Rates and the proceedings submitted under the provisions of Section 103, and to allow or reject in whole or in part any objection forwarded therewith, and may before passing final Board or Commissioner to have full power to revise, amend, or alter Table of Rates, and may direct further enquiry and may hear any party interested.

orders direct and await further proceedings or enquiries in any case in which it may appear expedient to take this course. The Board or Commissioner when exercising these powers of revision may hear, but shall not be bound to hear, any person affected by the proceedings or any pleader or advocate appearing on behalf of such person.

Table of Rates to be binding for ten years, subject to variation for alluvion or diluvion.

105. (a) Such Table of Rates as may be finally sanctioned by the Board or the Commissioner shall be conclusive between The Applicant and the ryots aforesaid in all such proceedings, either in the Civil Court or before the Collector, as are mentioned in Section 106, and shall have effect in respect of the lands with which the proceedings are concerned for a period of ten years from the commencement of the year next following that in which the notice mentioned in Clause (b) of Section 102 was published, and thereafter, until altered by fresh proceedings under this Act: and the rates specified in such Table shall, subject to the other provisions of this Act, be deemed to be the fair and equitable rates payable for such lands by ryots who have a right of occupancy, but who are not entitled by custom or contract or special equitable considerations to hold at more favourable rates.

Certified copy of Table of Rates conclusive as to provisions of Act having been followed.

(b) Such Table of Rates or a certified copy thereof shall be conclusive evidence in every Civil Court that the proceedings of the Board, of the Commissioner, and of the Collector have been duly conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Applicant may enforce Table of Rates by suits in Civil Court:

106. (a) The Applicant may enforce such Table of Rates against such ryots by suit in the Civil Court, and any number of ryots not exceeding ten may be made co defendants in any such suit; or such Applicant may, at any time after three months and within one year from the date of the Table of Rates being finally sanctioned, or may apply for an Enhanced Jamabandi after three months.

apply to the Collector for the preparation of an Enhanced Jamabandi; and the Collector shall upon such application proceed to prepare such Enhanced Jamabandi, and may for this purpose exercise all the powers which he is by this Act empowered to exercise for that purpose. If such Collector is satisfied that The Applicant was unable to put the Table of Rates in force in consequence of the recusant or unreasonable conduct of the ryots, he may direct that the whole of the costs of preparing such Enhanced Jamabandi shall be paid by such ryots.

Costs of preparing such Enhanced Jamabandi when ryots recusant.

Burden of proof not to be altered in consequence of preparation of Table of Rates.

(b) In any such proceedings in the Civil Court or before the Collector the burden of proof in respect of all matters other than the rates of rent for the classes of land specified in the Table of Rates shall lie upon The Applicant in the same manner as if he had in the first instance proceeded by suit in the Civil Court to enhance the rents of such ryots aforesaid.

B.—Proceedings to obtain an Enhanced Jamabandi.

Applicant for Enhanced Jamabandi to present with his application a copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, according to which he claims to collect rents from occupancy ryots.

107. (a) When The Applicant prays that the Collector shall prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi for the estate, tenure or undertenure, in respect of which the application is made, he shall with his application present a copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, which he alleges to be fair and equitable, and according to which he claims to collect enhanced rents from ryots having a right of occupancy. He shall further distinctly specify the ground or grounds upon which he claims to enhance the rent of each ryot specified therein; and, in the case of the third and fourth grounds specified in Section 22, the period at which such grounds came into operation. The entry of any ryot's name in such copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi shall be deemed to be an admission that he has a right of occupancy in the land shown opposite his name.

Notice to ryots to assent or object within one month.

(b) The Collector shall thereupon give notice to all the ryots mentioned in such copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, and shall by such notice call upon them to appear within one month and individually assent to the entries respecting them individually in such copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, or state their objections, if any, to such entries.

If all the ryots appear and assent to the Enhanced Jamabandi, Collector to make an order that it shall be binding upon both parties for ten years

108. (a) If within one month after the publication or service of such notice all such ryots appear and assent to the enhanced rates of rent claimed or to the entries concerning them individually in such copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, the Collector shall make an order declaring such Enhanced Jamabandi binding upon The Applicant and the said ryots for the period of ten years from the date of such order; and, subject to the provisions of this Act as to enhancement for land gained by alluvion and abatement for land lost by diluvion, such Enhanced Jamabandi shall be conclusively binding upon such Applicant and such ryots for the said period of ten years, and thereafter, until altered by agreement or by fresh proceedings under this Act.

If ryots do not all appear and assent, or if they or any of them object to the rates or the entries concerning them, Collector to proceed to prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi. Any ryot may at any time assent to entries concerning himself.

(b) If within the said period of one month all such ryots do not appear and assent as aforesaid, or if they or any of them appear and object to the enhanced rates of rent claimed or to the entries concerning them in such copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, the Collector shall proceed to prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi for the estate, tenure or undertenure, in respect of which the application has been made. Any ryot may at any stage of the proceedings assent by a written petition to the rates and the particulars in the copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi, so far as they concern himself, and such rates and particulars shall thereupon become binding as between him and The Applicant.

109. (a) Upon the conclusion of his proceedings, the Collector shall draw up a statement thereof, and shall therein set forth the grounds upon which he allows or disallows or alters the rates and entries in the copy of the Enhanced Jamabandi or any of them. He shall then, in accordance with his determination of these matters, prepare an Enhanced Jamabandi.

Collector to draw up statement of proceedings and set forth grounds for allowing or disallowing rates or entries in copy of Enhanced Jamabandi.

(b) The Enhanced Jamabandi so prepared shall be published together with a notice intimating to The Applicant and the ryots that any objections, which he or they may desire to make to the rates or entries in such Enhanced Jamabandi, must be made by a written petition to be presented to the Collector within one month after such publication.

Enhanced Jamabandi to be published with notice to Applicant and ryots that objections may be made within one month.

110. (a) If any objection is made by The Applicant or by the ryots or any of them to the rates or entries in such Enhanced Jamabandi, the Collector shall deal therewith; and, in order to satisfy himself of the correctness of such objection or otherwise, he may take such further proceedings as to him appear necessary, and may therein exercise the same powers as he was competent to exercise in the original proceedings, and he may make any order which he deems proper, either cancelling, amending, or otherwise altering any such rate or any such entry, or rejecting such objection.

Collector to deal with objections—may take further evidence before passing orders.

(b) Any landlord or ryot affected by such order may, if dissatisfied therewith, prefer an appeal to the Commissioner of the Division within thirty clear days; and such Commissioner may upon such appeal, after or without further enquiry, make such order as to him appears proper.

Appeal from Collector's order.

111. (a) If no objection is made to such Enhanced Jamabandi within the said period of one month, or, if any such objection has been made, then as soon as it has been disposed of as provided in Section 110, such Enhanced Jamabandi shall become conclusively binding between The Applicant and all the ryots mentioned therein, whether they or any of them have or have not appeared during the proceedings; and subject to the provisions of this Act as to enhancement for land framed by alluvion and abatement for land lost by diluvion, shall remain so conclusively binding for a period of ten years after the expiry of the said month, and thereafter until altered by agreement or by fresh proceedings under this Act. The provisions of Clause (b) of Section 105 shall further be applicable to such Enhanced Jamabandi.

Enhanced Jamabandi binding for ten years, if no objection made, or as soon as objection made has been disposed of. Clause (b) of Section 105 applicable thereto.

(b) No ryot who is compelled to pay rent to The Applicant according to such Enhanced Jamabandi shall be liable in a suit for mesne profits to any third party claiming to be entitled to such rent, but any such suit shall be maintainable against such Applicant solely.

Ryot compelled to pay rent to Applicant not liable to third party.

C.—Proceedings to obtain a Settlement Jamabandi.

Applicant for Settlement Jamabandi to state in his application the circumstances under which he is unable to ascertain the rents payable to him.

112. (a) When The Applicant prays that the Collector shall prepare a Settlement Jamabandi for the estate, tenure or under-tenure, in respect of which the application is made, he shall in his application set forth the circumstances under which he is unable to ascertain the ryots liable to pay rent to him, the rents payable by such ryots, or the plots of land in respect of which such rents are payable by each of such ryots. The Collector, if satisfied that The Applicant is unable to ascertain accurately the particulars aforesaid, and that, in consequence, proceedings for the preparation of a Table of Rates or an Enhanced Jamabandi would be ineffectual, shall proceed to prepare a Settlement Jamabandi and shall thereupon give notice to the ryots in such estate, tenure or under-tenure.

Notice to ryots to state particulars.

(b) Such notice shall call upon them to appear within one month and state the plots of land held by each of them, together with the class, quantity, and boundaries thereof, the rent previously paid for such land, and the rent which they are each of them willing to pay. Each ryot shall further state whether he claims to have a right of occupancy in the land held by him.

If ryots give particulars required of them, and Applicant assent thereto, Collector to prepare Settlement Jamabandi accordingly. If particulars not given, or if given and challenged, Collector shall proceed to determine what rents are payable, by what ryots, for what lands.

113. If within one month after the publication or service of such notice all the ryots appear and state the several particulars by such notice required of them, and if The Applicant assents to such particulars so stated, the Collector shall prepare a Settlement Jamabandi accordingly. The provisions of Clause (n) of Section 108 shall apply to such Settlement Jamabandi. If such ryots do not appear and state such particulars, or if such particulars having been stated by all or any of them are objected to by such Applicant on grounds which to the Collector appear primâ facie sufficient, such Collector shall proceed to ascertain and determine who are the ryots liable to pay rent to such Applicant, what are the lands for which such rents are payable, what rights such ryots have in such lands, and what are the rents or rates of rent, either in excess of the former rents or rates or otherwise, which The Applicant is entitled to receive from such ryots for such lands.

Collector to draw up statement of proceedings setting forth his determination and the grounds thereof.

114. Upon the conclusion of his proceedings the Collector shall draw up a statement thereof, and shall therein set forth his determination of the several matters mentioned in Section 113 and the grounds of such determination. He shall then, in accordance with his determination of these matters, prepare a Settlement Jamabandi. The provisions of Clause (b) of Section 109, and of Sections 110 and 111 shall be applicable to such Settlement Jamabandi.

General Provisions.

115. It shall be lawful for any number of landlords to join in an application under Section 99, subject, however, to the provisions of the said Section as to jurisdiction; and such landlords so joining may specify the proportions in which they are willing to pay the costs of the Collector's proceedings; but the Collector may, if he see fit, direct that separate proceedings be held in respect of any estate, tenure, undertenure, or specific area belonging to any Applicant, in which event such Applicant shall pay the costs of such separate proceedings.

Any number of landlords may join in an application, but Collector may direct separate proceedings.

116. In any case under Section 101, Section 107 or Section 112, the Collector may, if he see fit, before proceeding to determine or settle the matters specified, endeavour to bring about an amicable compromise of the matters in dispute between The Applicant and the ryots; and, if any such compromise is brought about, the Collector shall draw up a formal record of its terms, and such record shall be binding upon all persons mentioned therein.

Collector may endeavour to bring about amicable compromise. Such compromise to be binding.

117. (a) The Applicant shall from time to time, when so required by a written notice signed by the Collector, deposit such sum of money as the Collector may estimate to be necessary in order to carry on the proceedings. If The Applicant fails to deposit such sum within fifteen days after such notice has been served upon him, the Collector may order the proceedings to abate; or he may in his discretion receive the said sum after the said fifteen days have expired.

Applicant to deposit expenses of proceedings when required. Consequence of failing to do so.

(b) When there are two or more Applicants, who have joined under the provisions of Section 115, any one of them may deposit such sum as the Collector estimates to be necessary to carry on the proceedings in respect of his own estate, tenure or undertenure, and the Collector may carry on such proceedings, and may make an order that the proceedings do abate in respect of any estate, tenure or undertenure belonging to any Applicant who has failed to deposit his share of the sum required by the Collector's notice. If such Applicants are Coparceners, any one or more of them may, within seven days after the expiry of the said fifteen days, deposit any sum which any other of them has failed to deposit, and shall be entitled to recover any sum so deposited by a suit in the Civil Court.

Failure to deposit by some of several Applicants who (1) have joined under Section 115, or (2) are Coparceners.

One of two or more Applicant may deposit sum required and recover from defaulter.

118. In any case in which the Collector makes an order under Section 117 that the proceedings do abate, and in any case in which The Applicant withdraws from the proceedings without the permission of the Collector, no fresh enhancement proceedings may be instituted before the Collector or in the Civil Court in respect of the lands with which such first mentioned proceedings were concerned, until a period of ten years has elapsed from the date of such order of abatement or from the date on which such proceedings terminated in consequence of such withdrawal: provided that nothing contained in this Section shall be construed to prevent enhancement for land gained by alluvion or abatement for land lost by diluvion during such period of ten years.

No fresh proceedings for ten years after order of abatement or after withdrawal of Applicant without permission.

Notice mentioned in Sections 101, 102, 107, 109, and 112 how to be published.

119. (a) Any such notice as is mentioned in Clause (b) of Section 101, Clause (b) of Section 102, Clause (b) of Section 107, Clause (b) of Section 109, or Clause (b) of Section 112, shall ordinarily be published by affixing a copy thereof, and, in any case in which a copy of a Table of Rates or of an Enhanced Jamabandi or of a Settlement Jamabandi has been filed or is directed to be published, a copy of the same at the mál kachahri of each village to which the lands, in respect of which the application has been made, belong, or at some conspicuous place in such village or upon such lands, and also by proclaiming with beat of drum in such village or upon such lands that such notice has been so affixed: provided that it shall be necessary to publish in each village so much only of such Table of Rates or Enhanced Jamabandi or Settlement Jamabandi as relates to the lands of such village.

Individual notice may be added to, or substituted for, general notice.

(b) When proceedings are taken against one ryot or a few ryots merely, or in any other case in which it appears proper, the Collector may in his discretion direct that an individual notice, containing the particulars concerning him, shall be served upon each ryot either in addition to or in substitution for the general notice in this Section provided.

Collector in his proceedings to be guided by such rules as Board of Revenue may lay down.

120. In conducting such proceedings as may be necessary in order to prepare a Table of Rates, an Enhanced Jamabandi, or a Settlement Jamabandi, the Collector shall govern himself by such Rules as may be made by the Board of Revenue for his guidance. The Board of Revenue, subject to the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, may from time to time make, and when made, alter, add to, and revoke such Rules not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, as to such Board may appear necessary in order to give effect to these provisions. Such Rules and all additions thereto, alterations and revocations thereof, shall be published in three successive issues of the Calcutta Gazette.

Power of Board to make, revoke, and alter rules with sanction of Government.

Collector may exercise powers of a Civil Court for summoning and examining witnesses, &c., and causing production of documents.

121. (a) The Collector may in his discretion at any stage of his proceedings exercise all or any of the powers of a Civil Court in respect of summoning, causing the attendance of, and examining, witnesses, whether parties to the proceedings or not, and in respect of causing the production of documents, and giving or apportioning costs: and the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure applicable to these matters shall apply to a Collector exercising such powers.

(b) He may also in his discretion at any stage of his proceedings, with the consent of the persons interested, refer any matter to arbitration; and the provisions of Sections 506 to 522, both inclusive, of The Code of Civil Procedure shall apply, so far as is consistent with the provisions of this Act, to the proceedings in arbitration.

Reference to arbitration. Provisions of Code of Civil Procedure to apply.

122. (a) The Collector of every district shall prepare annual Lists of the Prices, at harvest time, of the staple crops mentioned in Clause (c) of Section 23. Such Price-Lists shall be prepared in accordance with such general directions as may from time to time be prescribed by the Board of Revenue, and shall, when prepared, be submitted to the said Board for approval or revision.

Collectors to prepare Annual Price-Lists of Staple Crops under general directions of Board of Revenue—to submit such Price-Lists to Board for approval or revision.

(b) Such Price-Lists for all districts and areas mentioned in the said Clause (c) of Section 23 shall, when approved or revised by the Board of Revenue, be published annually in the Calcutta Gazette under the signature of one of the Secretaries to the said Board. Any such Price-List so published shall be relevant in any proceedings under this Chapter, and shall be prima facie evidence of the price of such staple crops during the year and in the district or area for which it has been published as aforesaid.

Price-Lists, when approved or revised by Board, to be published in Calcutta Gazette and to be prima facie evidence of prices of staple crops.

123. (a) The Collector may in his discretion at any stage of the proceedings make a measurement of all or any of the lands with which such proceedings are concerned, and may make an order directing the ryots and other persons concerned to be present at such measurement. Such order shall be published in the manner provided in Section 119 for the publication of the notice therein mentioned.

Collector may make measurement, and may direct ryots to attend. Publication of notice.

(b) Any ryot who, after the publication of such order, fails to attend and point out his land, shall be estopped from contesting the correctness of the measurement made, or any of the proceedings held, in his absence. If after due inquiry the Collector shall be unable to make a measurement or ascertain the names of the ryots or other persons holding the lands, he may declare such lands to be at the absolute disposal of the landlord. If any ryot or other person appears within fifteen days after the Collector has recorded such a declaration and shows reasonable cause for his previous non-appearance, such Collector may, upon such terms and conditions as to him appear proper, alter or rescind his previous declaration. If such ryot or other person does not show such reasonable cause, such Collector shall make an order refusing to alter or rescind such declaration. The provisions of Clause (b) of Section 110, shall be applicable to such order.

Consequence of non-attendance.

124. The Lieutenant-Governor may invest any person with the powers of a Collector for the purposes of this Chapter; and may give such directions as appear convenient for dividing between such person and the Collector of the District the work arising under this Act. Any Special Collector may be appointed for the purposes of this Act. Deputy Collector may act under supervision of Collector or Special Collector.

Deputy Collector may, subject to the control and supervision of the Collector of the District or of any person so invested with the powers of a Collector, exercise all or any of the powers vested in a Collector by Sections 101, 102, 103, 107, 108, 109, 110, 112, 113, 114, 115, 117, 119, 120, 121, 123, 126, 127 and 128. Such control and supervision may be exercised by such Collector or person aforesaid either of his own motion or upon petition by any person alleging himself to be aggrieved.

Appointment of Ministerial officers, &c.

125. The Collector may, subject to any rules made in that behalf by the Board of Revenue, appoint such Ministerial and other officers as may be required to make such enquiries and to do all such things as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Chapter. The salaries of such officers and the term of their employment shall be subject to the sanction of the Commissioner.

On termination of proceedings, Collector to draw up account of total cost—Refund of balance—Recovery of deficiency.

126. As soon as the proceedings have become final upon the Table of Rates being finally sanctioned under Section 104, or upon the disposal of the objections or appeals instituted under Sections 110 and 114, the Collector shall draw up an account of the total cost of such proceedings. If such total is less than the sum total of the amounts deposited under Section 117, the balance shall be refunded to The Applicants proportionally to the amount of their deposits. If such sum total exceeds the sum total of the amounts deposited, the deficiency shall be paid by The Applicants in the same proportion within fifteen days after service of a notice as provided in Section 117, and in default of such payment, may be realized as a Demand under the provisions of any law for the time being in force for the recovery of Public Demands.

New Act VII (B C.) of 1868.

New.

What items may be included in the cost of the proceedings.

127. The following items may be included in the account of the cost of the proceedings prepared under Section 126 :—

(a) the whole or a part of the salary and allowances of the Collector or Deputy Collector by whom the proceedings have been conducted. In settling the amount of this item regard shall be had to the portion of the Collector's or Deputy Collector's time occupied by the proceedings;

(b) the salaries of the Ministerial Officers appointed under Section 125, or where such officers have been employed in several proceedings, a part of such salaries proportionate to the portion of their time occupied by the proceedings of which the account of the cost is being prepared;

(c) all contingent and other expenses actually incurred in the proceedings;

Proviso.

provided that the Collector or Commissioner may in his discretion, when deciding any objection made, or appeal preferred, under Section 110 or Section 114, direct that the immediate costs thereof shall be paid by the person making such objection or preferring such appeal, or by any party to the proceedings who opposes the same.

When Applicant succeeds, ryots to be liable for costs. Costs not to exceed one year's enhanced rent.

128. (a) In any case in which an Enhanced Jamabandi has been prepared, and The Applicant is found entitled to enhanced rent as the result of the proceedings, the Collector may award to him costs payable by the ryots: provided that no ryot shall be liable to pay as costs a sum greater than one year's rent of his holding as settled by the enhancement proceedings. The Collector may in his discretion direct that the costs so payable by any ryot shall be paid by instalments extending over a period not longer than three years. Every such instalment shall bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date of the Collector's award until the date of realization.

Costs may be made payable by instalments

(b) Costs payable by a ryot under this Section, if not paid within fifteen days after the date of the award, or, where costs have been made payable by instalments, any instalment thereof not paid upon the due date, shall be recoverable in the same manner as arrears of rent.

Unpaid costs to be recoverable as arrears of rent.

129. Every person affected by the proceedings shall be entitled to a certified copy of the Collector's statement and of any Table of Rates, Enhanced Jamabandi, or Settlement Jamabandi prepared by the Collector under the provisions of this Chapter. Such copy shall be furnished to such person at his expense. A ryot shall be entitled to receive a certified copy of so much of any Jamabandi as concerns himself upon payment of a fee of four annas.

Ryots entitled to copies.

130. When any considerable number of cases has been instituted in a Civil Court by one or more landlords against ryots holding land in the same locality, and it appears to be desirable that all such cases should be disposed of by the Collector in accordance with the provisions contained in this Chapter, such Civil Court may make a recommendation in these terms to the District Judge to which such Court is subordinate; and such District Judge may, if he see fit, transfer such cases to such Collector, who shall thereupon proceed to deal with them in all respects as if an application had been made to him under the provisions of Section 99. In any case in which the Collector proceeds thereupon to make a Table of Rates, or an Enhanced Jamabandi, or a Settlement Jamabandi, he shall before so proceeding define the area to which such Table of Rates, or Enhanced Jamabandi, or Settlement Jamabandi shall be applicable.

District Judge may, on report of Civil Court, transfer to Collector any considerable number of cases instituted from same locality.

131. If the Collector of a district is of opinion that, in consequence of a serious dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace having arisen upon the subject of rent in a considerable area of his district, it is expedient that proceedings should be taken to settle the rents payable by the ryots to their landlords within such area, he may record his reasons for entertaining this opinion, and may forward them through the Commissioner for the consideration of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Power of Collector to proceed suo motu for the settlement of rent, when dispute exists.

The Lieutenant-Governor, if satisfied of the expediency of taking such proceedings, may authorize such Collector to proceed of his own motion to settle such rents; and such Collector shall thereupon proceed to such settlement, and may to this end exercise the same powers as if an application had been made to him under Section 99.

III.—Proceedings to enhance the Rent payable in money by Tenure-holders and Undertenure-holders.

132. In the following cases, that is to say—

Landlord desiring to enhance rent of tenure or undertenure to proceed in Civil Court.

(a) in the case of a proprietor claiming to enhance the rent of a tenure-holder whose interest is immediately subordinate to that of such proprietor;

(b) in the case of a tenure-holder claiming to enhance the rent of an undertenure-holder whose interest is immediately subordinate to that of such tenure-holder;

(c) in the case of a superior undertenure-holder claiming to enhance the rent of an undertenure-holder whose interest is immediately subordinate to that of such superior undertenure-holder;

(d) in the case of a landlord claiming under the provisions of Section 18 to enhance the rent of a ryot entitled to hold land at fixed rates;

(e) in the case of a landlord claiming under the provisions of Section 42 to enhance the rent of such land as is specified in Section 41; such proprietor or tenure-holder or superior undertenure-holder or landlord shall present a plaint to the Civil Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf. Such plaint shall in order to affect the rent of the following year be presented (a) in districts or parts of districts in which the Fusli or Umli year prevails, in or before the month of Paisakh; or (b) in districts or parts of districts in which the Bengali year prevails, in or before the month of Aughrun. The provisions of Section 98 shall be applicable to every such plaint so presented to a Civil Court.

Plaint when to be presented in order to affect rent of following year.

CHAPTER XVI.—OF THE RECOVERY OF ARREARS OF RENT IN CERTAIN CASES BY SUMMARY SALE WITHOUT DECREE.

Reg. VIII of 1819, Preamble and s 8, cl. 1. Article 135 of the Digest.

133. Subject to the provisions of Section 70, and to the other provisions of this Chapter, proprietors of revenue-paying estates are entitled to apply in the manner hereinafter provided in Sections 134 and 135 for periodical sales of patni tenures and other tenures upon which the right of selling or bringing to sale for an arrear of rent has been specially reserved by stipulation in the engagements interchanged on the creation of such tenures. The exercise of this power is not confined to cases in which the stipulation for sale may have been unrestricted in regard to time, but applies equally to tenures held under engagements stipulating merely for a sale at the end of the year.

Proprietors entitled to apply for summary sale of certain tenures.

134. (a) On the first day of Baisakh, that is, at the commencement of the following year from that of which the rent is due, any such proprietor may present a petition to the Collector[a] containing a specification of any balances that may be due to him on account of the expired year from all or any holders of tenures of the nature described in Section 133.

First sale may be applied for on 1st Baisakh.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 8, cl. 2. Article 136 of the Digest.

[a] Act XXXIII of 1850, which dispensed with the petition to the Civil Court.

(b) Such specification of the balances due shall then be stuck up in some conspicuous part of the Collector's kachahri, with a notice that, if the amounts claimed be not paid before the first of Jeyt following, the tenures of the defaulters will on that day be sold by public sale in liquidation. If the first of Jeyt fall on a Sunday or holiday, the next subsequent day not a holiday shall be selected instead.

Specification of balances due to be stuck up at Collector's kachahri, with notice of sale in default of payment.

(c) A similar notice shall be stuck up at the sadr kachahri of the proprietor himself, and a copy or extract of such part of the notice as applies to the individual case shall be by him sent to be similarly published at the kachahri at which the business of the tenure is transacted, or at the principal town or village upon the land of the tenure of the defaulter. The proprietor shall be exclusively answerable for the observance of the forms above prescribed.

Similar notice to be stuck up at proprietor's sadr kachahri and a further notice to be published on the land.

(d) The copy or extract of such part of the notice as applies to the individual case shall be served by a single peon, who shall bring back the receipt of the defaulter or of his manager for the same, or, in the event of inability to procure this, the signatures of three substantial persons residing in the neighbourhood, in attestation of the notice having been brought and published on the spot.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 8, cl. 2. Article 137 of the Digest.

Service, and attestation of service, of notice directed to be published on the land.

If the people of the village object or refuse to sign their names in attestation, the peon shall go to the kachahri of the nearest Munsif, or if there is no Munsif, to the nearest thana, and there make voluntary oath of the same having been duly published, a certificate to which effect shall be signed and sealed by the said officers and delivered to the peon.

Explanation.—Service upon the defaulter personally of the copy or extract of such part of the notice as applies to the individual case is not a sufficient substitute for publication at the kachahri or at the principal town or village upon the land of the tenure.

(e) If it shall appear from the tenor of the receipt or attestation in question that the notice has been published at any time previous[a] to the fifteenth of the month of Baisakh, it shall be a sufficient warrant for the sale to proceed upon the day appointed.

[a] I. L. R. 1 Calc. 175.

135. On the first day of Kartik[b] in the middle of the year the proprietor shall be at liberty to present a similar petition to the Collector with a statement of any balances that may be due on account of the rent of the current year up to the end of the month of Asin, and to cause

Second or mid-year sale may be applied for on 1st Kartik.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 8, cl. 3. Article 138 of the Digest.

[b] Note that this will be a month after the rent is due according to section 55.

Sale to take place if arrear to date equal one-fourth or more of the annual rent.

similar publication to be made of a sale of the tenures of defaulters to take place on the first of Aghan, unless the whole of the advertized balance shall be paid before the date in question, or so much of it as shall reduce the arrear, including any intermediate demand for the month of Kartik, to less than one-fourth or a four-anna proportion of the total demand of the proprietor according to the kistbandi, calculated from the commencement of the year to the last day of Kartik.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 14, cl. 1. Article 139 of the Digest.

Sale not to be stayed unless arrear claimed be lodged.

136. (a) If the balance claimed by the proprietor on account of the rent of the tenure remains unpaid at sunset of the day next preceding the day fixed for the sale of such tenure under Section 134 or Section 135, the sale shall be made without reserve, in the manner provided in Sections 140 and 141. Save as provided in Section 137 and in Section 138, such sale shall not be stayed or postponed on any account unless the amount of the demand has been paid or lodged before sunset of the day next preceding the day of sale as aforesaid.

Now.

Explanation.—The balance claimed by the proprietor may be paid to such proprietor or to his agent having authority to receive it, or may subject to the rules for the receipt of money in Government Treasuries, be lodged in the Treasury of the Collector having jurisdiction under the provisions of Section 146.

But suit will lie for its reversal.

(b) It shall, however, be competent to any party desirous of contesting the right of the proprietor to make the sale, whether on the ground of there having been no balance due or on any other ground, to sue such proprietor for the reversal of the same, and upon establishing a sufficient plea to obtain a decree with full costs and damages.

Purchaser to be made party to such suit.

(c) The purchaser shall be made a party to any such suit, and, upon making a decree for reversal of the sale, the Court shall be careful to indemnify him against all loss at the charge of the proprietor or person at whose instance the sale may have been made.

Illustrations.

In the following cases a sufficient plea is established.—

(a)—A, a patnidar, sues for the reversal of the sale, of his patni tenure on the allegation that no notice was stuck up in a conspicuous part of the Collector's kachahri, as required by clause (b) of Section 134, and this allegation is found to be true.

(b)—A, B, and C, joint owners of a patni tenure sue for the reversal of the sale of such patni tenure on the allegation that no copy or extract of the notice was published at the kachahri or at the principal town or village upon the land as required by clause (c) of Section 134. This allegation is found to be strictly true, although it appears that a copy of the notice was served on A and B personally.

In the following case a sufficient plea is not established.

(c)—A, a patnidar, sues for the reversal of the sale of his patni tenure on the ground that no copy or extract of the notice was published at the kachahri or at the principal town or village upon the land, as required by clause (c) of Section 134. It is found that the copy or extract of the notice was published in the manner required by this clause; but that the peon did not bring back the receipt of the defaulter, or of his manager, or of three substantial persons residing in the neighbourhood as required by clause (d) of the same Section, nor did he, as required by the same Rule, make a voluntary oath before the nearest Munsif, or at the nearest thana, that the copy or extract had been duly published.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 14, cl. 2. Article 140 of the Digest.

Defaulter may apply for summary investigation before sale.

137. (a) In any case in which a tenure-holder contests the proprietor's demand of an arrear as specified in the notice advertised, such tenure-holder shall be competent to apply for a summary investigation at any time within the period of notice. The proprietor shall then be called upon to furnish his kabuliyat and other proofs at the shortest convenient notice, in order that the award may, if possible, be made before the day appointed for sale.

But sale not to be stayed, unless amount of rent claimed be deposited.

(b) Such award, if so made, will of course regulate the ulterior process; but if the case be still pending, the lot shall be called up in its turn notwithstanding the suit; and, if the proprietor or his agent in attendance insists on the demand, the sale shall be made on his responsibility, nor shall it be stayed or the summary suit be allowed to proceed, unless the amount claimed or its equivalent in Government securities be then lodged or has been previously lodged, by the tenure-holder contesting the demand; and if such deposit be not made, the alleged defaulter shall have no remedy but by a regular action for damages, and for a reversal of the sale.

Omission to ask for investigation not to preclude action.

(c) The omission to apply for a summary investigation under this Section shall not preclude the tenure-holder from bringing such regular action.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 13, cls. 1 and 2. Article 35 of the Digest.

Undertenure-holders enabled to protect themselves from avoidance of their undertenures upon sale of the tenure;

138. In order to give undertenure-holders of the first degree an opportunity of protecting themselves against damage by the avoidance of their undertenures upon the sale of the tenure, the following rules have been enacted:—

by paying in the amount for which the tenure is about to be sold;

(1) Any one or more of such undertenure-holders may, when the tenure is advertised for sale, pay into the Collectorate treasury or to the officer conducting the sale the amount for the realization of which the tenure is about to be sold; and, on such payment being made, the sale shall be stayed.

or by lodging money antecedently to meet arrears.

(2) Any one or more of such undertenure-holders may lodge money antecedently for the purpose of eventually answering any demand that may remain due on the day fixed for the sale of the tenure; and, should the amount lodged be sufficient, the sale shall not proceed, but after making good to the proprietor the amount of his demand, any excess shall be paid back to the person who lodged it.

Article 36 of the Digest.

Procedure if amount lodged be rent due from under-tenant

139. (a) In any case in which an undertenure-holder has paid money under Section 138 in order to protect his undertenure, if the amount so lodged be wholly or partly rent due by such undertenure-holder to the holder of the tenure about to be sold, the same shall be stated at the time of making the deposit, and the amount or so much thereof as may be necessary shall be carried to the account of the tenant lodging it, in satisfaction of any claim of rent that may at the time be pending, or be thereafter brought forward against him by the proprietor of the advertised tenure on account of the year or months for which the notice of sale may have been published.

Procedure if amount lodged be an advance from private funds.

(b) If the person making such a deposit in order to stay the sale of the tenure shall have already paid the whole or part of the rent due from himself, so that the amount lodged is wholly or partly an advance from private funds and not a disbursement on account of the said rent, such deposit or the balance which remains after satisfying any claims to rent under Clause (a) shall not be carried to credit in, or set against, future demands for rent, but shall be considered as a loan made to the holder of the tenure preserved from sale by such means, and the tenure so preserved shall be the security to the person making the advance, who shall be considered to have a lien thereupon in the same manner as if the loan had been made upon mortgage; and he shall be entitled, on applying for the same, to obtain immediate possession of such tenure in order to recover the amount so advanced from any profits belonging thereto.

Defaulting tenure-holder must pay total sum advanced with interest, if he wants to recover his tenure.

(c) If the defaulting tenure-holder shall desire to recover his tenure from the hands of the person who, by making the advance, has acquired such an interest therein and entered on possession in consequence, he shall not be entitled to do so, except upon repayment of the entire sum advanced with interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum up to the date of possession having been given as above, or upon exhibiting proof in a regular suit to be instituted for the purpose, that the full amount so advanced with interest has been realized from the usufruct of the tenure.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 10. Article 141 of the Digest.

140. (a) At the time of the sale the notice previously stuck up in the kachahri shall be taken down, and the lots shall be called up successively in the order in which they may be found in that notice. A person shall attend on the part of the proprietor with a particular statement of the payments made up to the day of sale on account of the balance of each advertised lot, together with the receipt or certificate mentioned in Clause (d) of Section 134. No lot shall be put up to sale until the statement produced shall have been inspected, and the existence of a balance for the year ascertained therefrom, nor until the receipt for the notice shall have been read, the observance of which forms shall be recorded in a separate proceeding to be held upon each lot sold.

Lots to be sold in order. Proprietor's agent to be present with account and receipt for notice.

Kistbandi to be produced at second mid-year sale.

(b) If the sale be of the description provided for in Section 135, the kistbandi of the defaulter shall likewise be produced in order that it may be seen that the balance remaining unpaid exceeds a four-anna proportion of the demand up to the date of sale; nor shall the sale take place unless this be ascertained.

(c) The proprietor shall be exclusively responsible for the correctness and authenticity of the papers to be thus exhibited, nor shall the Collector or other Officer making the sale be answerable in any respect except for its fairness and publicity, and for the observance of the rules prescribed for his guidance in this Chapter.

Proprietor exclusively responsible for correctness of papers, &c.

141. (a) The sale shall be conducted in public by the Collector of land revenue within whose Collectorate the lands comprised in the tenure are situate. The tenure shall be sold to the highest bidder, and every one not the actual defaulter shall be free to bid, not excepting the person in satisfaction of whose demand the sale may be made, nor the undertenants of the defaulter. Fifteen per cent. of the purchase-money shall be paid immediately the lot is knocked down, and the officer conducting the sale shall be competent to refuse to accept a bid or to knock down a lot to any bidder, unless he has assurance to his satisfaction that the amount required to be deposited is in hand for the purpose, or will be produced within two hours.

Act VIII (B.C.) of 1865, s 3. Article 142 of the Digest.

Sale to be held by Collector in public kachahri: procedure to be observed at sale.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s 9.

(b) If the fifteen per cent. be not paid, or an equivalent amount in Government securities be not lodged within two hours of the sale, the lot shall be re-sold on the same day; and if the remainder of the purchase-money be not paid by noon of the eighth day, notice shall be given of re-sale on the following day, that is, on the ninth from the first sale, by proclaiming the same by the beat of drum through the bazar of the Sadr Station of the district, after which the lot shall be re-sold at the appointed time at the risk of the first purchaser, who shall forfeit the advance of fifteen per centum already made, and be further answerable for any sum in which the proceeds of the second sale may fall short of the antecedent one. Such deficiency shall be levied by the process for the execution of decrees of the Civil Courts.

Resale if 15 per cent. not deposited, &c.; or if remainder of purchase money not paid. Deposit forfeited in latter case.

(c) The forfeited deposit of fifteen per centum shall be applied to defray the expenses of the sale, and the surplus shall be credited to Government.

Act XXV of 1850 s. 2.

Forfeited deposit how applied.

142. (a) Every tenure, that may be disposed of at a public sale under the rules contained in Sections 138 to 141 inclusive for arrears of rent due on account of the same, is hereby declared to be sold free of all incumbrances that may have accrued upon it by the act of the defaulting proprietor, his representatives or assignees, unless the right of making such incumbrances was expressly vested in the holder by a stipulation to that effect in the written engagements under which the said tenure was held.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s 11. Article 143 of the Digest.

Tenure declared to be sold free of incumbrances created by act of defaulter.

(b) No transfer by sale, gift, or otherwise, no mortgage or other limited assignment, shall be permitted to bar the indefeasible right of the proprietor to hold the tenure of his creation answerable, in the state which he created it, for the rent, which is in fact his reserved property in the tenure, except such transfer or assignment has been made with a condition to that effect under express authority obtained from such proprietor.

All leases granted by defaulter are cancelled by sale.

(c) In like manner, upon the sale of a tenure for arrears, all leases originating with the former tenure-holder, if creative of a middle interest between the resident cultivators and such tenure-holder, must be considered to be cancelled, except the authority to grant them have been specially transferred. The possessors of such interests must consequently lose the right to hold possession of the land and to collect the rents of the ryots, this having been enjoyed merely in consequence of the defaulter's assignment of a certain portion of his own interest, the whole of which was liable for the rent:

Exception in favour of bond fide engagements with ryots.

provided that nothing contained in this Section shall be construed to entitle the purchaser of a tenure to eject a khúdkasht ryot or resident and hereditary cultivator, or to cancel bond fide engagements made with such tenants by the late incumbent or his representative, except it be proved in a regular suit to be brought by such purchaser for the adjustment of his rent, that a higher rate would have been demandable at the time such engagements were contracted by his predecessor. Subject to these provisions any such purchaser shall be entitled to proceed under the provisions of this Act to enhance the rent of the ryots holding land in the tenure purchased by him, but no ryot shall be liable to ejectment otherwise than as provided in this Act.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 15, cl. 1. Article 144 of the Digest.

Certificate to be given to purchaser on payment of full amount of purchase-money.

143. (a) The purchaser, as soon as he has paid the full amount of the purchase-money, shall receive from the officer conducting the sale a certificate of such payment.

(b) Such purchaser may then proceed with such certificate to procure a transfer of the tenure to his name in the kachahri of the proprietor, and upon furnishing security, if required, to the extent of half the annual rent, he shall receive the usual order for possession, together with a notice to the ryots and others to attend and pay their rents henceforward to him.

Zemindar bound to put him in possession.

(c) The proprietor shall also be bound to furnish access to any papers connected with the tenure purchased that may be forthcoming in his kachahri; and should he in any manner delay the transfer in his office or refuse to give the orders for possession, notwithstanding that good and substantial security shall have been furnished or tendered on requisition, the new purchaser shall be entitled to apply direct to the Collector,* and he shall receive an order for possession, and shall be put in possession of the land by an officer deputed by the Collector for that purpose in the same manner, as possession is obtained under a decree of Court: provided, however, that if the delay be on account of the proprietor contesting the sufficiency of the security tendered, the rule contained in Clause (c) of Section 53 shall be observed.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 15, clauses 2 and 3. Article 145 of the Digest.

Procedure in case of opposition to purchaser by defaulter or persons claiming under him.

144. (a) When the new purchaser proceeds to take possession of the lands of his purchase, if the late incumbent himself or the holders of under-tenures or assignments derived from such late incumbent, and intermediate between him and the actual cultivators, attempts to offer opposition or to interfere with the collections of such new purchaser from the lands composing his purchase, the latter shall be at liberty to apply immediately to the Collector[b] for the aid of the public officers in obtaining possession of his just rights.

Collector to issue Proclamation.

(b) A Proclamation shall then issue under the seal and signature of the Collector,[b] declaring that the new incumbent having by purchase at a sale for arrears of rent due to the proprietor acquired the entire rights and privileges attaching to the tenure of the late tenure-holder in the state in which it was originally derived by him from the proprietor, he alone will be recognized as entitled to collect the rents from the ryots and others, and no payments made to any other individual will on any account be credited to such ryots or other tenants in any suit for rent or on any other occasion whatever when the same may be pleaded.

Procedure in case of continued opposition by defaulter or his under-tenants.

(c) If the late incumbent or his late tenants continue to oppose the entry of the new purchaser notwithstanding the issuing of such a proclamation, or if there is reason to apprehend a breach of the peace on the part of any one, the aid of the Police Officers shall be given to the new purchaser on his presenting a written application for the same; and in the event of any affray or breach of the peace occurring, the entire responsibility shall rest with the party opposing the lawful attempt of the purchaser to assume his rights.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, clause 1.

Rules for disposal of the sale-proceeds

145. The following rules shall be observed in disposing of the proceeds of the sale, that is to say—

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, clause 2.

One per cent. to be credited to Government.

(1) One per centum shall first be deducted from the net proceeds realized and shall be carried to the account of Government, for the purpose of meeting the expense of any extra establishments which it may be necessary to maintain for carrying into effect the provisions contained in Sections 133 to 144 inclusive.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, clause 3.

Zemindar's claim for rent to be next satisfied: proviso.

(2) The balance on account of which the sale may have been made shall next be made good in full (with interest and all charges incurred in bringing the tenure to sale) to the proprietor or other person to whom the same may be due: provided, however, that no former balances beyond those of the current year (or of that immediately expired, if the sale be at the commencement of the following year), shall be included in the demand to be thus satisfied. Such antecedent balances, if the proprietor have omitted to recover them by summary sale at the time, shall be regarded as personal debts of the individual tenure-holder, and can be recovered only in the same manner as other debts by a regular suit in Court.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, clauses 4, 5, and 6.

Balance to be sent to Government treasury to meet claims of persons endamaged by sale.

(3) Any excess that may remain after satisfying the demand of the proprietor shall be sent by the officer conducting the sale to the Government treasury to be held in deposit to answer the claims of the undertenure-holders of the first degree, or of others who by assignment of the defaulter may be at the time in possession of a valuable interest in the land composing the tenure sold, or any part of it.

See Article 35 of the Digest.

Undertenure-holders free to sue for price of their interest or compensation.

(4) It shall be competent to any one conceiving himself to possess such an interest as is mentioned in Clause 3, to bring forward his claim to the price he may have paid for the same, or for a just compensation for the loss sustained by him in consequence of the sale, by instituting a regular suit

Award of Court if plaintiff's claim found equitable.

(5) If the Court on investigation considers the plaintiff's claim to be an equitable one, the Court shall award to the claimant either the price he may have originally paid, or the value of the interest at the time of sale, or any other amount that may be deemed just and equitable under all the circumstances If there be more claimants than one, payment shall not be made from the deposit until the whole of the claims be settled; and in case the value assessed upon the whole should exceed the amount in deposit, such amount shall be divided proportionately, and the remainder stand as a personal debt against the defaulter, to be realized from him by the usual process for the execution of decrees.

Suit not to lie if undertenure-holder be himself in arrear at time of sale.

(6) No undertenure-holder of the first degree or other possessor of an assigned interest upon the land of the tenure sold, who may be holding under a stipulation for the payment of an annual amount in the way of rent, shall be entitled to recover compensation for the loss of such undertenure or assignment upon its becoming cancelled by sale of the tenure, except after exhibiting proof that the whole amount of the rent demandable from himself has been paid or lodged for the purpose before the sale.

Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, cl. 7.

Defaulter entitled to sale-proceeds, if no claims, or after claims have been satisfied.

(7) If no claims upon the balance of the sale-proceeds are brought forward by any undertenants or assignees within the period of two months from the date of sale, or if the amount claimed by those who may have sued do not equal the entire deposit, the defaulter whose tenure may have been sold shall be at liberty to petition the Court for the amount so held in deposit or for the excess thereof, as the case may be, and he shall receive a certificate under the seal of the Court of there being no claims to afford ground of detention for the whole or any part of the deposit, and, upon exhibiting such certificate to the Collector, the amount set free thereby shall be paid to his receipt. In the same manner, upon executing a decree passed in favour of any undertenants or assignees, they shall receive certificates under the seal of the Court, declaring the amount adjudged to them out of the deposit; and upon exhibiting these certificates, the amount shall be paid severally to their receipts by the Collector.

Substitution of Government securities for cash in deposit.

(8) It shall be competent to any party interested in a deposit to withdraw the whole or any part thereof, on substituting Government securities bearing interest in lieu of the money so held in deposit. Such securities shall be taken at the rate of discount or premium of the day, as shown by the Government Gazette last received. Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 17, cl. 8.

Rules for the exercise of jurisdiction in summary sales by the Revenue authorities.

146. The exercise of jurisdiction by the Revenue authorities under Sections 133 to 145 inclusive shall be regulated by the following rules :— Article 147 of the Digest.

(1) If the lands included in the tenure be all situate in one Collectorate, the Collector of such Collectorate shall conduct the sale and otherwise exercise jurisdiction. Act VI of 1863, s 1.

(2) If the lands included in the tenure be situate in two or more Collectorates, the Collector, in whose Collectorate the greater portion of such lands is situate, shall conduct the sale and otherwise exercise jurisdiction. Act VI of 1863, s. 1.

(3) In any case in which a Collector entertains any doubt as to whether the lands or the greater part of them are situate within his Collectorate, he shall report the case for the order of the Commissioner or the Board of Revenue. When the lands are situate in two or more districts included in the division of the same Commissioner, such Commissioner, and when the lands are situate in two or more districts not included in the division of the same Commissioner, the Board of Revenue, may order the Collector to proceed in the matter; and such order shall be conclusive upon the question of jurisdiction. Act VI of 1863, s. 2.

(4) Subject to such rules as may be made in that behalf by the Board of Revenue, a Deputy Collector may be authorized by a Collector to conduct sales or otherwise exercise jurisdiction under this Chapter.

Chapter XVII.—Of certain Special Rules of Procedure applicable to suits between Landlords and their Tenants or Agents.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply to suits between landlords and their tenants or agents.

147. Save as in this Act is otherwise provided, The Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to all suits brought for causes of action arising between landlords and their tenants or agents; and all proceedings in such suits before and after decree shall be governed by the provisions of the said Code. Article 173 of the Digest.

Special Register of such suits to be kept in every Court.

A special Register of such suits shall be kept by every Civil Court in the manner prescribed by Section 58 of the said Code.

Suits between landlords and their tenants or agents where to be instituted.

148. The cause of action in all such suits shall be deemed to have arisen within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the recovery of the land in respect of which the relation of landlord and tenant or the agency exists between the parties. Article 174 of the Digest.

See Article 168 of the Digest.

Surburakars and tehsildars of khas estates may sue and be sued in their own names.

149. All suits arising out of the relation of landlord and tenant, which may be brought by or against landlords, and all such suits against agents as are mentioned in Section 160 may be brought (a) by and against Managers appointed under "The Court of Ward's Act, 1879;" and (b) by or against sarbarakars or tehsildars of estates held under the immediate management of the Revenue Authorities, whether such estates are the property of private persons or of the Secretary of State for India in Council. All such suits shall be conducted or defended in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council, or in the names of private persons to whom such estates belong.

See Article 169 of the Digest.

Naibs or gomashtahs, thereto specially empowered, to be Authorized Agents in cases arising out of the relation of landlord and tenant.

150. (a) Every naib or gomashtah thereto specially empowered by a written authority under the hand of his employer shall for the purposes of all such suits as are mentioned in Section 149, be deemed to be the Recognized Agent of such employer within the meaning of Sections 36, 37, and 38 of The Code of Civil sale by Procedure, notwithstanding that such employer may be within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court in which any appearance, application, or act is made or done by such naib or gomashtah. Any such suit shall, nevertheless, be instituted and conducted in the name and on behalf of such employer.

Notice may be served upon, or money or fees tendered to Naib or Gomashtah instead of landlord.

(b) Every notice which may under any of the provisions of this Act be served upon, and every sum of money or fee which may under any of the provisions of this Act be tendered to, a landlord, may be served upon, or tendered to, any naib or gomastah of such landlord empowered in the manner and for the purpose mentioned in Clause (a); and such service or tender shall be as effectual as service upon, or tender to, such landlord himself.

Suit by landlord or tenant to determine conditions of tenancy.

151. Every landlord shall be entitled to maintain a suit against any ryot, the rent of whose holding is payable to such landlord, and, subject to the provisions of Section 32, every ryot shall be entitled to maintain a suit against his landlord for the determination of all or any of the following matters, that is to say:—

(a) the quantity of land held by such ryot:

(b) the amount of annual rent payable for such land:

(c) the class to which such ryot belongs, that is to say, whether he is a ryot entitled to hold at fixed rates, or is a ryot having a right of occupancy, or has held and cultivated his land for three or more years within the meaning of Sections 32, 33 and 34.

The plaint in any such suit shall state the allegation of the plaintiff as to each of such matters respectively. No such suit shall be dismissed merely because the plaintiff fails to prove exactly the allegations made in his plaint.

Article 93 of the Digest. Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, s. 52; Act X of 1859, s. 78.

Claim for ejectment or cancelment of lease how to be put forward.

152. A landlord desiring to eject a ryot or to cancel a lease on account of non-payment of arrears of rent may sue for such ejectment or cancelment, and for recovery of the arrears in the same suit, or he may sue for such ejectment or cancelment, producing an unexecuted decree for arrears of rent as evidence of the existence of such arrears. In all such suits the decree shall specify the amount of the arrears and if such amount, together with interest and the costs of the suit, be paid into Court within fifteen days from the date of the decree, execution shall be stayed. If the Court is closed on the fifteenth day, such amount may be paid in on the day upon which the Court re-opens.

Stay of ejectment on satisfaction of decree within 15 days.

Explanation 1.—The judgment-debtor is entitled to the benefit of this fifteen days' rule, even though the lease contains a stipulation that it shall be void upon one or more instalments of rent falling into arrear, or upon the breach of any other condition as to payment of rent therein contained.

12 B. L. R. 439 (P C.): B. L. R. F. B. 972.

Explanation 2.—If the original decree is altered or amended on appeal or review, the fifteen days shall be computed from the date of the judgment on appeal or review. If on appeal or review the original decree be not altered or amended, the fifteen days shall be computed from the date of such original decree.

153. A suit for abatement of the rent payable by a ryot who has as a tenant held, or has as a tenant occupied and cultivated, land for more than three years, may be instituted,

Suit for abatement of rent to be instituted by ryot before what tribunal.

(1) when abatement is claimed on the first or second ground specified in Section 25, in the Civil Court or before the Collector;

(2) when abatement is claimed on the third ground specified in Section 25, before the Collector only:

provided that no such suit shall be instituted before the Collector unless ten ryots at least join in bringing the same. Ten or more ryots may join in bringing any such suit, if the rent of all the land in respect of which the suit is brought is payable to the same landlord, although the holdings of such ryots are separate.

(b) A suit for abatement of the rent payable by a tenure-holder or under-tenure-holder, or by a ryot holding at fixed rates and entitled under Section 18 to abatement of rent on account of diluvion, shall be instituted in the Civil Court.

Suit for abatement by tenure-holder or under-tenure-holder or mokarraridar to be instituted in the Civil Court.

(c) The provisions of Section 98 shall be applicable to every suit for abatement instituted in the Civil Court; and the provisions of Chapter XV, so far as they are relevant, shall be applicable, to every suit for abatement instituted before the Collector.

Procedure in such suits.

154. Subject to the provisions of Section 64, process of execution in any such suit as is mentioned in Section 149 may be issued against either the person or property of the judgment-debtor, but such process shall not be issued simultaneously against both his person and property. Process of execution against the property may be issued against either the movable or immovable property, or against both.[b]

See Article 172 of the Digest.

Process of execution may be issued against person, or property, but not against both.

[b] This alters the present law—see Articles 151, 167, and 172 of the Digest, and 1 B. L. R. A. C. 217.

Article 177 of the Digest: Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, s. 53.

Court to issue immediate execution in certain cases of ejectment, &c.

155. When in a suit brought by a landlord to eject a ryot liable to ejectment under the provisions of this Act, or to eject a farmer or other tenant holding only for a limited period after the determination of his lease or tenancy, or an agent after the determination of his agency or to enforce any attachment or ejectment expressly authorized by any Regulation or Act, the Court passes a decree in favour of the plaintiff, no application for execution in the form provided in Section 235 of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be necessary, but such Court shall forthwith, upon the plaintiff depositing in Court the necessary expenses, make an order for delivery of possession in execution of the decree: provided, however, that in cases to which Section 152 is applicable, no such order shall be made until after the expiration of fifteen days from the date of the decree.

Article 178 of the Digest. Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, s. 54.

In such cases, execution not to be stayed, pending appeal.

156. It shall not be lawful for the Court to entertain an application for stay of execution of the order mentioned in Section 155 pending an appeal, and no person, who shall have been evicted under any such order, shall be restored to possession so long as the decree under which such order was issued shall remain unreversed.

Article 179 of the Digest. This reproduces Act VIII (B.C.) of 1879, s. 102, which has been held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court not to be ultra vires of the Bengal Legislative Council (I. L. R. 3 Calc., 151).

No appeal from any decree of a District Judge or any Additional Judge for money below Rs. 100, unless right to enhance rent or title to land be determined by judgment.

157. Nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to alter the law as established by Act X of 1859 passed by the Governor-General in Council, so as to confer a right of appeal in any suit tried and decided under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure or of Chapter XVIII of this Act by a District Judge or Additional Judge originally or in appeal, if the amount sued for or the value of the property claimed does not exceed one hundred rupees, and if no question of right to enhance or vary the rent of a ryot or tenant, or no question relating to title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment[b] in such suit.

A sues B for the rent of certain land. B pleads that the rent of the land is payable to C, and not to A. C is not made a party to the suit, which is decreed against B. No question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto is determined by the judgment in this suit.

Article 180 of the Digest.

Review of judgment not admissible after 30 days.

158. No application for a review of a judgment or order passed in any such suit as is mentioned in Section 149 shall be received by a Civil Court other than the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, after the expiration of thirty days from the date of such order or judgment.

Notice or summons not specially provided for to be served under the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure for service of summons on defendant.

159. Any notice or summons, which it is necessary to issue under this Act, and for the service of which no special provision is made, shall be served under the provisions contained in Section 174 for service of summons on a defendant.

Suits against Agents.

Suits for money or accounts or papers against agents employed in collection or receipt of rents or management of land.

160. When an agent employed by a landlord in the collection or receipt of rents or the management of land neglects or refuses to deliver to such landlord any money, accounts or papers which have come into or have been in his hands in the course of such employment, or neglects or refuses to render a proper account of his receipts and disbursements, such landlord may sue such agent in the Civil Court.

Note the effect of the words in brackets. The provisions of the existing law do not apply to amlah who do not collect the rents from the tenants, but who receive them from those who collect.

Landlord may sue for exact sum or specific accounts or papers when known.

When such landlord is able to ascertain the exact sum of money or the specific accounts or papers in the hands of such agent, he shall state such sum or describe such accounts or papers in his plaint.

As, for example, when an account has been rendered and a balance struck.—See 20 W. R. 309.

When exact sum or specific papers not known in consequence of agent not having rendered proper accounts, landlord may ask that Court take an account.

161. When such landlord is unable to ascertain the exact sum of money or the papers, vouchers or other documents in the hands of the agent in consequence of such agent having neglected or refused to render proper accounts, such landlord shall set forth this fact in his plaint and may pray that the Court take an account from such agent and make a decree for the payment of such sum of money, if any, which upon taking such account may be found to be due to such landlord, and for the delivery of such papers, vouchers or other documents as may be found to be in the hands of such agent.

It is the duty of every agent to keep and render proper accounts—See Story on Agency, p.p. 235-236.

162. The provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to every plaint presented under Section 160 or Section 161; but, in the case of any such plaint as is described in Section 161, the summons to the defendant issued under Section 64 of the said Code shall call upon such defendant to show cause why he should not render a full and satisfactory account of all sums received and disbursed by him, and of all papers, vouchers or other documents which may have come into his hands in the discharge of his duties as agent.

See Story's Equity Jurisprudence, Vol. I, p. 465 and following pages; and 24 W. R. 70.

Summons to defendant to require him to show cause why he should not render accounts.

If defendant fail to show cause or do not show sufficient cause, Court shall make an order that a proper account be filed, and shall fix a date by which it shall be filed. Such order how enforced.

163. If such defendant fails to show cause or does not, in the opinion of the Court, show sufficient cause why he should not render such full and satisfactory account, the Court shall make an order requiring such defendant to file such account in Court and shall fix a day on or before which such account shall be so filed. Such order may be enforced in the manner provided in Section 260 of The Code of Civil Procedure.

See Section 121 of the Oudh Act, XIX of 1868.

Plaintiff to be allowed time to examine account filed, and object. Day to be fixed for hearing objections. Decree to be made after hearing.

164. When such defendant files such account, the Court shall allow the plaintiff a reasonable time to examine it and file objections thereto, if he desires to make any such objections, and shall then fix a date upon which such Court shall proceed to hear such objections, if any, and to examine such account. If upon such hearing it appears that the plaintiff is not entitled to any sum of money or to any papers, vouchers, or other documents in the hands of the defendant, such suit shall be dismissed. If it appears that the plaintiff is entitled to a sum of money or to any such papers, vouchers, or other documents, a decree shall be made for the payment or delivery thereof, and such sum of money, papers, vouchers or other documents shall be specified in such decree.

CHAPTER XVIII.—OF THE PROCEDURE IN SUITS FOR THE RECOVERY OF ARREARS OF RENT, &C., AND CERTAIN OTHER SUITS.

Procedure contained in this Chapter to be followed in certain suits, when relation of landlord and tenant is admitted or proved.

165. When the relation of landlord and tenant is admitted or proved to subsist between the parties, the Procedure contained in this Chapter shall apply to the following suits, that is to say—

(1) to suits for the recovery of the rent of land situated outside the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort-William in Bengal:

(2) to suits for ejectment from any such land:

(3) to suits brought to recover possession of any such land:

(4) to suits for damages on account of illegal exaction of rent or cesses, or on account of the refusal of receipts:

(5) to suits brought under Section 52 to compel the registration of successions to, or transfers of, tenures, undertenures, or occupancy holdings.

District Judge may direct any such suit to be tried under the ordinary provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure.

Provided that it shall be competent to the District Judge, upon the application of any party thereto, to direct that any such suit shall be tried according to the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure, and upon such order being made the whole of such provisions shall be applicable to the trial of such suit.

The Plaint, &c.

Plaint to be presented to Civil Court of lowest grade competent to try suit.

166. The suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint. Such plaint shall be presented to the Civil Court of the lowest grade competent to try such suit.

Place of suing how determined when there are different local limits of jurisdiction.

If the land mentioned in Section 148 is situate within the limits of different districts or within the limits of a single district, but within the jurisdiction of different courts, the provisions of Section 19 of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable.

While such suit is pending, no subsequent suit to be entertained for same subject-matter between same parties.

While a suit so instituted is pending, no court shall receive or try another suit instituted for the same relief between the same parties, or parties under whom they or any of them claim, and in which the matter in issue is directly and substantially in issue in the suit so previously instituted.

Particulars to be contained in plaint.

167. The plaint must contain the following particulars:—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought;

(b) the name, description, and place of residence of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description, and place of residence of the defendant;

(d) a simple concise statement of the claim;

(e) the date, when the cause of action arose;

(f) a demand of the relief prayed for; and

(g) in suits concerned with tenures, undertenures, holdings, or land, the extent, situation, designation, and boundaries of the same; or, where the plaintiff is unable to give the boundaries, in lieu thereof a description sufficient for identification.

See Article 185 of the Digest.

The provisions of Section 49 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the language of the plaint shall be applicable.

Article 187 of the Digest. Section 51 (as amended) of The Code of Civil Procedure.

Plaint to be signed and verified.

168. (a) The plaint shall be signed by the plaintiff, and in any case in which he has employed a pleader by such pleader. It shall also be verified at the foot by the plaintiff or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case: provided that if the plaintiff by reason of absence or for other good cause is unable to sign the plaint, it may be signed by any person duly authorized by him in this behalf.

The provisions of Section 52 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the contents and signature of the verification shall be applicable.

Rejection, amendment, return, and admission of plaints.

(b) The provisions of Sections 53, 54, 55, 56, and 57 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to rejecting, amending, and returning plaints shall, so far as they are relevant, apply to plaints presented under Section 166. When any such plaint is admitted, the Court shall cause the particulars mentioned in Section 167 to be entered in the Register prescribed by Section 147. Such entries shall be numbered in a separate series for each year according to the order in which plaints are admitted.

Parties, &c.

Substituting, dismissing, and adding of parties.

169. The provisions of Section 27 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to substituting or adding a plaintiff for, or to, a plaintiff suing, and the provisions of Section 32 of the same Code as to dismissing or adding parties, shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter: provided that the Court shall not add as a party to any suit tried under the procedure contained in this Chapter a person setting up a title adverse to the plaintiff or defendant in respect of the subject-matter of the suit: but any question of title disputed between any such person and a party to the suit may be decided in such suit as between the parties thereto, if the decision of Person claiming adversely to the landlord or tenant, who are parties to the suit, not to be added as a party.

such question is necessary to the proper determination of the suit.

Illustration.

A, a proprietor, sues B, a ryot, for the rent of a holding, and files in court a kabuliyat alleged to have been executed for such holding by B in his favour. B denies the execution of the kabuliyat, and pleads that his holding forms part, not of A's estate, but of the estate of X, a neighbouring proprietor. X appears, makes a similar allegation, and desires to be made a party to the suit. The Court shall not make X a party to the suit, but shall confine itself to the question of the genuineness of the kabuliyat.

Provisions of Code of Civil Procedure as to joinder of causes of action, transfer of suits, and employment of recognized Agents and Pleaders made applicable to suits under this Chapter.

170. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say,

Section 45 as to the joinder of causes of action;

Section 25 as to the transfer of suits; and Section 36, Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 37, Sections 38, 39, 40, and 41 as to the employment of Recognized Agents and Pleaders.

Documentary Evidence, &c.

Certain provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the production, &c., of documentary evidence made applicable to suits under this Chapter.

171. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the production, admission, rejection and return of documentary evidence shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say—

Section 59 as to the production of any document upon which plaintiff sues, and the delivery of such document or a copy thereof, and as to a list of the documents relied on by plaintiff as evidence:

Section 60 as to stating in whose possession or power a document is:

Section 62 as to production of shop-books and marking or returning entries therein:

Section 63 as to inadmissibility of documents not produced when plaint is filed:

Section 137 as to Court sending for papers from its own records or from other Courts; provided that any such affidavit as is mentioned in the said Section 137 may be made by a mukhtar or by any person acquainted with the facts:

Section 138 as to documentary evidence being in readiness at the first hearing:

Section 139 as to the effect of the non-production of documents:

Section 140 as to the Court receiving documents and rejecting irrelevant or inadmissible documents:

Section 141 as to placing documents on the record, as to marking and filing proved documents, and as to entries in books:

Section 142 as to marking and returning rejected documents:

Section 143 as to the Court ordering documents to be impounded; and Section 144 as to the return of documents admitted in evidence.

Proceedings preliminary to Hearing.

172. When the plaint has been registered under Section 168, a summons may be issued to each defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified—

Issue of summons to defendant. Appearance how to be made.

Article 191 of the Digest. C. C. P., Section 64.

(a) in person, or

(b) by a pleader, duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or

(c) by a pleader, accompanied by some other person able to answer all such questions.

Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court: provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim.

Personal appearance of parties.

The provisions of Sections 66 and 67 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the personal appearance of a plaintiff or defendant, and of Section 69 of the same Code as to fixing the day for the appearance of the defendant, shall apply to all cases instituted and tried under this Chapter.

173. The summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit. It shall direct the defendant to produce any document, the production of which is required by the plaintiff, or upon which such defendant may desire to rely in support of his defence. It shall further instruct the defendant to bring his witnesses on the day specified, if they are willing to attend without summons, or, if they are not so willing, to have summons served upon them in sufficient time to enable them to be present on such day.

Summons to be for final disposal of case, and to direct defendant to produce documents and witnesses.

Article 192 of the Digest. C. C. P., Sections 68, 70, and 71.

174. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say—

Provisions for service of summons on defendant.

Articles 193, 194, 195, and 196 of the Digest.

Section 72 as to delivery of summons for service on defendant:

Section 73 as to mode of service:

Section 74 as to service on several defendants, except the proviso:

Section 77 as to service on agent in charge of immovable property:

Section 78 as to service on adult male member of defendant's family:

Section 79 as to person served signing an acknowledgment:

Section 80 as to procedure when defendant or other person refuses to sign the acknowledgment or cannot be found:

Section 81 as to endorsement of time and manner of service:

Section 82 as to examination of serving officer and substituted service:

Section 83 as to the effect of substituted service:

Section 84 as to fixing time for appearance, when service is substituted:

Section 85 as to service of summons when defendant resides within jurisdiction of another Court and has no agent to accept service:

Section 86 as to service within the Presidency Town:

Section 87 as to service on defendant in jail:

Section 88 as to procedure, if jail be in a different district:

Section 91 as to substitution of a letter for a summons:

Section 92 as to the mode of sending such letter:

Section 93 as to process being served at the expense of the party issuing it:

Section 94 as to notices and orders in writing being served as summonses; and

Section 95 as to postage:

provided that if, in any suit for arrears of the rent of a transferable tenure, undertenure or holding, service of summons on the defendant cannot be effected in accordance with the above provisions, the Court may direct that a copy of such summons be posted up in some conspicuous place upon the land included in such tenure, undertenure or holding, and that this shall be deemed a good and sufficient service.

See Article 197 of the Digest; and Sections 477, 478, C. C. P.

Arrest of the defendant before judgment allowed in certain cases, but not in case of tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding hypothecated for its own rent.

175. If in any such suit as is mentioned in Clause (1) of Section 165 the plaintiff presents with his plaint an application for the arrest of the defendant before judgment, on the ground that, if a summons be issued in the first instance, such defendant will abscond instead of appearing to answer the claim, the Court shall examine the plaintiff or some one on his behalf acquainted with the facts and shall inspect the documents, if any, produced by the plaintiff, and if it is satisfied—

(a) that the defendant is resident within the district in which such court is held;

(b) that there are primâ facie grounds for believing the claim to be well-founded; and

(c) that if a summons be issued in the first instance, the defendant will abscond instead of appearing to answer the claim;

Article 176 of the Digest.

the Court may issue a warrant for bringing the defendant before it to show cause why he should not give security for payment of the amount claimed by the plaintiff: provided that no such warrant shall be issued in a suit for arrears of rent of any such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding as is mentioned in Section 64.

Article 198 of the Digest.

Time for return of warrant. Notice to be served on defendant when arrested.

176. When any such warrant is issued, the Court shall fix a reasonable time for the return thereof, and the officer entrusted with the service shall at the time of arresting the defendant deliver to him a notice containing the particulars of the claim, and requiring the defendant, if he contest the same, to bring with him any document upon which he may intend to rely in support of his defence.

Article 199 of the Digest.

Procedure when defendant is arrested and brought before the Court under warrant.

177. In any case in which a defendant is arrested under any such warrant, he shall be brought with all convenient speed before the Court, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, and if the defendant fails to show cause to the contrary, require him to give security for payment of the amount claimed by the plaintiff, and, in default of such security being given, may commit such defendant to the Civil Jail to be there detained until he shall furnish such security or deposit such sum as the Court may order: provided that the defendant may at this stage apply to be declared an insolvent, in which event the provisions of Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable.

The provisions of Section 480 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to an application by a surety to be discharged shall be applicable to any case in which security is given by the defendant: and the provisions of Section 482 of the same Code as to subsistence allowance shall be applicable to any case in which the defendant is committed to the Civil Jail.

Article 200 of the Digest.

Procedure if warrant of arrest cannot be served upon the defendant.

178. If the defendant cannot be arrested under the warrant, the Court may on the application of the plaintiff either postpone the case for such period as it may think proper to enable such plaintiff to apply for another warrant, or may forthwith issue a proclamation, to be affixed in the Court-house and at the residence of the defendant, fixing a day for the hearing of the case, which shall not be less than ten days from the date of the publication of such proclamation at the residence of the defendant. If the defendant shall appear in pursuance of the proclamation, he shall be dealt with as provided in Section 177.

Compensation for arrest obtained without reasonable cause.

179. If it shall appear to the Court that the arrest of the defendant was applied for without reasonable cause, the Court may in its decree award to such defendant such sum as it may deem a reasonable compensation for any injury or loss caused by reason of such arrest or of his detention in jail during the pendency of the suit.

Article 202 of the Digest.

Provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to attachment before judgment to apply to suits for arrears of rent.

180. The provisions of Sections 483 to 491 (inclusive) of The Code of Civil Procedure, relating to attachment before judgment and compensation for improper attachments, shall be applicable to all such suits as are mentioned in Clause (1) of Section 165: provided that, in a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent due on account of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding to which the provisions of Section 64 are applicable, no such attachment before judgment shall be directed unless the plaintiff can satisfy the Court that such arrears, together with interest and costs of the suit, are not likely to be satisfied by the sale proceeds of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding.

See Article 111 of the Digest.

Standing crops, &c., attached may be reaped, gathered, and stored by defendant, or, if defendant neglect, by plaintiff.

181. Standing crops and other ungathered products, which have been attached under Section 180 may, notwithstanding such attachment, be reaped and gathered by the defendant, and may be stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him for the purpose. If the defendant neglects to do so, the plaintiff may cause such crops or products to be so reaped or gathered and may store them in such granaries or places as aforesaid or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

See C. C. P., s. 498.

Ad interim sale of crops or products which cannot be kept without deterioration.

The Court may, on the application of any party to the suit, order the sale by any person named in such order, and in such manner and on such terms as it thinks fit, of any such crops or products which cannot be stored and kept without deterioration or loss.

Article 214 of the Digest.

Provisions as to the summoning and attendance of witnesses.

182. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure relating to the summoning and attendance of witnesses shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say—

Section 159 as to summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents:

Section 160 as to expenses of witnesses being paid into Court on applying for summons, and as to the scale of such expenses:

Section 161 as to tender of expenses to witnesses:

Section 162 as to procedure where insufficient sum is paid in, and where witness is detained more than one day:

Section 163 as to time, place, and purpose of attendance being specified in the summons:

Section 164 as to summons to produce document:

Section 165 as to power to require persons present in Court to give evidence:

Section 166 as to the manner of serving summons:

Section 167 as to time for serving summons:

Section 168 as to attachment of property of absconding witness:

Section 169 as to withdrawal of attachment, if witness appears:

Section 170 as to procedure, if witness fails to appear:

Section 171 as to Court of its own accord summoning strangers to suit as witnesses:

Section 172 as to persons summoned to give evidence being bound to attend:

Section 173 as to when such persons may depart:

Section 174 as to consequences of non-attendance, and of refusal to give evidence or produce documents:

Section 175 as to procedure when witness absconds:

Section 176 as to when persons are not bound to attend in person to give evidence:

Section 177 as to consequence of refusal of party to give evidence when called on by the Court; and

Section 178 as to rules relating to witnesses being applicable to parties summoned.

Appearance of Parties.

Provisions as to the appearance of the parties and consequence of non-appearance.

183. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure, relating to the appearance of the parties and the consequences of non-appearance, shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under this chapter, that is to say—

Section 96 as to appearance of parties on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer:

Section 97 as to dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay the fee for issuing it:

Section 98 as to dismissal of suit if neither party appear: Article 203 of the Digest.

Section 99 as to its being in such case competent to plaintiff to bring a fresh suit, or to Court to restore the suit to the file:

Section 100 as to the procedure, if plaintiff only appears: Article 205 of the Digest.

Section 101 as to the procedure where defendant appears on day of adjourned hearing and assigns good cause for previous non-appearance: Article 206 of the Digest.

Section 102 as to the procedure where defendant only appears: Article 204 of the Digest.

Section 103 as to decree by default against plaintiff being a bar to a fresh suit:

Section 105 as to the procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several plaintiffs:

Section 106 as to the procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several defendants:

Section 107 as to the consequence of non-attendance, without sufficient cause shown, of party ordered to appear in person:

Section 108 as to setting aside a decree ex parte against a defendant: and Section 109 as to no decree being set aside without notice to opposite party.

184. The defendant may, if he desires to do so, file a written statement of his defence. No other written statement shall be filed by either of the parties or received by the Court: provided that the Court may at any time call for a written statement and fix a time for presenting the same. See Article 208 of the Digest.

Defendant may file written statement of defence. No other written statement, unless called for by the Court.

185. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to payment of money into Court shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say— See Articles 170, 171, and 219 of the Digest.

Provisions as to payment of money into Court and interest on money so paid in, and as to set off.

Section 376 as to deposit by defendant of amount in satisfaction of claim:

Section 377 as to notice of deposit to plaintiff:

Section 378 as to interest on sum deposited not being allowed to plaintiff after receipt of notice:

Section 379 as to procedure where plaintiff accepts deposit as satisfaction in part or in full; and Section 111 as to set-off of ascertained sum legally recoverable.

186. The Court may of its own motion or upon the application of either party to the suit direct a local investigation in any case in which it deems fit. The provisions of Sections 392, 393, 397, 398, 399, and 400 of Court may direct a local investigation.

The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to every such investigation.

C. C. P., s. 155.

187. If either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment.

Judgment at once, if either party fails without sufficient reason to produce his evidence.

Adjournments.

188. The hearing of the suit may be adjourned to a future day to be named in the order of adjournment in the following cases, that is to say—

Hearing of suit may be adjourned in what cases.

Article 212 of the Digest.

(1) when either party is not present in person, and his Pleader or the person mentioned in Clause (c) of Section 172 is unable to answer a material question relating to the case, which the Court is of opinion that the party ought to answer and is likely to be able to answer, if present in person:

(2) when the Court, after proceeding as provided in Section 191, is of opinion that the parties are at issue upon some question upon which it is necessary to hear further evidence:

Article 215 of the Digest.

(3) when either party for sufficient reason, which shall be recorded by the Court, requires time for the production of evidence or for any other purpose.

In case (1) the Court shall direct the party to appear on the day to which the hearing is adjourned. In case (2) the Court shall frame an issue for trial at the adjourned hearing. In all cases the Court shall make such order as it sees fit with respect to the costs of the adjournment:

Costs of adjournment.

C. C. P., s. 56.

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing to be necessary for reasons to be recorded by the Judge with his own hand.

Hearing to be continuous.

Article 217 of the Digest.

189. The provisions of Section 157 of The Code of Civil Procedure as to the course to be pursued if the parties fail to appear on the day to which the hearing is adjourned, and of Section 158 of the same Code as to the Court proceeding to decide the suit notwithstanding that either party fails to produce his evidence shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter.

Course to be pursued, if parties fail to appear or produce their evidence at the adjourned hearing.

The Hearing.

Articles 208 and 209 of the Digest. Sections 117, 118, and 128 of C. C. P.

190. When both parties appear, in the manner directed in the summons or subsequently by the Court, upon the day appointed for the hearing or adjourned hearing, the Court shall—

When both parties present, Court to ascertain and record whether each admits or denies the allegations of fact and documents of the opposite party.

(1) ascertain from the defendant or his pleader, (a) whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact made in the plaint; (b) when he has not filed a written statement or the statement filed by him is insufficient, what allegations of fact he makes in reply to the plaint:

(2) ascertain from the plaintiff or his Pleader, whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact made by the defendant:

(3) ascertain from each party or his Pleader, whether he admits or denies the genuineness of any document produced by the opposite party.

The Court shall record such admissions and denials.

C. C. P., Sections 118, 119. Digest, Articles 208 and 209

191. The Court may then examine orally any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit, by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied; and may, if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party.

Oral examination of party or person able to answer material question.

The substance of such examination shall be reduced to writing by the Judge and shall form part of the record.

Substance of examination to be reduced to writing and form part of the record.

C. C P., Section 181.

192. The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and hearing and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge.

Witnesses to be examined in open Court, in presence and hearing of Judge.

New; but see C. C. P., Section 189.

It shall not be necessary to take down such evidence in writing at full length; but the Judge, as the examination of each witness proceeds, shall make a memorandum of what he deposes, sufficient to give the gist and substance of his evidence. Such memorandum shall be written by the Judge with his own hand and in his own language, or, if English is not his own language and he is able to make such memorandum in English, then in the English language. It shall further be signed by him and shall form part of the record.

Evidence of witnesses in what manner to be recorded.

C. C. P, Section 190.

If the Judge be rendered unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded, and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court. Every memorandum so made shall form part of the record.

Judge, rendered unable to make memorandum, to cause it to be made from his dictation.

193. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to all suits tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say—

Some provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure as to mode of recording evidence made applicable.

Section 186, as to any particular question and answer being taken down:

Section 188, as to remarks upon the demeanour of witnesses:

Section 191, as to power to deal with evidence taken down by Judge removed before conclusion of suit; and Section 193, as to power of Court to recall and examine a witness.

See Digest, Article 211.
C. C. P., s. 198.

194. After proceeding in accordance with the provisions of Sections 190, 191, 192, and 193, after considering the documents admitted or proved on behalf of each party, and after hearing any arguments which may be addressed to it by the parties or their Pleaders, the Court shall pronounce judgment in open Court usually at once, but, if this is not possible, then on some future day of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their Pleaders. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under this Chapter, that is to say—

Judgment when to be pronounced. Provisions of Code of Civil Procedure applicable thereto.

Section 199 as to power to pronounce judgment written by Judge's predecessor:

Section 200 as to the language of the judgment:

Section 203 as to contents of judgments of Courts other than Courts of Small Causes:

Section 219 as to judgment directing by whom costs are to be paid:

Section 220 as to power of Court in the matter of costs:

Section 221 as to costs being set off against any sum admitted or found to be due; and Section 222, so much only as relates to interest on costs.

195. (a) The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to the decree, that is to say—

Provisions as to the decree, its contents, &c.

Section 205, as to the date of the decree, and the Judge signing it:

Section 206, as to the contents of the decree, and power to amend it:

Section 210, as to payment by instalments: and Section 216, as to a set-off.

(b) A decree for money may direct that the amount decreed shall carry interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, until such amount is realized.

Interest on amount of decree.

(c) A decree in any of the suits mentioned in clause 1, 2, 3 or 5 of Section 165 shall contain the particulars mentioned in clause (g) of Section 167.

Decrees in certain suits describe the land.

(d) A decree for arrears of the rent of a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding and also for arrears of the rent of any other tenure, undertenure, or occupancy or other holding shall show separately the arrears decreed in respect of each tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding to which the provisions of Section 64 are applicable.

Decree to show separately arrears decreed in respect of each tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding liable to sale for its own arrears.

196. Certified copies of the judgment and decree shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court and at their expense.

C. C. P., s. 217.

Parties entitled to certified copies of judgment and decree.

Execution of Decrees.

General Provisions.

197. Application for execution shall be made by the decreeholder, or his pleader. Such application shall be in writing unless it is made at the time when judgment is pronounced, in which case it may be made verbally, subject, however, to the provisions of Section 201.

See Article 223 of the Digest.

Application for execution by whom to be made —to be in writing unless made when judgment is pronounced, in which case it may be made verbally.

198. The following provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable, so far as they are relevant, to the execution of decrees in suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter, that is to say—

Provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure applicable to the execution of decrees in suits under this Chapter.

Section 257A as to agreements to give time to judgment-debtor and for satisfaction of judgment-debt:

Section 258 as to payment to decreeholder:

Article 226 of the Digest. Section 268, C. C. P.

199. If the decree be for the ejectment of a ryot from land, or for restoring a ryot to the possession of land, such decree shall be executed by delivering the possession of such land to the party to whom it has been adjudged by the decree, or to such person as he appoints to receive delivery on his behalf, and, if need be, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate such land.

Mode of executing decree for ejectment of ryot or for restoring ryot to possession.

Article 227 of the Digest. Section 264, C. C. P.

200. If the decree be for the ejectment of a tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, or other person from land in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, or for restoring a tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, or other person to the possession of land in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, such decree shall be executed by affixing a copy of the execution-warrant in some conspicuous place on the land, and by proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum, or in such other mode as is customary, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree:

Mode of executing decree for ejecting, or restoring to possession a tenure-holder, undertenure-holder, or other person in possession of land occupied by tenant.

provided that, if the occupant can be found, a notice in writing containing such substance shall be served upon him, and in such case no proclamation need be made.

Procedure for the Sale of Tenures, Undertenures, and Holdings in Execution of Decrees for their own Rent.

See Section 64 of this Bill.

201. When a decree has been made wholly or partly for arrears of rent due for a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding, the first application for executing such decree in respect of such arrears shall, if in writing, contain, and, if made orally, be supplemented as soon as convenient by a written statement containing the following particulars, that is to say—

Form of application for execution of a decree for arrears of rent of a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding.

(a) the number of the suit;

(b) the names of the parties;

(c) the date of the decree;

(d) the amount of rent decreed;

(e) the amount of costs decreed;

(f) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree;

(g) a sufficient description of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding, containing the area and boundaries, as far as known;

(h) the annual rent of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding.

Copy of entry in Register prescribed by Section 54, to be filed with application.

In any case, in which such Register as is prescribed by Section 54 is kept, there shall with such application or written statement be filed a copy of so much of such Register as relates to such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding.

Article 151 of the Digest.

202. When such application or written statement has been presented in due form, the Court shall make an order for the sale of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding. If such application is not in due form, the Court may allow it to be amended or may reject it without prejudice to a fresh application in proper form.

If application in proper form, Court shall direct sale of tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding. If not in proper form, may be amended or rejected.

Article 152 of the Digest.

203. (a) When an order for the sale of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding has been made under Section 202, notice of the sale so ordered shall be given in the following manner, that is to say—

Notice of sale of tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding how to be published.

(1) by posting up in the court-house of the Court aforesaid, a notification containing the particulars specified in Section 201, and announcing that such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding will be sold on a date to be stated therein:

(2) by posting up a similar notification in the kachahri of the Collector of the District:

(3) when the decree is not executed by the District Judge, by posting up a similar notification in the Court-house of the District Judge:

(4) by posting up a similar notification on some conspicuous place upon the land of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding:

(5) by posting up a similar notification upon some conspicuous place in the town or village nearest to which such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding is situate.

(b) Such notification shall further announce that such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall first be put up to auction subject to the registered incumbrances specified in Section 206, and shall be sold subject to such incumbrances, if the sum bid is sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs: and that otherwise it may, if the decree-holder so desire, be sold free of all incumbrances on a subsequent day of which due notice will be given.

Notification to state that sale shall be subject to incumbrances, if sum bid satisfy decree, otherwise that sale may be made free of incumbrances.

(c) The date of the sale shall be so fixed that it shall be not less than twenty days from the date on which the notification is posted up as required by paragraph (1) of clause (a) and shall not fall on a holiday.

Date of the sale how to be fixed.

Or shall we say, before it is knocked down?

204. The amount of the decree, including the costs decreed, together with the costs incurred in order to the sale, may be paid into Court at any time before such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding is put up for sale and the bidding commences. The sale shall not be stayed unless such amount is so paid into Court, or unless the decreeholder makes an application in writing to this effect on the ground that the decree has been satisfied out of Court. In any such case no application for any further execution of the decree shall be received.

Sale to be stayed only by payment into Court of amount of decree with costs; or by confession of satisfaction by decreeholder.

See Articles 153 and 154 of the Digest.

205. The amount of the decree and costs mentioned in Section 204 may be paid into Court by any of the following persons, that is to say—

What persons may pay the amount of the decree and costs into Court, so as to stay the sale.

(a) by the judgment-debtor;

(b) by any one who alleges that he and not the judgment-debtor is the duly registered owner of the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding notified for sale, and produces a copy of such Register as is prescribed by Section 54 in support of such allegation;

(c) by any one who has an interest in, or lien upon, such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding;

(d) in the case of a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding being notified for sale, by any one having an interest which would be endamaged by the sale of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding free of incumbrances.

Article 35 to the Digest.

Any person who pays money into Court under Clause (c) or (d) shall be entitled to sue for the amount so paid as money lent, and to recover the same from the person in consequence of whose default to pay rent or in consequence of whose wrongful act the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding was notified for sale.

Person paying money into Court under clause (c) or (d) may sue defaulter for the same as money lent to him.

L. R. 1, I A. 189.

In the case of a tenure in respect of which the right of selling or bringing to sale has been specially reserved by stipulation in the engagements interchanged on the creation thereof, the provisions of Sections 138 and 139 shall further be applicable.

Sections 138 and 139 applicable in the case of certain tenures.

206. Upon the day appointed for the sale, such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall first be put up to auction, subject to incumbrances, that is to say, so as that the purchaser shall not be entitled to avoid any incumbrance created by the judgment-debtor or his predecessor in title; and, if the bidding reaches a sum sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs including the costs of sale, such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be sold subject to such incumbrances.

Tenure, undertenure, or holding to be first put up to sale subject to incumbrances, and sold, if bidding cover amount of decree and costs.

Explanation.—The term "incumbrances" in this Section means and includes every incumbrance, lien, sub-lease, or subordinate interest which the defaulting holder of the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding was by law competent to create in derogation of his own interest, and which was created by an instrument in writing duly registered, subject to this condition that a copy of such instrument have been served upon the person to whom the rent of such tenure, undertenure, or holding is payable. Every Registering Officer shall, when required, cause any such copy to be served on any such person in the manner provided in Part VII of The Indian Registration Act, 1877, for the service of summons. In the case of incumbrances created before the commencement of this Act by instruments in writing duly registered under the law applicable thereto, such copy may be served at any time within six months after such commencement. The purchaser at a sale under this Section shall be entitled to proceed within one year after he has knowledge of the same to avoid and annul every incumbrance, lien, sub-lease, or subordinate interest other than those above defined and specified.

Meaning of "incumbrances."

If bidding does not cover amount of decree and costs, and decreeholder desires a sale free of incumbrances, such sale may be ordered upon an adjourned date.

207. (a) If the bidding does not reach a sum sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs as aforesaid, and if the decreeholder thereupon desires that such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be sold free of incumbrances, the Officer holding the sale shall at his request withdraw such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding from the auction, and shall publicly intimate that it will, unless the said amount be paid into Court, be put up to auction and sold free of incumbrances upon some future sale-day not less than fifteen or more than thirty days afterwards. A Notification to the same effect shall be posted up with all convenient despatch on some conspicuous place upon the land of such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding. Upon such latter mentioned sale-day such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be put up to auction and sold free of incumbrances.

If no bid, decreeholder to be required to bid.

(b) If no bid is made for such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding when put up to auction under Clause (a) the decreeholder shall be required to bid, and, if he refuses to do so, he shall not be entitled to proceed to execute the decree against the person or other property, movable or immovable, of the judgment-debtor.

Article 242 of the Digest.

208. The following Rules shall be applicable to every sale made under Section 206 or Section 207.

Rules applicable to sales under Section 206 or Section 207.

(1) The sale shall be by auction upon the day or adjourned day appointed and notified as provided in Section 203, or Clause (a) of Section 207, or, if this be not convenient, upon the following open day. The decreeholder and all persons other than the defaulter may bid.

Article 213 of the Digest.

(2) The tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be knocked down to the highest bidder, and he shall be required to deposit immediately twenty-five per centum of the amount of his bid. In default of such deposit, the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be put up again and sold forthwith upon the same day, or, if this be not convenient, upon the following open day; and if the price realized is less than the amount bid by the person who failed to deposit twenty-five per centum of his bid, the difference may be recovered from such person under the law for enforcing the payment of money in satisfaction of a decree for arrears of rent.

Article 244 of the Digest.

(3) The balance of the purchase money shall be paid up before sunset of the eighth day from that on which the sale took place, such sale-day being reckoned as one of the eight, or, if the eighth day be a holiday, then on the first open day. If such balance be not so paid, the deposit shall be forfeited to Government; the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding shall be resold under Clauses (1) and (2); the purchaser, who failed to make good the balance as aforesaid, shall forfeit all claim to such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding, or to any part of the sum for which it may be subsequently sold; and, if such sum be less than the price bid by such purchaser, the difference may be recovered from him under the law for enforcing the payment of money in satisfaction of a decree for arrears of rent.

Articles 156 and 245 of the Digest.

Sale to be confirmed when price paid. Certificate to be given to the purchaser. Officer to be deputed to put him in possession.

Code of Civil Procedure, s. 316.

209. (a) When the whole of the purchase money has been paid, the Court shall confirm the sale, if there be no valid reason to the contrary; and shall grant a Certificate stating the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser, and the date of such sale. Such purchaser shall, if required, produce and show such Certificate when applying for registration under the provisions of Section 46. If the purchaser makes application to such effect, and if he deposits the necessary costs, the Court shall depute an officer to put him in possession of the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding, and to notify the fact of the purchase to the ryots and other persons whom it may concern.

Article 245 of the Digest. Consider whether a certain time, say three months, should not be fixed for making this application.

Benami purchaser not recognized.

(b) The provisions of Section 317 of The Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to every certified purchaser under Clause (a).

Article 155 of the Digest.

Purchaser under Clause (a) of Section 207 to acquire tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding free of all incumbrances not made under written authority of landlord.

210. The person who purchases a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding under the provisions of Clause (a) of Section 207 shall be entitled to proceed within one year to avoid and annul all incumbrances imposed thereupon by any holder thereof, his representatives or assignees, unless, in the case of incumbrances allowed by law, the right of making the same was expressly granted by the written engagement under which the holder was originally let into possession, or by the subsequent written authority of the person so letting into possession, his representatives or assignees:

Proviso. Khoodkasht ryots or resident and hereditary cultivators may not be ejected.

provided that no such purchaser may eject Khoodkasht ryots or resident and hereditary cultivators, or cancel bonâ fide engagements made with such ryots or cultivators except it be proved in a regular suit brought by such purchaser for the adjustment of the rent, that a higher rent would have been fairly demandable at the time when such engagements were contracted:

provided also that no such incumbrances may be avoided in any case in which the purchaser is the judgment-debtor or a person acting in fraudulent collusion with him for the purpose of disencumbering the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding.

Incumbrances may not be avoided, if judgment-debtor or person colluding with him purchase.

Subject to these provisions any such purchaser shall be entitled to proceed under the provisions of this Act to enhance the rent of the ryots holding land in the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding purchased by him; but no ryot shall be liable to ejectment otherwise than as provided in this Act.

Purchaser may enhance rents according to law; but may not eject save as provided in this Act.

211. The following Rules shall be observed in disposing of the proceeds of the sale, that is to say—

Article 246 of the Digest.

Rules for disposal of the sale proceeds.

(1) There shall first be paid to the decree-holder the costs incurred by him in bringing the tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding to sale.

Costs of sale to be paid first.

(2) There shall in the next place be paid to the decree-holder the amount due to him under the decree, in execution of which the sale was made.

Amount due under the decree to be next satisfied.

(3) If there remains a balance after these sums have been liquidated, there shall be paid to the decree-holder therefrom any rent which may have become due to him for such tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding after the date upon which the latest arrear recovered by the decree became due: provided that the decree-holder shall not under this rule recover any rent which he might have included in the suit in which he obtained such decree: and provided also that in no case shall he obtain rent for more than six months after the date of the final decree. If the judgment-debtor dispute the decree-holder's right to receive such rent, the Court shall determine such dispute, and such determination shall have the force of a decree.

New.

If balance remains, rent which fell due after the arrears recovered by the decree may be paid therefrom.

(4) If there remains a balance after the liquidation of the rent mentioned in Clause 3, such balance shall be paid to the judgment-debtor upon his application.

Article 246 of the Digest.

Balance, if any, after liquidating such rent, to be paid to the judgment-debtor.

212. (a) The judgment-debtor may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground that there was a material irregularity in publishing or conducting it, and that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity: and the Court may set aside such sale, if material irregularity and such substantial injury are proved, and not otherwise.

Articles 247 and 248 of the Digest, and see Code of Civil Procedure, s. 311.

Sale may be set aside only if material irregularity and substantial injury are proved.

Consider question of appeal.

(b) In any case in which a sale is ordered to be set aside, the order shall direct that the purchase money be refunded to the purchaser with or without interest, as the Court in its discretion may see fit; and such order may be enforced by the Court as a decree for money against any person into whose hands such purchase money or any portion thereof may Order setting aside sale to direct refund of the purchase-money, and may be enforced as a money decree.

have passed, if such person have been served with notice of the application made under Clause (a).

When judgment-debtor obtained possession, Court may take an account.

(c) [If such purchaser has received possession of the tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, the Court may take an account of any rent paid by him to the landlord of such tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding, and also of any rents or profits received by him, and may make an order directing the payment of any balance found thereupon to be due to the person entitled to receive the same. Such order shall have the force of a decree: provided that the taking of such account shall not be permitted to delay the restoration of the judgment-debtor to possession.]

Articles 167 and 172 of the Digest; Section 354, C. C. P.

Cases in which decree may be enforced by attachment and sale of movable and immovable property and by arrest and imprisonment of judgment-debtor.

213. In the following cases, that is to say,

(1) when a tenure, undertenure, or occupancy holding has been sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due in respect thereof, and the amount of such decree has not been satisfied by the proceeds of such sale:

(2) when a decree has been made for arrears of rent due in respect of land not forming a tenure, undertenure or occupancy holding:

(3) when a decree has been made for damages on account of the illegal exaction of rent or cesses, or on account of the refusal of receipts:

(4) when a decree has been made for costs:

the decree may be enforced by any or all of the following methods, that is to say (a) by the attachment and sale of the movable property of the judgment-debtor; (b) by the attachment and sale of the immovable property of the judgment-debtor; (c) by the arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor.

Res Judicata: proviso.

223. The provisions of section 13 of The Code of Civil Procedure shall be applicable to all suits instituted and tried under the provisions of this Chapter: provided that the decision in any such suit of a question concerning the title to, or any interest in, immovable property shall not be a bar to the trial of the same question in any suit tried under The Code of Civil Procedure and not under the provisions of this Chapter.

Articles 182 and 252 of the Digest.

Discretion to issue process free of charge.

224. If in any case a Civil Court is satisfied that a party is unable to pay the cost of any necessary process in any suit instituted or pending under this Chapter, it may direct such process to be served free of charge.

See Act IV of 1876.

Revenue Agent may in Munsif's Court do any act which may be done by a pleader.

225. Any thing which may be done by a Pleader under the provisions of this Chapter or under any of the provisions of The Code of Civil Procedure mentioned herein, may be done in any case instituted in the Court of a Munsif by any such Revenue Agent as is mentioned in the proviso to Section 10 of Act XVIII of 1879.

APPENDIX.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMISSION.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMISSION TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF AMENDING THE RENT LAW OF BENGAL.

No. 832—337LR, dated Calcutta, the 3rd April 1879.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Department,
To—The Secy. to the Govt. of India, Dept. of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce.

THE nature and scope of the Bill "to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend the law relating to rent," now pending before the Bengal Legislative Council, were fully explained to the Government of India in my letter No. 3060, dated 11th December last. A copy of the Bill in the form in which it was introduced, and of the statement of objects and reasons, is now enclosed for readier reference. Since that time the measure has been much discussed, not only by the officers of Government and others to whom it was specially referred, and by the Select Committee of Council appointed to report upon it, but also in the public press, Vernacular and English, and a great mass of valuable suggestions has been brought together which it has not yet been found possible to arrange and digest.

2. I am now directed to forward, for the consideration of the Government of India, a copy of the Bill as preliminarily amended by the Select Committee, together with their Report on the same, and to invite attention to the remarks made in paragraph 14 of that Report. It will be seen that the Committee urge very strongly the propriety of taking up the revision of the Rent Law of Bengal in a much more comprehensive manner than was contemplated at first by this Government. The Lieutenant-Governor, it will be remembered, in view of the loud and constant complaints put forward by the zemindars as to the difficulty under the present law of collecting even undisputed rents, was anxious to provide them at an early date with a reasonably summary procedure to enable them to overcome the passive resistance of their ryots, provided that the ryots' tenure was at the same time so protected and strengthened as to obviate any fear of their being made to suffer unduly in the process. It is found, however, almost impossible to frame a procedure which shall be perfectly fair to both parties, and yet afford such special facilities to the zemindar as he seeks to secure. The procedure provided in the amended Bill is now declared by the zemindars to be so carefully guarded as to be practically of little use to them, and they have by their recognized organs expressed themselves ready to postpone their demand for a special procedure if only the whole subject of the rent law can be brought under adequate and detailed revision. It may indeed be found that if the substantive law of landlord and tenant can be put upon a more clear and intelligible basis, if the difficulties that have attended the working of the law of 1859 are duly considered and removed, and if the ordinary Rent Procedure is made more simple and expeditious, the necessity for having any special or summary procedure will not continue to be felt.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor finds that the suggestions of the Select Committee in this respect have the entire support of the Board of Revenue and of all the more experienced Revenue Officers in Bengal, as well as of the native community. It is felt certainly that the task is one of considerable magnitude and difficulty, in which it is impossible confidently to anticipate success, but the general opinion is that the attempt should once for all be made.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor believes that the best mode of dealing with the subject will be to appoint a small official Commission of experienced revenue and judicial officers, who should, in the first place, prepare a careful analysis and digest of the existing Rent Law as set forth in the Acts relating to that subject, and in the decisions of the courts since the passing of Act X of 1859. All the conflicting decisions of the courts, and all the omissions in the Acts themselves, would thus be brought clearly into view. The Commission would then consider the suggestions for amendment that have been put forward of late years, and endeavour to prepare a draft Bill embodying such additions to the substantive law, and such improvements in the law of procedure, as may commend themselves to their judgment. The Bill with the report of the Commission would be published and circulated, and subjected to close scrutiny. The opinions of High Court Judges and of the divisional and district officers, judicial and executive, would be sought for and collated. The public would have every opportunity given it of being heard upon the subject; and eventually a measure based upon the results of this free discussion and deliberation might be introduced into the local Council with the sanction of the Government of the India.

5. In considering the composition of the proposed Commission, the Lieutenant-Governor has felt it incumbent upon him at the present time to avoid as much as possible the creation of special appointments, but it will be necessary that one member of the Commission should have his hands free of other duties to enable him to find time to prepare, under the instructions of his colleagues, the Digest and draft Bill. For this duty the Lieutenant-Governor would select Mr. C. D. Field, LL.D., Judge of Burdwan, than whom no one could be better fitted for the task. Mr. Field would be placed on special duty, receiving his present pay and allowances, and a junior officer would be appointed temporarily to act for him. The acting allowances of this officer would be the only extra charge to Government, and this can easily be met from the ordinary provision for administration in the provincial estimates. The members of the Commission would then be—

(1) Hon'ble H. L. Dampier, Member of the Board of Revenue.
(2) „ J O'Kinealy, Legal Remembrancer.
(3) Mr. C. D. Field, LL.D., Judge of Burdwan, on special duty.
(4) „ H. L. Harrison, Secretary to the Board of Revenue
(5) Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal, Subordinate Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs.*

6. I am to solicit the early approval of the Governor-General in Council to these arrangements. It is most desirable that the Commission should begin work at once.

No. 973—393LR, dated Calcutta, the 18th April 1879.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General Department,

To—The HON'BLE H. L. DAMPIER, Member of the Board of Revenue.

I AM directed to forward for your information a copy of a letter No. 832—337LR, dated the 3rd instant, to the address of the Government of India, in the Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce Department, proposing the appointment of a Commission to consider the question of amending the general Rent Law of these provinces and (if possible) frame a Bill which might form the basis of future legislation on that subject.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor has been informed by telegram that His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has approved of the appointment of the Commission, and of Mr. Field's deputation on special duty, in the manner suggested in my letter, for a period of four months. Arrangements will be made to relieve Mr Field as soon as possible, and on his arrival in Calcutta, I am to request you will, as President of the Commission (to which office the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to appoint you) call the members together and arrange with the least possible delay the plan of working most likely to secure the objects in view. The Assistant Secretary to this Government in the Legislative Department will be ex-officio Secretary to the Commission.

3. All papers recorded either in the Legislative or Revenue Departments of this Government, bearing upon the question of the amendment of the Rent Law, will be made available to the Commission on its calling for them. The report and proceedings of the Behar Rent Committee, which have recently been received by Government, will be specially referred to it. The Hon'ble Judges of the High Court will also be asked to give any assistance that they can to the Commission in the way of furnishing it with any minutes or reports of the Judges or of subordinate judicial officers which might, in the opinion of the Court, be unobjectionably given, and assist its deliberations.

4. I am to request that the Commission will keep a formal record of its proceedings and inform Government in the Revenue Department from time to time of the progress made, and of the general character of any proposed modifications of the law that may commend themselves to its members.

MINUTES OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMISSION APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THE AMENDMENT OF THE RENT LAW OF BENGAL.

THREE preliminary meetings of the Rent Commission were held at the office of the Assistant Secretary to the Bengal Government, Legislative Department, on the 26th of April, the 17th and the 24th of May 1879.

At these meetings Mr. Field laid before the Commission the lines upon which he proposed to prepare a Digest of the existing Rent Law. His plan was to incorporate the whole of the statute-law and case-law; and to take Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law of England as his model. This plan was agreed to: and Mr. Field then prepared a list of the Regulations and Acts and parts thereof concerned with the subject of landlord and tenant. This list was considered, and it was resolved that the Settlement Law should not be incorporated with the Digest, and that the Digest should deal with agricultural rent only, including in that term the rent of bastu land.

A letter was addressed to the High Court asking the Judges to direct all Moonsifs to make out a list of all sales of land for Rs. 1,000 or less in execution of decrees and of the purchasers at such sales for the year 1878-79.

A letter was also addressed to the Inspector-General of Registration asking for returns of sales of land registered during 1878-79, the value of which was not more than Rs. 1,000.

The Commission then adjourned pending the completion of Mr. Field's Digest.

* NOTE.—Mr. A. Mackenzie and Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy were subsequently added to the Commission; the first on the 2nd December 1879, and the two latter on the 15th idem.

The Digest was completed and submitted to Government with letter No. 14, dated 19th August 1879.

It was widely circulated, and opinions were invited from a large number of persons official and non-official. During this interval some Members of the Commission were absent on leave. On their return, and on receipt of the opinions invited, the Commission resumed their sittings on the 9th December 1879.

Fourth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 9th December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, Harrison, and Mackenzie; and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

1. THE returns of the District Judges showing the sales of tenures and occupancy rights in each district were laid before the Commission, together with an abstract of them prepared by Mr. Field.

2. The opinions elicited by the letter of the Bengal Government calling for opinions on the Digest were also laid before the Commission with a précis of their contents prepared by Mr. Field.

3. The first question which arose in connection with this correspondence was whether the new Bill should, in respect of form and arrangement, follow the lines of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, and Act X of 1859, or whether the plan of the Digest was preferable.

The advantage of adhering to the old form was pointed out; but it was remarked that in view of the thorough revision of the law contemplated it was better to adopt as far as possible a more scientific form, placing the substantive law before the law regarding procedure, and as the Digest has been prepared on this principle, it would be better to adopt it in the draft Bill

4. The second question discussed was, how far the wording of the old law should be adhered to. Mr. Mackenzie urged the importance of retaining words and clauses the meaning of which had in many cases been authoritatively determined after much litigation. Mr. O'Kinealy fully concurred in this, citing an instance of the inconvenience and expense entailed by verbal alterations. Mr. Field, on the other hand, was of opinion that some change in the phraseology, especially of the substantive law, would be occasionally necessary: (1) for the sake of uniformity; (2) in order to incorporate in the draft Bill the changes agreed upon by the Commission; (3) in order to clear up doubtful points arising out of judicial decisions; but that these points should indicate the limits of alteration.

Eventually it was resolved that the onus would lie on Mr. Field of justifying each departure from the language of the Acts now in force. Mr. Field accepted this view.

5. The Digest was then taken up article by article, and the preliminary chapter containing definitions occupied the Commission for the remainder of the sitting.

6. It was agreed that the definitions could only be settled provisionally, as objections to many definitions might come to notice in discussing subsequent articles.

7. The definition in the Digest of 'estate' was agreed to with a verbal alteration.

8. The word 'holds' was considered too vague as applied to 'proprietor' and the definition was altered. A discussion arose as to whether the words declaring the Government a 'proprietor' in the case of estates belonging to Government should be retained. Mr. O'Kinealy pointed out that there was no doubt of the law on this point, and that the words were open to many objections. The were retained pending further consideration. (They were afterwards struck out, see p. 7.)

9. It was pointed out that the definition of tenure was defective as not including a rent-free holding. Mr. Field undertook to draft a new definition. It was understood that a tenure was not intended to include a fishery, but the point was reserved for future consideration.

10. The definition of 'tenure-holder' was agreed to, and it was resolved to omit 'taluk' and 'talukdar.' The definition of 'undertenure' to be re-drafted in accordance with that of 'tenure.'

11. 'Ryot.' Some discussion arose in regard to the definition of this word, and it was found impossible to agree upon any definition until other important principles had been decided. No definition of the digest was retained for the present.

12. 'Rent.' Attention was drawn to the definition in the North-Western Provinces Land Act which was so worded as to include service rendered.

It was considered best not to deal with 'service tenures,' and the definition was retained.

13. The definition of 'land' was objected to, especially as regards its effect on 'bastu' land. Eventually the wording of the definition was altered, as also that of the explanation, and the illustrations were omitted; but it was agreed that the matter could not properly be considered till the principles on which the Bill should deal with bastu lands had been agreed upon.

14. The definition of 'lease' as including parol contracts was objected to, and attention drawn to the inconsistency of limiting 'pottah' to a written lease, but allowing 'kabulyut' to be the counterpart to a verbal lease.

Eventually it was agreed to define 'lease' and 'pottah' as alternative terms.

15. The definitions of 'collectorate,' 'kabulyut,' and 'year' were agreed to, and those of person' and 'month' omitted as unnecessary.

16. Article 2 was then discussed, and it was agreed to leave out clause (a) defining the effect of the Digest on contracts as open to objection.

17. The meeting then adjourned to Thursday, the 11th, at 3½ P.M.

Fifth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Thursday, the 11th December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs Field, O'Kinealy, Harrison, and Mackenzie; and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

1. MR. FIELD laid before the Commission the preliminary chapter of the draft Bill as modified in accordance with the Resolutions of the previous meeting.

It was resolved to postpone its consideration to the following meeting, to allow the members an opportunity of examining it at their leisure.

2. Mr. Harrison drew attention to the inconveniences entailed by the method of taking up the Digest article by article. Important questions had constantly to be postponed, as it was uncertain how subsequent principles would be decided. The discussions were consequently infructuous. It would be better to decide the chief principles first.

The President was disposed to concur in this view.

3. Some considerations were raised in favour of the method of going through the Digest, but on Mr. Field observing that Sir H. Thring's advice was to settle principles first, and it was evident that a good many principles would come up for reconsideration and discussion, the proposal was adopted.

4. It was arranged that Mr. Field would alter the Digest so as to incorporate in it the amendments agreed upon, and omit such portions as were considered unnecessary, and that the Digest thus converted into a quasi-draft Bill would then be considered section by section.

5. The questions raised in the correspondence on the Digest were then considered as in the order in which they occurred in the précis.

6. Qestion (a).—As to the arrangement of sections in the draft Bill. This was disposed of at the last meeting.

7. Question (b).—As to what portions of the Digest should be embodied in the draft Bill. This was considered, and it was generally agreed—

(1) To omit all provisions relating to the Certificate Procedure, or any other exceptional procedure in favour of Government or the Court of Wards, for the recovery of rent and other dues.

(2) To omit the law relating to ghatwali and other service tenures, specifically saving such laws when necessary.

(3) To retain in the draft Bill the provisions of the patni law (Regulation VIII, 1819).

Some discussion arose as to the retention of the articles embodying Act X of 1859. It was suggested that the draft Bill ought not to be encumbered with a duplicate procedure, and per contra that Act X when in force should not be interfered with.

Mr. Mackenzie observed that if practicable such a procedure for rent suits ought to be laid down as would be applicable in all courts, both those in which Act X is in force and those in which Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869 is in force; and if this were done, any further special incorporation of Act X in the draft Bill would be unnecessary. The Commission had first to settle the procedure and then to see what limitations might have to be imposed on its several adoptions.

This view was agreed to.

It was also agreed that a uniform procedure should be adopted for the sale of all tenures and undertenures in execution of decrees for arrears of rent, and that the provisions of the patni sale law should be followed with the necessary modifications.

8. Mr. Ravenshaw's suggestion, to require landlords to keep a detailed rent-roll, and to furnish ryots with a copy of the entries affecting them, was then considered.

Mr. Field looked upon the proposal with favour. He would require a court-roll to be kept up, similar to the court-roll of copy-holders in England, to take the place of the existing accounts—jumma-wasil-baki papers, &c. These accounts containing all necessary details should be written up as the transactions occurred, and the ryot should be entitled to a copy of all entries affecting him on payment of four annas. This copy would serve all the purposes of a pottah and of receipts. As regards the enforcement of the rule, the penalty should be not to let the zemindars sue for rent if they do not comply.

Mr. O'Kinealy considered that this new proposal would have no more effect than the existing system. It was only giving another name to zemindari accounts.

Mr. Field thought it would be useful as a record of actual transactions, and referred to what now takes place in court in rent cases.

Mr. Mackenzie did not see any advantage in the proposal: it was absurd to attempt by legislation to introduce a correct system of book-keeping or to compel all rent-receivers, however petty, to adopt it. On whatever principle a zemindar's books were kept, a court would always have to consider the weight to be attached to them as evidence with reference to the circumstances of the case and the proof of their correctness.

The President stated the views which he believed to be held by Mr. Ravenshaw, viz. that every zemindar should be bound to lodge his complete accounts in the Collectorate within three months of the end of the year showing how each ryot stands, in default of which they are not to be allowed to sue. He (the President) thought the putwari in his semi-official character was absolutely useless. The zemindar's amlah were quite as trustworthy. If such accounts were to be lodged at all to be of any value, they must be lodged in the custody of the Collector.

Mr. Mackenzie referred to section 34 of his Bill for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent, which he considered went as far as advisable or necessary. To insist on zemindars filing accounts with the Collectors would be to revive a system that necessarily broke down from its own weight. In the Bill accepted by the Select Committee last session, the point of accounts was dealt with thus. The person chiefly interested in getting correct accounts was the ryot. Every ryot knew what a receipt was, and the Bill simply entitled him to demand from his landlord a receipt in a particular form which was calculated to give the ryot all the protection he needed.

Mr. O'Kinealy and Mr. Harrison concurred.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal concurred, but thought that it might be prescribed to keep all such accounts as are kept in bound books.

The President remarked that the sense of the meeting seemed to be against the law insisting on zemindars keeping their accounts in any prescribed form; the proposal seemed impracticable.

After some further remarks it was agreed to require counterfoil receipts to be given as in section 34 of Mr. Mackenzie's Bill, and not to legislate further on the subject of keeping accounts.

9. Mr. Taylor's suggestion, to protect tenants of homestead lands from ejectment under certain conditions, was then considered. This re-opened the question of bastu lands, and the extent to which they should be provided for in the draft Bill.

Mr. Field thought the Act should apply to them except in matters of enhancement and rights of occupancy, in respect of which separate provisions would be necessary.

Mr. Harrison drew attention to a proposal made in the correspondence to provide for all bastu lands, except such as are included in Calcutta or municipalities under Act V (B.C.) of 1876.

Mr. Field would deal with all land out of Calcutta, and quoted a decision of Garth, C. J., which had not been accepted by the natives as according to their views and usages. This decision made it desirable to deal with the matter.

Mr. O'Kinealy was in favour of exempting large towns, such as Patna and the Suburbs of Calcutta.

Mr. Field would frame the Bill in such a way as to make it applicable to all land out of Calcutta, whether homestead or agricultural, and mentioned instances which occurred within his experience in Moorshedabad and Burdwan. Perhaps a landlord desiring to eject should give compensation if he stood by and allowed a house to be built.

It was then decided that Mr. Field should draft sections for inclusion in the Bill in accordance with his views for future consideration.

10. It was agreed that Mr. Harrison should, in communication with the President and Mr. Field, draw up and circulate a list of points to be considered at the next and at each subsequent meeting.

11. Article 3 of the Digest was then considered, requiring courts to refuse to exercise jurisdiction where the relationship of landlord and tenant was not established.

Mr. Mackenzie proposed to omit the article as unnecessary.

Mr. Field observed that the article provided for a point commonly occurring.

Mr. O'Kinealy was of opinion that the section did not represent the law.

12. Mr. Field demurred to this, but admitted that as drafted it might lead to error, and that the position of the section might be well altered. He thought that the special procedure should apply only to cases in which the relation of landlord and tenant exists. Finally, this question was allowed to stand over.

13. The meeting adjourned to Saturday, the 13th, after Council Meeting.

Sixth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Saturday, the 13th December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, Harrison, and Mackenzie; and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

1. MR. FIELD read from his notes the general principles that were agreed to at the last meeting.

2. The preliminary chapter as re-drafted by Mr. Field was then considered.

3. Mr. Field agreed to omit all reference to Government in the definition of 'proprietor.'

4. A few other verbal alterations were made, and Mr. Field's proposal to add a fifth section dividing the Bill into parts and chapters was agreed to.

5. The points proposed for discussion at this meeting were then considered.

6. To make the doctrine of "merger" applicable to all tenures and undertenures of the several degrees.

Mr. O'Kinealy was against the proposal. He pointed out that there was no such doctrine strictly speaking, and during the last hundred years the principle had met with no favour in English courts of law or equity, and further, that the common law did not run in the mofussil. If the doctrine of merger were introduced, it would only drive the people to evade it as was done in England.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal was also opposed to the proposal.

The President and Mr. Harrison pointed out the great abuses which now prevailed in many estates, especially in the Sunderbuns, where tenants created undertenures in their own favour to the detriment of the landlord. In one settlement it had been gravely proposed to the Board to allow a settlement-holder some 50 per cent. collection expenses for collecting rent from himself in four or five different capacities.

Mr. Field considered the present state of the law a fruitful source of fraud, and cited a flagrant case within his own personal experience as Judge of Burdwan.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal thought that any legislation on the subject would be easily evaded by creating or purchasing the undertenures in favour of relatives.

Mr. O'Kinealy pointed out that the merger of an undertenure of the first degree in a tenure would cause all the undertenures of lower degrees to lapse as having nothing to rest upon.

Mr. Field replied that this consequence could easily be guarded against in drafting.

Eventually it was decided to draft the Bill in such a manner as to make it clear that the undertenure should merge in the tenure or superior undertenure, except when the holder made it evident by definite acts that it was his intention to keep the subordinate tenure alive. Further consideration of the subject was postponed till the draft section should come before the Commission.

7. Resignation of permanent tenures.—Mr. Harrison proposed to allow the holder of a permanent tenure or undertenure to resign it. Some objection was raised to this, and he urged that on grounds of expediency it was very undesirable to compel a patnidar to continue paying for a patni which his zemindar would not sell and would not allow him to resign.

Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. O'Kinealy considered that the difficulty would be sufficiently met by requiring the superior landlord to sell the tenure before having recourse to any other remedy.

The President and Mr. Harrison accepted this, provided the section was so worded as to make it quite clear that the zemindar must not merely put the tenure or undertenure up to sale, but either find a purchaser or purchase himself, before resorting to any other remedy.

8. Escheats.—The question of a tenure or undertenure escheating to Government or the superior landlord was then referred to. It was considered undesirable as well as ultra vires to alter the present law, which is quite clear in favour of the escheat to Government.

9. Limitation.—The proposal to assimilate the principles of limitation as regards rent suits to those of the general limitation law, as proposed in foot-note 6 to Article 78 of the Digest.

Mr. Mackenzie drew attention to section 6 of Act XV of 1877, which only saves the special limitation in rent suits in respect of the period for institution, and not as regards disability and other incidents.

Mr. O'Kinealy said the law had been so settled since 1877, and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal pointed out that the question had been definitely decided in a case in the Calcutta Law Reports, Vol. iv., p. 371. This made it clear that the ordinary provisions of the Indian Limitation Act already applied to all rent suits.

Mr. Field admitted this, pointing out, however, that this decision had been published since the Digest had been written.

The President observed that this decision involved one result which he could not accept, viz. that a minor on coming of age might sue for rent for the whole period of his minority; and that even at an enhanced rate, if his father had served a notice of enhancement shortly before his death; the exclusion of the time of lunacy would have the same effect. From the nature of the case, ryots' rents were payable by a poor man year by year out of the produce of the year. With reference to this characteristic of this particular kind of due or debt, he did not think that the law ought to allow it to accumulate under any circumstances. If the manager of the minors' or disqualified proprietors' estates neglected their duty in realizing rents as they fell due, as soon as the estate passed into the hands of a qualified proprietor he would have his remedy against the managers for mismanagement.

In connection with this decision, the question as to the powers of the Commission to propose alterations in Acts of the Government of India passed subsequent to the Indian Councils Act was brought under discussion; was the Commission to make such recommendations as seemed best to it for the amelioration of the Rent Law, or only such recommendations as it would be within the powers of the Bengal Council to give effect to?

The President stated that on this point it was the wish of the Lieutenant-Governor that they should so frame the draft Bill as to admit of its being passed by the Bengal Council. This, however, did not debar the Commission from making special recommendations on important questions involving the amendment of an Act of the Government of India, and this was precisely one of the questions in which this would be necessary. It would be intolerable to allow a minor on coming of age to re-open all questions connected with the payment of rent during his minority, extending perhaps over 21 years.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal suggested that a distinction should be drawn between the case of minors who had or who had not a legal guardian.

It was then agreed that Mr. Field should draft a section providing for limitation in the matter of ordinary rent suits running against minors, lunatics, and idiots, and that in reporting to Government attention should be drawn to the fact that this would entail an alteration in the Indian Limitation Act.

10. Distraint.—On the proposal to abolish the law of distraint altogether, the President doubted whether this was feasible.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal would retain the law but improve it.

Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Field, Mr. O'Kinealy, and Mr. Harrison, were, however, in favour of abandoning distraint altogether. What zemindars valued was not distraint as authorised by law, but an altogether illegal form of distraint. If they got a reasonably rapid procedure for recovering rent, they would not need distraint. The resolution of the majority to abandon the law of distraint altogether as proposed by the Behar Indigo Planters' Association was adopted, and it was subsequently noticed that the Behar Rent Committee had made a similar recommendation by a majority of ten to four.

11. Fractional shares and claims.—It was agreed to give legislative effect to the ruling that no tenant is bound to pay the rent of the same holding to two or more landlords claiming fractional shares, unless by special contract or usage he has abandoned his right.

Also to facilitate the appointment of a manager of joint undivided estates by the civil court in cases of dispute, especially meeting the case of such appointment being desired by the tenants.

12. Deposits of rent.—Mr. Mackenzie expressed a doubt on administrative grounds, whether any extension of the privilege of the deposit of rents ought to be sanctioned.

It was pointed out, however, that this difficulty would be met by modifying the scale of fees so as to enable an efficient rent-deposit department to be organized, whenever the privilege was largely resorted to.

Eventually it was agreed to extend the privilege of depositing to the cases of coparceners refusing joint receipts and of disputed claims to the title to collect rent, and also to transfer the work of receiving deposits to the Collectors as proposed in Mr. Mackenzie's Bill.

13.—Instalments of rent.—On this point it was agreed to accept the principles contained in section 33 of Mr. Mackenzie's draft Bill, as regards the fixing kists days for the payment of rent and disallowing interest on instalments falling due intermediately.

14.—Suits for pottahs and kabulyats.—It was agreed to abolish suits for pottahs and kabulyats and to substitute a simple form of suit for the determination of the conditions of the tenancy.

15.—Registration of transfers.—It was also resolved to make the law uniform regarding the obligation to register all transfers of tenures, undertenures, and occupancy rights so far as made transferable in the landlord's sherishta. It was, however, noticed that the Behar Indigo Planters' Association had raised an objection to this as interfering with any proposal for cheapening the registration of such tenures in public registry offices.

The next meeting was adjourned to Wednesday, the 17th instant, at 11.

Seventh Meeting of the Rent Commission.

The 17th December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, Harrison, Mackenzie; Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal, and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

1. The first question that came under consideration was that of bastu lands outside the city of Calcutta. Mr. Field laid before the meeting an outline of the principles on which he proposed to draft.

Mr. O'Kinealy contended that, before a question of this kind was discussed, the case-law on the subject ought to be laid before the Commission. It was most desirable to see how the law at present stood as hitherto interpreted by the courts. He cited a few of the cases on the subject—1 Agra, F. B., 115; 3 N.-W. R., 282; 16 W. R. 103; 2W.R. (Act X), 40; Act XI of 1859.

The importance of examining the case-law on the subject was generally admitted; but as there was no reason to suppose that it would present the question in a new aspect, it was agreed to go on with the present discussion, Mr. Field undertaking to draw up a Note on the subject analysing the cases when laying the draft sections before Commission.

2. The first proposal was, that land used for let for purposes of agriculture, horticulture, pasture, and the like may not, without the consent of the landlord, be used for building purposes.

The President asked what "building purposes" would include. A ryot's house should not come under this, it being an appurtenance to the jote.

Mr. Field certainly would not preclude the ryot from building a house for the purpose of carrying on the cultivation of his land, but he ought not to be permitted to lease it out as a building site to other ryots or to the general public.

Mr. O'Kinealy said that the practical question was, what is the remedy of the landlord if a ryot changes the nature of his holding? For his own part he would allow the ryot to convert his holding into building ground, and in fact do anything that did not destroy the value of his holding and so injure the reversion, e.g. he might dig a tank.

Mr. Harrison asked whether this principle should be extended to a variety of purposes over which large zemindars were usually supposed to exercise control, e.g. to setting up a hât or building a serai.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal considered that it would do no harm to the landlord as he might then enhance the rent. He referred to the difficulties in which the ryots were placed in the well-known cases of Pete Das and Prasunno Kumari.

Mr. Mackenzie contended that the only sound and true principle was that the tenant should not do anything to endanger his landlord's security for the rent. However the land was treated, the landlord should not be in a worse position than before. He would allow an occupancy ryot (as he understood that the Commission was now considering the case of ryots with a right of occupancy) to do anything he liked with his holding as long as he did not diminish its rent-paying value to the landlord.

Mr. O'Kinealy concurred in this view.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissented altogether. He considered that it would encroach materially on the customary rights of zemindars. The present tendency of the courts is in every way to protect a ryot who has once been allowed to build, and therefore his right to do so required to be jealously watched. If the rate of bastu land in an estate were Rs. 10 a beegha, a zemindar would be materially injured if a ryot who had acquired a holding for the purpose of cultivation, and therefore at perhaps Rs 2 a beegha, might, after obtaining a right of occupancy, convert it into bastu land and lease it to other ryots at Rs. 5 a beegha

Mr. Field would not allow a ryot who held land used or intended to be used for agricultural purposes to apply it to other uses, and thereby pocket benefits that might accrue from causes to which he contributed nothing, as for instance, from the making of a railway. The zemindar has always regarded these extra advantages as part of his profits, and the ryot has not been allowed to appropriate them. He put the case of building land in the neighbourhood of Calcutta and other places which has risen enormously in value.

Mr. Mackenzie repeated that the true issue was, may not an occupancy ryot (questions of enhancement apart), so long as the security for the rent is safe, do what he likes with the land, or is such a ryot only to be permitted to sow crops? The zemindar has, no doubt, a certain property in the soil, but not an exclusive property as in England, and it was not equitable that he should be allowed to debar the ryots from converting their land to more profitable purposes. He should be allowed to do nothing to injure the landlord's security—but whether any particular form of user did this or not was a question of fact. He should not be specially barred from building or from anything else.

Mr. Harrison thought Mr. Mackenzie had put the question very fairly, but he could not at all concur with him.*

He quite agreed with those who thought that the acquisition of occupancy rights by genuine cultivators should be in every way encouraged, but it was an indispensable corrollary to this that rights thus acquired should not be converted to other purposes, opposed to what the zemindar considered to be his interest.*

* Mr. Harrison subsequently expressed an opinion that the view now taken by Mr. Mackenzie did not appear to be consistent with the provisions of the Bill as presented by the Select Committee to the Legislative Council. The principle of that Bill was that an occupancy right was intended for the benefit and security of actual cultivators, and on that ground it was expedient to facilitate its acquisition in every way, and even not to allow the cultivator to contract himself out of his right. But the case was altogether altered if a cultivator, after acquiring his right as such, might then use it to the annoyance of the zemindar in a variety of other ways, e.g. if the zemindar had a thriving hât, the ryot might, at the instigation and backed by an opposing zemindar, set up a rival hât on his occupancy holding.

Mr. Field then framed the following proposition: —

"That the occupancy ryot be not allowed without his landlord's permission to use land for building purposes or other purposes different from those of agriculture and the like."

Ayes.	Noes.
Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.	Mr. O'Kinealy.
Mr. Harrison.	Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.
,, Field.	Mr. Mackenzie.
The President.

Mr. O'Kinealy desired that his counter-proposition should be recorded, viz. :—

"That an occupancy ryot be allowed to use his land as he thinks fit, provided that he does not diminish the value of his holding as security for his landlord's rent."

3. The next proposition was, that a tenant might be ejected if, after receiving notice of his landlord's objection, he persisted in using the land for building purposes, &c.

Mr. O'Kinealy thought it would suffice if the tenant were liable to be sued for damages.

Mr. Field pointed out the difficulty of obtaining damages from a ryot, and after a brief discussion all the members, except Mr. O'Kinealy, agreed to ejectment as the remedy, if a ryot in the face of his landlord's objection persisted in so using the land.

4. The next proposition was that a landlord be allowed twelve years to prefer an objection.

Mr. O'Kinealy would substitute one year.

Mr. Mackenzie suggested two years as sufficient (with reference to seasons, &c.) to give the landlord a complete opportunity of seeing whether the ryot was altering the character of his tenure.

With the exception of Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee all agreed that the landlord should not have more than two years' time to object. The Baboo would prefer twelve years.

It was also agreed that the time should run "from the conversion or changed use;" Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal suggesting "from the commencement of operations towards the conversion, &c."

5. The fourth proposition, to allow a landlord objecting as above within two years to eject without compensation if his objection was made within a reasonable time, was agreed to.

6. As regards the fifth proposition, requiring a landlord to give compensation if he failed to object within a reasonable time, or knowingly stood by and allowed the ryot to expend money on the conversion of the holding. Mr. O'Kinealy urged that if a zemindar stood by and allowed a tenant to build he ought not to be entitled to object.

Mr. Mackenzie agreed that if a landlord knowing his tenant to be building did not object, he should be presumed to have given permission and should not be allowed to eject.

Mr. Harrison did not object to the principle, but apprehended that it would not work well in practice. Whenever a zemindar objected within the two years, the plea would always be advanced that he had 'knowingly stood by.' So vague a question mainly depending on inferences would admit of any amount of evidence of a conflicting and unsatisfactory character, the decision of which would often depend on the sympathies of the presiding officer.

The President also thought that as it would always be in the power of the ryot to place such knowledge beyond doubt by serving a notice on his landlord or even by sending him a registered letter, the knowledge of the zemindar ought not to be inferred unless the ryot could produce some tangible evidence of this kind.

Mr. Field, however, agreed with Mr. O'Kinealy and Mr. Mackenzie, and on going to the vote, as to whether the "landlord should lose his remedy if he were found to have 'knowingly stood by' even though he objected within the two years," there were—

For.	Against.
Mr. Mackenzie.	The President.
„ Field.	Mr. Harrison.
„ O'Kinealy.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
Baboo B. K. Seal.

Mr. O'Kinealy's proposal was therefore agreed to.

It was also understood that all the above proposals referred to occupancy ryots only. In the case of holders of tenures or undertenures, the rights of the tenants would depend on the conditions of their tenancy.

7. The next question was whether 12 years' occupancy of land, used or let for building purposes— a) without a lease, (b) with a lease having no term, (c) after expiry of the term— should confer a right of occupancy, the land together with the buildings thereon being subject to sale for arrears of rent.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee opposed this. The courts had always held against it and he would not alter the law. He pointed out that the property would all pass to tenants and no landlord in that case would care to make improvements. He thought the rent of building land should not follow the rule of agricultural holdings.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar, admitting this view of the law, would change it and give a right of occupancy in land devoted to building purposes, when the contract did not interdict the acquisition of such a right.

The President asked what distinction there was as regards this policy between agricultural and building lands. If the land was originally leased for building purposes, it was as desirable to protect the tenant as if he was a cultivator.

Mr. Mackenzie was of opinion that the law should lay down the general principles by which building, as well as agricultural holdings, should be regulated; but he would draw a distinction as regards the liberty of contract in the two cases and allow it to come into play much more freely as regards building land. He would permit a landlord to prescribe any terms he pleased in leasing building land, and would permit him to bar by contract the acquisition of a right of occupancy in such lands. In default of such contract, however, he thought the right of occupancy ought to accrue even in building land.

The sixth proposition was then put to the vote and carried, the President and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee voting against it.

It was also agreed that the 12 years might be made up by holding the land part of the time for purposes of agriculture and part for purposes of building.

8. The seventh proposition was to allow enhancement up to neighbouring rates when the right of occupancy had been acquired. If no evidence of neighbouring rates be available, then the landlord might enhance to such a point as to give ten per cent. upon the market value of the land.

An objection was raised to the difficulty of ascertaining market value; but as this difficulty already existed in the Land Acquisition Act, and had been practically surmounted, the words were allowed to stand.

Mr. Mackenzie then objected that ten per cent. on the market value was too high. Land was a very favourite investment, and six or even five per cent. would suffice.

Mr. O'Kinealy concurred, but he would reduce it to four per cent., which was higher than the rate of interest on Government securities.

Mr. Harrison agreed with Mr. O'Kinealy. The full proprietary right in land would always fetch twenty, often more than twenty, years' purchase. In the case in point, the tenant having an occupancy right, the landlord was assumed not to possess the full proprietary right represented by the market value; four per cent. on the market value would therefore be ample.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee would retain ten per cent.

The majority of the Commission was in favour of fixing five per cent. for the present. The amount could be reduced hereafter if it was found on enquiry that the prevailing ratio of building ground-rent to market value was less than 5 to 100.

The President would leave out altogether the reference to "neighbouring rates." Mr. Field, however, would retain the words, but agreed to make it optional with the landlord to proceed with reference to neighbouring rates or market value.

9. It was then agreed that such of the above provisions as modified the law be not retro-active, and that such as re-affirmed the existing law be retro-active.

10. The next subject for discussion was whether the draft Bill should contain provisions for the apportionment of the rent of tenants, on the division by transfer or otherwise of the superior tenure or undertenure.

A distinction was drawn between the case of a specific and a fractional division of the superior tenure.

Mr. O'Kinealy opposed making such division obligatory on the tenant in any case. It was not fair to him to require him to pay rent to different landlords when he had acquired an integral holding, and the principle was not in accordance with the present law of partition. The sense of the Commission was, however, in favour of requiring apportionment in certain cases, and it was agreed that Mr. Field should draft definite sections for consideration.

11. It was next considered whether it was advisable to frame a more precise rule for the relinquishment of a tenancy by abandonment.

Mr. O'Kinealy was against making any change in the law on this head. He would make it a matter of evidence; if the abandonment was proved, the contract could be rescinded by the landlord. This was the present law. There was always an agreement in such a case between landlord and tenant.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee thought some more precise rule was needed. He put the case of a ryot and his family going away, and the zemindar letting the land to another ryot. What was the law if the ryot afterwards turned up and sued for the land, denying that he had abandoned it?

Mr. Field pointed out that the zemindar might, in case of abandonment before the sowing season, lose the rent of a part of the year.

It was finally agreed that, in the case of saleable holdings, the landlord should proceed to a sale, the difficulty of not finding an absconded ryot being got over by a notice on the land; and that in the case of non-saleable holdings, the landlord should have the discretionary power of accepting a verbal relinquishment, and of treating a year's abandonment as a rescission of the contract of tenancy.

12. The next subject discussed was whether a tenant should forfeit his tenancy by denying his landlord's title. Mr. Field contended for the equity of this doctrine, but would limit it to cases where the disclaimer appeared upon the record.

Mr. O'Kinealy was of opinion that the section in the Digest stated the law too widely. A tenant might deny the title of the landlord's transferree, even though he had paid rent to him, if he had paid such rent by mistake, and in fact the title of any one except that of the landlord who had put him in possession of his holding. This view was accepted.

13. The elucidation of the law as to suits against agents for the recovery of money on accounts was next considered.

Mr. Mackenzie was inclined to omit all reference to this subject. The present law worked well. Mr. Field and the President dissented altogether. It was very necessary to make such suits a reality instead of, as at present too often, a farce.

It was agreed that Mr. Field should draft on this basis.

14. The Commission then adjourned to Tuesday, December 23rd, at 11 A.M.

Eighth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 23rd December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, Mackenzie; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

1. THE desirability of protecting undertenures on the sale for arrears of rent of the superior tenure or undertenure was first considered.

The President remarked that the first question for decision was one of principle. Was it expedient to endeavour to protect undertenures when the holder of the superior tenure defaulted? It involved a radical change in the law, the present policy of which was to be found in the patni sale law.

Mr. Field saw no reason for altering the present law: it had already been agreed upon provisionally to adopt the patni sale procedure for all sales of tenures and undertenures.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal would allow the purchaser to avoid such incumbrances as mortgages; but the patni law went further than this, and he would modify it to some extent.

Mr. O'Kinealy denounced the present system as one for legalizing fraud. By it a man could create incumbrances and realize their value. He could then default and receive their value over again by giving the purchaser an unencumbered title, leaving the injured party to the risk of a suit. He would not admit that the policy of the present law was to refuse protection to undertenures. Even under the patni law an undertenant might pay the rent and save his undertenure, and for some years past the tendency of all legislation had been to widen the circle of protection. He thought the principles of the revenue law should be followed, and that undertenures should not be invalidated more than was necessary.

Mr. Field thought that cases of undertenures being intentionally and unfraudulently invalidated were very rare. When a sale was made with the express object of avoiding undertenures, the Privy Council had ruled it illegal.

Mr. Mackenzie would give protection to undertenants, but would allow the purchaser of the superior tenure to enhance if the rent were shown to be insufficient. He would also protect tenures, the deeds of which had been registered before sale.

The general sense of the Commission (Mr. Field and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting) was in favour of protecting undertenures so far as this could be done without endangering the reserved rent of the landlord, and also without exposing the purchaser to the risk of having a variety of private and unknown encumbrances brought forward as soon as the sale was completed.

The President suggested that protection must be restricted to registered undertenures, and asked whether any system of registration in the sherishta of the superior tenureholder would be a sufficient security against fraud.

Mr. O'Kinealy would require registration of undertenures in the Collector's office. The purchaser would only give the full value, if he had the means of knowing the incumbrances on the property. The seller would get what was fair, namely the value of his property incumbered as it might be, and should not be allowed to repudiate his own acts. The only person really deserving of consideration was the landlord.

Mr. Harrison remarked that all undertenures of above Rs. 100 must be already registered, and registration of all deeds affecting immovable property might not improbably be ere long made compulsory.

Mr. Mackenzie pointed out that this would only meet the case of future creations. Undertenures already in existence, created by unregistered deeds, could not be registered now under any circumstances, and some means must be devised to enable such of them as were bonâ fide to be protected.

It was then agreed that all registered undertenures should be protected at a sale for arrears of rent, provided the purchase money covered the arrear; and that Mr. Field should draft sections to give effect to this principle, and devise the most practical means of giving existing undertenure-holders an opportunity of protecting themselves.

2. The suggestions were then discussed—(1) whether in the event of the sale not realizing the arrear, the tenure or undertenure should be then and there again put up to sale, or the sale be postponed; (2) whether the undertenants should have any privilege of pre-emption at the amount of the arrear without the right of avoiding undertenures. It was considered unnecessary to allow the undertenant any more privileges. He could, if he wished it, be present at the first sale and run up the price to the equivalent of the arrear, and if he omitted to do so, he could still attend at the second sale and secure the tenure fetching such a price as would enable him to recover the value of his rights that would be avoided.

As regards (1) Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal was opposed to a postponed second sale. There ought to be one sale only, as under the present law. To allow a resale under certain circumstances with different rights to the purchasers would bring in confusion. Purchasers would not know whether they were buying the property subject or not subject to incumbrances.

The President dissented altogther from this view. Holding the sales on the same day would create confusion, and postponing the sale would prevent any doubt.

It was then agreed upon to have a postponed sale if the first sale did not realize the arrears with costs, and also to make the sale postponable at the request of the landlord only. If the landlord was content to purchase the tenure with its incumbrances for less than the arrear, he might do so. The question was raised whether in that case he could recover the balance of the arrear from the tenure-holder. The tenure-holder might plead that had the sale been postponed his liability would have been cleared off, and therefore if the landlord elected not to apply for postponement, he should have no further remedy.

Mr. O'Kinealy and Mr. Harrison, however, argued that the defaulter could have no equitable ground to complain. The small price would be entirely due to his own action in encumbering his holding. The view was accepted.

3. The proposals of the Behar Commission with regard to putwaris were then brought forward, but it was considered expedient to reserve all the special Behar proposals for subsequent discussion. It was resolved that no provisions of the Bill, so far as it relates to Bengal, should depend on the retention of putwaris.

4. The proposal of Mr. Browne, Judge of Patna, to require courts decreeing rights of occupancy to order the exchange of pottahs and kabulyuts specifying boundaries, was next considered.

Mr. O'Kinealy thought this was already provided for by the existing law; the boundaries, or a sufficient description of the land, must appear in the plaint.

The President, however, thought it would be a great advantage to require their specification in the decree itself so as to make it complete; otherwise the plaint and all the subsequent proceedings might have to be examined to enable a person to know precisely the extent of the decree.

This was agreed to. It was also resolved at Mr. Mackenzie's instance to omit all reference to an interchange of pottahs and kabulyuts as quite superfluous. The decree would suffice.

5. As regards illegal cesses, it was not considered necessary to take further action against them, and therefore the proposal to prescribe a special procedure in the Collector's court to make the law against illegal cesses more operative was negatived.

6. Resolved that the law contained in article 59 of the Digest was sufficient for insuring the ryot peaceable possession; and Mr. Finucane's proposal, that the landlord should guarantee him possession against all comers, as a condition of claiming rent from him, was not accepted.

7. The question of the ejectment of non-occupancy ryots was next discussed, and it was generally agreed to remove all doubt as to the obligation of ejecting non-occupancy ryots only through the courts.

8. It was then proposed to prescribe that notice of ejectment should be served on the ryot through the court and not less than three months before the close of the year at the end of which he is to be ejected.

Mr. Mackenzie thought the notice should be served by the zemindar as in the patni law and not through the court.

Mr. Field was also of opinion that the landlord would do this much better than the court.

Mr. Harrison and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee strongly advocated service through the court; otherwise the ryot would always deny the notice and a wider door would be opened to false evidence.

The members then voted as follows:—

Service through the court.	Service through the zemindar.
Baboo P. M. Mookerjee.	Mr. O'Kinealy.
Mr. Harrison.	„ Mackenzie.
Baboo B. K. Seal.	„ Field.
The President.

9. Resolved, after some discussion, that the notice should be served on the ryot three months before the close of the year at the end of which he was to be ejected, and that he might come in at any time during that period to prefer an objection.

10. Resolved also, that if he failed to do so, the landlord should be allowed to apply to the court to give effect to the ejectment.

11. The question, however, remained for disposal whether, if the landlord served his notice in due course, and no objection was raised by the ryot, the latter should incur any penalty for not surrendering the land, and thereby compelling the landlord to have recourse to the court again.

Mr. Field suggested for consideration whether a ryot who held over after notice to quit should not be liable to pay double rent, as in England.

Messrs. Mackenzie and O'Kinealy would prefer reasonable compensation, and saw no reason why a different rule should prevail in the case of landlord and tenant to that in other cases.

This view was agreed to, as was a suggestion that if the landlord did not apply to the court within three months after the close of the year, he should be held to have waived the notice and condoned the continued occupation.

12. The question was then discussed whether the absence of any objection on the part of the ryot within the three months should disentitle him to contest a subsequent ejectment.

Mr. Field said that a ryot remaining in possession without right after the service on him of a notice to quit was a trespasser,—was in the position of any other person wrongfully holding immovable property,—and that the landlord should be left to the same remedy against him as was open to any other person wrongfully kept out of the possession of land. If it turned out that the ryot had no right which was not determined by the notice to quit, he would be liable for mesne profits and costs.

Mr. O'Kinealy would certainly give the ryot an opportunity of objecting. If at the end of the three months, or indeed after dispossession, the ryot appeared and showed that he had not received notice, he must be heard. The proposed limitation was not practicable. Moreover, before Act X of 1859, no ryot could be ejected at the bidding of the landlord, nor indeed by a summary suit unless for arrears of rent, and even after decree a khoodkasht could escape by paying the amount due, and Act X of 1859 had not really changed the law, though the courts had put a wrong construction on some of its provisions. In support of his contention he referred to—

2, Harrington's Analysis, 185, 189.
S. D. A., 1839, p. 514.
Circular Orders, S. D. A., 76.
Colebrooke's Sup. Dig., Arts. 69, 70, pp. 253, 266.
Reg. VIII, 1819, secs. 18, 19, 20.

It was therefore absolutely necessary to give the ryot an opportunity of appearing before ejectment.

13. It was generally agreed that, if the ryot refused to surrender possession, the landlord must resort to the court, and the court must hear the ryot before deciding. But much difference of opinion was elicited upon the question whether a ryot not having a right of occupancy should be liable to ejectment upon a mere notice at the will of his landlord.

It was finally settled that, as the subject had not been proposed for discussion, but had risen in the course of the debate, it should be deferred for more mature consideration at the next meeting, the President expressing an opinion that those who were opposed to allowing the landlord to eject at his discretion a non-occupancy ryot, and who would therefore reverse the doctrine enunciated by the High Court for many years past, ought to propose clear and definite limitations to this right. He could not support any vague and purely negative views leaving the whole question in anarchy and confusion. The term "resident cultivator," to whom such privileges were to be conceded, should be very carefully defined.

14. Resolved, as to the right of the ryot to the way-going crop at the time of ejectment, to adopt the rule made for the North-Western Provinces by Act XVIII, 1873, section 42, and for Oudh by Act XIX, 1868, section 46.

The Commission then adjourned to Tuesday, the 30th of December.

Ninth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 30th December 1879.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

THE President observed that he understood the first question to be considered was—should any privileged rights be extended to any class of ryots to which they were not now attached by existing law? He believed that at present a non-occupancy ryot was not protected against ejectment by his landlord; if a scheme could be devised by which the zemindar could practically secure the share of the increased value of produce which in theory was admitted to be his right rent, he would consent to extend the privileges of the ryots, but not otherwise.

Mr. Mackenzie held that under the old law all khoodkasht or resident ryots were protected against arbitrary ejectment. Act X had substituted for the khoodkasht class a class of statutory occupancy ryots, and in so doing had done injustice to many khoodkasht tenants. He would leave all occupancy ryots in the enjoyment of any privileges awarded them by Act X of 1859, but would modify the law, as regards non-occupancy ryots, by not allowing a landlord to eject them if they had shown an intention of permanently settling by cultivating land for three years or upwards, so long as they paid their rent; he would only allow a landlord arbitrarily to eject any ryot from lands which he had cultivated for less than three years.

The President and Mr. Harrison were of opinion that, put in this way, the proposal was deserving of careful consideration. It would probably be impracticable to confer privileges on the khoodkasht ryot as such, without any reference to the duration of his occupancy; but the definite limit of three years made the proposal feasible. The question would still remain was, on what grounds the rent of such a ryot could be enhanced?

Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Field, and Mr. O'Kinealy had prepared papers on the meaning of the term khoodkasht ryot, and the circumstances under which he could be ejected; these were read to the meeting, Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. O'Kinealy contending that what constituted a khoodkasht was merely his admission to the village and his intention to settle; while Mr. Field was of opinion, though it may have been otherwise at the time of the permanent settlement and for some years afterwards, yet in later times some length of occupation and residence came to be regarded as essential to create the status of a khoodkasht ryot.

After some further discussion as to the precise meaning and status of khoodkasht ryots, the President observed that they were nearly all agreed that at the time of the permanent settlement the khoodkhasht ryots meant ryots residing in the village; but the effect of subsequent legislation regarding their status seemed open to a great diversity of opinion. He proposed therefore to consider the question entirely on grounds of present expediency and of what they might think best for the country in an altered state of things from what prevailed when many of the old Regulations referred to were enacted.

Mr. Mackenzie said that the definition of occupancy ryot in Act X was supposed by some persons to be exhaustive. But this was not intended. Existing rights, such as local customs with shorter periods of prescription, were not interfered with by Act X, and it was a mistake to suppose that the Act had made a clean sweep of these. He had looked round for a principle that might be followed in giving legislative recognition to these customary rights, and had come to the conclusion that prescription would after all be the most satisfactory test. Though prescription was not the only method of establishing rights, it was always recognized as a reliable mode of proof. There were many difficulties in defining a khoodkhasht ryot, and he would take a reasonable term of prescription as evidence of intention of permanent cultivation. He accordingly proposed three years—a term which Mr. Scoone in 1859 had declared to have the effect, in Chittagong at any rate, of establishing an occupancy right. The question then would be, what privileges these ryots were to enjoy, and should the twelve-year ryots have higher ones? He was opinion that before Act X of 1859 the zemindar was not legally entitled to enhance, except in relation to the average rates in the neighbourhood; but all ryots not specially privileged were bound to pay at those rates if the zemindar demanded it.

The law should distinguish between the cases in which the zemindar's cause of action affected only individual ryots and those in which he claimed a general increase on general grounds.

He should be at liberty to sue individuals on the ground that they were paying less than the rates in force for the neighbourhood, or that they held land for which they were not paying rent at all. But the question remained, how should he proceed when he sought to enhance the rates of a village or tract?

There were two possible methods of effecting this. He might proceed either by collective suit in the civil courts, or by appealing to the Government to settle his estate. If the former course was thought best, rules should perhaps be laid down in the law for the guidance of the courts; but these were not so necessary if the latter alternative should find favour with the Commission. The general result in either case would be a reversion to the old principle of pergunnah, or rather perhaps now-a-days of village rates, to which all ordinary rents should conform.

It would be very difficult to lay down hard-and-fast rules for ascertaining this standard rate; and on the whole he was inclined to leave it to the discretion of the settling officer and the revenue authorities, always requiring them to show reasons justifying their conclusions in each case.

Mr. Mackenzie has since embodied his views in a note, a copy of which is attached.

The President quoted from a note to Harrington's Analysis to the effect that "no rule of adjustment could be discovered."

He then proposed an intermediate mode of procedure to that of resettling a village in detail, man by man, viz. to have the village rates declared by the settlement officer after an enquiry as to what should be the prescribed rates. This would be a less cumbrous proceeding, and exceptional cases might be taken into court.

After some discussion as to how litigation might be discouraged, Mr. Mackenzie remarked that, while an estate was under rent settlement, the courts should not interfere, but that afterwards they might proceed as usual. They would have the Collector's finding as to rates, and should be bound to apply it in the absence of special reasons for going below it. Perhaps, however, it would be best that the Collector should try all cases arising out of his enquiry, compelling the institution of these within a reasonable time.

Mr. Mackenzie suggested that the Commission should consider whether it would be desirable to lay down in the law any general rule for limiting rent. It might be possible to fix a maximum limit for the actual cultivator to pay to his immediate landlord. This would help to discourage sub-letting, which he now thought it was impossible to prohibit directly. We might perhaps say that no cultivator should pay more than half the gross produce. This should be not a principle for the settlement officer to follow, but an ultimate standard for maximum rents in extreme cases.

This proposal generally found favour, but Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee thought it would lead to no conclusion. He quoted instances from the Chinsurah and Hooghly districts, where the rent was above half the produce. The gross revenue represented half the value of the produce of the district. If a small share of the produce were taken as a standard of full rent, this would lead to much injustice.

The President observed that he had always advocated the definition by rule of thumb of the share of the produce which a zemindar was fairly entitled to demand from a full-rate ryot; but he never said that the same proportion was to be prescribed for the whole of Bengal. He would fix different rates for different districts, or tracts of country, after full enquiry.

Mr. Field expressed a fear that if, for the classification of ryots in the existing law, a new classification be now substituted, the result will be a fresh crop of litigation—a fresh period of disturbed and uncertain ideas as to rights.

The President would for the present postpone the question of altering the prescriptive period necessary to create an occupancy ryot. If he could be satisfied that what had been proposed was workable in practice, he would vote for it. He would submit to the Commission an outline for sections to give effect to the principle that a zemindar who wished to enhance generally should apply to the Collector and pay for it. The Collector should settle the rates first, and enquire as to what was a fair rate for several classes of land under ordinary crops.

The Commission then adjourned to Wednesday, the 7th January 1880.

Tenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Wednesday, 7th January 1880.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

1. THE propositions drafted by the President and Mr. Field upon the subject of enhancement of occupancy ryots were considered.

The first question was as to what landlords should enhance other than proprietors, tenure-holders, and undertenure-holders, and whether the right to enhance should be limited to landlords having a permanent transferable interest, a life interest, or at least a twenty years' farm with an unexpired term of ten years.

Mr. O'Kinealy was not in favour of class legislation, and considered that as a matter of principle the right of enhancement ought not to be restricted in the manner proposed. If it were intended to restrict the right, the restrictions should not depend on the nature of the landlord but should be common to all. Whoever occupied the place of the landlord should be allowed to exercise this right.

Mr. Harrison contended that the evil effect of unprincipled enhancement by ticcadars who had no permanent interest in the welfare of the ryots was so great, that the right ought to be taken from them.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee said a zemindar might farm his estate to a speculator in order to get a bonus from him, and the speculator would then harrass the ryots. He thought a landlord before enhancing ought to have a ten years' unexpired term.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal also thought it objectionable to allow the zemindar to empower speculators to enhance, but considered that there was no reason why persons deriving their power from the zemindar should not have the right to enhance if the zemindar for his own benefit had given them the authority to enhance.

The President was of opinion that no ijaradar who had less than ten years of his farm unexpired should be in a position to take advantage of the general provisions for raising rent. He thought that a zemindar who contemplated enhancement should not be allowed to get rid of the trouble and responsibility of doing so in a fair and considerate way by handing over the estate to a temporary speculator for the avowed purpose of his immediately beginning a course of enhancement. If a farmer took a lease for less than eleven years, he should not take it with the intention of running up the rents.

Mr. Mackenzie would not limit the right to enhance to any particular class of landlord, but would prefer to protect the ryots by limiting and regulating the process of enhancement open to all landlords.

Mr. Field would omit all reference to a twenty-years' term, limiting the right of enhancement by farmers and lessees to those cases in which ten years of the original term were unexpired.

The President then put the question as follows:—Shall any restriction on the right of enhancement be put upon a landlord having a temporary interest as distinguished from one with a permanent interest?

The members then voted:—

Ayes.	Noes.
Baboo P. M. Mookerjee.	Mr. Mackenzie.
Mr. Field.	Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.
Mr. Harrison.	Mr. O'Kinealy.
The President.

The President then proposed that any landlord should be permitted to enhance who had a ten-years' time to run, omitting all reference to this being part of a larger term.

This was agreed to.

2. After some discussion as to whether pasture lands should be subject to enhancement, the President proposed that land used for pasture should be subject to the rules for enhancement and that illustrations should be drafted to prevent the law being misunderstood.

This was agreed to.

3. The first ground of enhancement discussed was—

(1) that the rate of rent paid by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the places adjacent.

Mr. Field proposed to substitute for "prevailing rate" the words "rate commonly paid" stating the difficulties that had arisen in deciding what a "prevailing rate" meant. The other members of the Commission did not, however, consider that the alteration, involving as it did a change in terms that had now become well known, was desirable.

Mr. Field proposed that a rate fixed by the Collector in the manner determined below should, for the purposes of this clause, be considered a rate prevailing within the tract settled, even though rent had not actually been paid at that rate. This was agreed to.

Mr. Field proposed that the words "in the vicinity" should be substituted for "in the places adjacent."

This was agreed to.

It was proposed to substitute for "land of a similar description and with similar advantages" the words "land of the same class according to the customary classification." The majority were, however, opposed to this proposal, thinking that a sufficient case had not been made out for changing the language of the law.

4. The second ground of enhancement discussed was—

(2) that the quantity of land held by such ryot has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid.

A question was raised whether it was necessary to provide in the Bill for the case of a lease of specified area within specified boundaries where it afterwards was found that the area within those boundaries was much larger. It was agreed, however, that it had better be left to the courts to determine whether in each case the essential condition was the area or the boundaries.

5. The third and fourth grounds of enhancement agreed upon were to the following effect:—

(3) That the productive powers of the land held by such ryot, as compared with such powers at the time when the rent was fixed, or at any subsequent period, have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot;

(4) That the prices of produce now prevailing in the vicinity as ascertained on an average of normal years, is higher than such prices similarly ascertained prevailing at some previous time since the rent was fixed.

Mr. Mackenzie referred to Bengal Act VIII of 1879 as a precedent.

It was agreed, after some discussion, that on grounds (1), (2), and (3) the zemindar should have the option of proceeding to enhance either before the Collector or in the civil court; but that on ground (4) he should proceed before the Collector only; enhancement by recourse to the civil court being intended to meet the case of enhancing the rents of one or more individual ryots on grounds applicable to their holdings only, and proceedings before the Collector being intended to meet the case of a general enhancement on general grounds.

6. It was generally agreed that some hard-and-fast line should be applied to check the amount of enhancement. Mr. O'Kinealy, however, would not limit enhancement on grounds (1) and (2), but only on grounds (3) and (4). Mr. Harrison, too, disapproved of a maximum limit under heads (1) and (2), as in the case of an occupancy right being acquired in chur lands originally leased for a mere quit-rent, the maximum rent would be most inadequate.

It was finally agreed that "the enhanced rent shall not be more than double the old rent on grounds (3) and (4), and when the enhanced rent is to the old rent in a higher ratio than three to two, the increase may be made progressive" (russudee).

Mr. O'Kinealy was in favour of enacting that the increase in the latter case must be made progressive. It was, however, agreed to leave this discretionary with the court or Collector. It was also agreed that "in the case of enhancement under (2), (3), and (4), the proportionate increase of the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy shall not in any case be higher than the ascertained proportionate increase of area, productive power, or price, respectively." Mr. Field thought (2) and (3) might be omitted as being by necessary inference contained in the rule itself; but the President and Mr. Mackenzie opposed the omission, and the clause was left as above.

7. It was then proposed that the comparison under heads (3) and (4) should not be carried back further than 12 years.

Mr. O'Kinealy and Mr. Harrison were very strongly opposed to this. They contended that it would be unfair to the ryots as well as zemindars. It would drive a zemindar to frequent enhancements, and bear heavily on those landlords who were best entitled to consideration, viz. those who only enhanced rents after long intervals. The periods for comparison must be left to the Collector settling the rates, the years selected for comparison being normal years at or near the time when rates were previously fixed. The proposal was abandoned.

The Commission adjourned to the following Friday.

Eleventh Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 9th January 1880.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

1. THE subject of enhancement was resumed and the fifth proposition on the printed paper was considered. The first point was as to what notice should be served when a landlord sought to enhance by proceedings before the Collector.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal thought that each ryot should be served with a separate notice.

Mr. O'Kinealy was of opinion that no notices were necessary.

Mr. Field remarked that a preliminary notice was in accordance with the custom of the country, and served to prepare the ryot for what was coming. He thought that, before the Collector actually commenced proceedings, the ryot should exactly know what was claimed from him and have a fair opportunity of agreeing or otherwise. He would thus be protected from being harrassed. The zemindar ought to put in complete jummabundi, and the ryot would then have every facility for objecting or agreeing.

Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy pointed out that no notice was required by the Chota Nagpore Landlord and Tenant Act, 1879.

Mr. Mackenzie approved of the Chota Nagpore procedure. The Collector ought not to be tied down to any particular form of notice or manner of service. The zemindar himself might be required to put in any particulars, but the Collector should not be bound to serve notice in any particular way.

Mr. Harrison concurred with Mr. Mackenzie; it was desirable to avoid the risk of the proceedings being declared invalid ab initio owing to some technical defect of form.

The President was of opinion that when a zemindar had to enhance a whole village, he should be bound to give notice through the Collector in some form or other of what he demanded from each ryot, so that every one might know the precise claim made upon him. The ryots who came in and agreed should have their costs. The grounds of enhancement and the specification demands might be posted up together, but the notice should state specifically what was demanded of each ryot.

In the discussion that ensued, some of the members of the Commission assumed that the action of the Collector was to depend upon the discretion of the revenue authorities. Mr. Field on this stated that he had not understood that the Collector's action was to be discretionary. If the Collector were not bound to proceed upon an application made to him, the result would be that all enhancement on the fourth ground would depend upon the will of the revenue authorities, seeing that it had just been settled that proceedings to enhance on this ground should not be had in the civil court. The existing right to proceed on this ground in the civil court might not be worth much, as the present law was practically unworkable. Still the zemindars might object to have this absolute right taken away, when the substitute offered them depended for its exercise on the consent of the revenue authorities.

After some discussion it was agreed that the zemindar should have as absolute a right of putting the Collector in motion as he now has of setting in motion the civil court. It was further agreed that in his application to the Collector he should set forth his grounds of enhancement, and when he claimed to enhance on any of the first three grounds, that he should with his application file a jummabundi showing his enhanced demand upon each tenant. That this jummabundi should be served through the Collector by a general notice, and each ryot might have a copy of the entry affecting him on payment of four annas. If on the publication of this jummabundi the majority of the ryots agreed to the landlord's terms and only a few opposed, it might not be worth while for him to go further before the Collector; he might then start cases de novo against the recusants individually in the civil court, abandoning the proceedings before the Collector.

Mr. Mackenzie thought that the zemindar should bear a portion of the costs of the enquiry. As to settling individual rents, a general nirikh would in the first instance be enough. The Collector could afterwards, if necessary, be asked to apply this nirikh to individual cases, and then a general notice might issue.

Mr. Field agreed to draft sections to the above effect.

3. Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee thought the ryots should pay costs of the jummabundi. He thought the difficulty would not be removed unless a more definite mode of declaring a fair and equitable rate was laid down. The mode proposed was complicated and as impracticable as the existing law. Some instructions as to how the inquiry was to be made should be specifically laid down, and the local classifications of land should be recognized.

The other members of the Commission, however, did not consider this desirable, and the President, while considering it most desirable, feared that the idea must be abandoned as impracticable. The draft sections would provide as far as necessary for taking evidence, and the superior revenue authorities would supervise the proceedings as in the case of resettling a Government estate.

4. Mr. Field then proposed to allow the Collector to intervene and fix rates suo motu in the event of disputes dangerous to the peace, providing, however, as a safeguard that when the Collector proposed to act in any case, he should first record his reasons and submit them to the Board or Government, taking no action until he had received superior sanction.

Mr. O'Kinealy and Mr. Harrison questioned the necessity of this. It was introducing a novel principle, and the necessity for it should be very fully established. Moreover, the subject had already been legislated for in Regulation V of 1812. Mr. Field's proposal as guarded by him was agreed to.

5. Mr. Field then pointed out that when it was settled that farmers with an unexpired term of less than ten years might not enhance, a distinction was expressly made between enhancement of individual tenants' rent through the civil court and general enhancement by the Collector. Were farmers to be debarred from both these alternatives?

It was agreed that the right of enhancing the rents of individuals by notice and suit in the civil court ought not to be restricted. The restrictions should only extend to setting in motion the new jurisdiction vested in the revenue officers.

6. The question was then raised whether, when the Collector had fixed the rates of rent, an appeal should be allowed, and, if so, whether to the Commissioner or to the Board. It was after some discussion agreed that the proceedings should in all cases be submitted for revision by the superior revenue authorities according to such rules as the Board might lay down. Two months should be allowed to any person interested to object to the Collector's rates, and the Collector should send up with the proceedings all objections preferred within that time.

The costs of determining the general rates were to be borne by the landlord, but in applying these rates to individual cases, if it was found necessary to resort to the Collector a second time, he should pass such orders regarding the costs of the further proceedings as might seem equitable, subject to the limit that no individual ryot could be called upon to pay as costs more than one year's rent at the enhanced rates.

7. The rates when settled (it was agreed) should stand good for ten years, except in cases of diluvion or alluvion.

8. It was also agreed that there shall be no enhancement when there is a written lease for a term certain, or where the parties have contracted against enhancement.

The Commission adjourned to the following Tuesday.

Twelfth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 13th January 1880.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

Mr. Mackenzie was unable to remain after 3-30, and therefore the transferability of ryots' holdings was briefly discussed, and the Commission adjourned to the following Friday.

Thirteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 16th January 1880.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

1. The subject of the method of enhancing the rent of tenure-holders liable to enhancement was first considered.

2. The President pointed out that a difficulty would be experienced by a zemindar who was equitably entitled to an enhanced rent owing to the intervention of tenure-holders between him and the ryots. He was only in direct relations with the tenure-holders; and if the latter would not enhance the rent of the ryots, how was the landlord to prove what was a fair and equitable rent to be paid by them? Accepting the principle which had already been adopted by the Legislature, that the tenure-holder was entitled to 10 per cent. profit on his collections, how was the zemindar to prove what the tenure-holder's collections should reasonably be, unless he could set some machinery in motion to ascertain what the ryots ought to pay him? Rents so ascertained would not be binding against the tenure-holder unless the tenure-holders chose to enforce them; but the tenure-holders should be made parties to the Collector's proceedings as they would benefit by having the rates determined. The costs of the proceedings should fall on the landlords and not on the tenants as before agreed to; but the tenure-holders being regarded as parties should bear their share in these.

Mr. O'Kinealy was not aware that there was any difficulty, as the law now stood, in getting enhanced rent from undertenure-holders.

Baboo Peary Mohun Moorkerjee observed that the present law was a dead letter so far as it rendered tenures liable to enhancement. In Hooghly and Burdwan there were no tenures which were liable to enhancement.

Mr. Field said the important question was—Were they to empower the superior landlord to compel the mesne landlord to proceed to enhance the rents of the ryots?

Mr. O'Kinealy would enhance on the lines of the old regulations as explained by the Privy Council. He had never heard that they were unfair or defective, and he would not innovate upon them.

Mr. Harrison contended that the provisions of the present Regulations were far too vague and indefinite: and if a Bill, such as that which was being drafted, became law, some elucidation of the principles on which tenure-holders could be enhanced was absolutely necessary, as we were creating a new and large class of statutory tenure and undertenure-holders. He took the case contemplated by section 18 of Mr. Mackenzie's draft Bill—

An occupancy ryot with the zemindar's consent sublets for twelve years, making his sublessee thereby an occupancy ryot and himself becoming a tenure-holder. If the new tenure-holder were to collude with the new occupancy ryot never to raise his rent, the zemindar would lose all power of enhancement.

Mr. Mackenzie thought that under the circumstances the zemindar ought to lose the power as he gave his consent to subletting with his eyes open.

The President could not concur. He thought the law required to be made definite. Speaking from cases within his own knowledge, he said that at present the law was so uncertain that people were forced to litigate, as they could not otherwise ascertain their rights. Some procedure should be devised for the zemindar's enhancement of the tenure-holder.

Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy thought that the present allowance of 10 per cent. was sufficiently definite.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal said that this was only in the absence of a customary rate. In many cases the tenure-holder was entitled by custom to a much larger profit than 10 per cent.

Mr. Harrison said that this did not remove the difficulty as to reaching the ryots. In large tracts of country—Orissa, Midnapore, Chota Nagpore, and elsewhere—it was customary to collect through village headmen under the designation of jotedars, joto-mundles, mundles, surburakars, &c. All these men under the new Bill would become tenure-holders, and it would be impossible to refuse a zemindar all rights of enhancement except in concert with these middlemen.

After some further discussion it was resolved to adopt article 23 of the Digest altered to the following effect :—

"In any case in which the rent of a dependent talookdar or other person possessing a permanent transferable interest in land intermediate between the proprietor and the ryot is liable to enhancement, such rent may be enhanced up to the limit of the customary rates payable by the holders of similar tenures in the neighbourhood; and where no such customary rates exist, up to such a limit as that his profit shall not exceed 10 per centum on his receipts after deducting the expenses of collection.

Mr. O'Kinealy agreed as this was the existing law.

It was also agreed that in no case shall such rent be enhanced to more than double the old rent.

It was then further settled that in order to ascertain what were the receipts of the mesne landlord, the superior landlord might move the Collector to determine the rents payable by the ryots as he might do if directly in receipt of rent from them.

Mr. Field observed that a superior landlord in proceeding against a tenure-holder might or might not make the ryots parties. Where the ryots were not made parties, he ought to go to the Civil Court only, and the costs should follow the result. When the superior landlord proceeded against both the mesne landlord and the ryots, Mr. Field thought the superior landlord should be permitted to go to the Civil Court in those cases in which the person in receipt of rent from the ryots could go to the Civil Court.

Mr. O'Kinealy pointed out that the superior landowner having no cause of action against the ryots his suit against them would be dismissed.

A majority of the Commission, however, dissented from Mr. Field's view, and it was resolved that the superior landlord when he wished to have the rents payable by the cultivators determined should be required to go to the Collector in all cases.

It was also resolved, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting, that when the superior landlord proceeded against the tenure-holder in the Civil Court, notice should be necessary; and that when he proceeded before the Collector, the apportionment of costs should be left to the Collector's discretion.

Mr. Harrison remarked that there was on point which was still left unsettled. It had been arranged that a landlord moving the Collector should apply in the first instance to have the rates fixed, leaving the parties to adjust the rents on that basis. But there was a great difference in a zemindar's position who was in immediate contact with his ryots and one who approached them through middlemen. In the case of middlemen it was no use for the zemindar to get the rates fixed; what he required was a jummabundi of rents payable by ryots. He would not be in a position to settle with the tenure-holder until the rents of the ryot were determined. In the case of a middleman therefore the application to the Collector must usually be to determine rents, and even in the event of there being no middleman, it would often be to the interest of the landlord to get the rents determined at once—that is to say, in cases where he knew that the ryots would not come to terms. The check upon needlessly applying for a jummabundi would be the augmented costs. This was agreed to, and it was resolved that it should be optional for the zemindar to apply for rates or for a jummabundi at once both in the cases of there being a middleman and no middleman.

5. Mr. Field's draft sections dealing with the use of land for building purposes were next considered.

These sections were considered subject to what might be settled hereafter about agricultural improvements.

All, with the exception of Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee, approved of a ryot being allowed without his landlord's permission to erect upon his land a dwelling-house for the use and occupation of himself and his family.

It was resolved that a zemindar whose ryot after notice continued to use the land illegally for general building purposes might apply for an injunction; and in the event of the Court granting the injunction, and of the ryot defying the Court, he might apply for ejectment. But there should be no ejectment save for disobeying the injunction of the Court.

It was also resolved that if no notice was given to the ryot, and there was no evidence of the zemindar's knowledge, the ryot should be entitled to compensation in the event of his being required to restore the land to its former condition.

It was agreed that a zemindar who allowed a house to be built should be permitted to claim rent at the same rate as for building sites.

6. The Commission adjourned to the following Friday.

Fourteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 23rd January 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Mohini Mohun Roy.

1. It was resolved that Mr. Field's proposed sections on merger should be adopted with the alteration that, unless a proprietor of an estate who becomes the owner of a tenure in such estate signifies by registration and notification through the Collector that he has a contrary intention, the tenure shall be presumed to be merged.

2. It was then proposed that the time for acquiring the right of occupancy created by Act X of 1859 and Act VII (B.C.) of 1869 shall not be reduced from twelve to three years.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Mr. O'Kinealy.
Mr. Field.	Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.
,, Harrison.	Mr. Mackenzie.
Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Fifteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 27th January 1880, 3 P. M.

PRESENT:

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

The following propositions were carried:—

1. That a ryot who has held his land for three years, but for less than twelve years, shall not be evicted otherwise than (a) for non-payment of rent, or (b) breach of an express condition of his lease, or (c) refusal to pay enhanced rent demanded of him; and if evicted on ground (c) he shall be entitled to compensation.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
Mr. Harrison.	,, Mohini Mohun Roy.
,, O'Kinealy.	Mr. Field.
,, Mackenzie.
Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

2. That the measure of this compensation shall be the annual enhanced rent demanded.

Carried unanimously, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee not voting.

3. That one year's enhanced rent shall be allowed as compensation.

Carried unanimously, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee not voting.

4. That a landlord shall have the right in every case to sell the statutory right of occupancy in execution of a decree for arrears of rent accruing upon the land in respect of which such right exists.

Carried unanimously.

5. That in those cases in which the landlord can now eject for non-payment of rent, he shall not be allowed to exercise this right of ejectment as well as the right of sale.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
Mr. Harrison.	,, Mohini Mohun Roy.
,, O'Kinealy.
,, Mackenzie.
,, Field.
Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

6. That the landlord may at his option proceed to bring the right of occupancy to sale or proceed against the person, movable property, or other immovable property, of the judgment-debtor.

Carried unanimously,

7. That the bidding at the sale of the right of occupancy shall be open to all persons without restriction.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
Mr. Harrison.	,, Brojendro Kumar Seal.
,, Field.
,, O'Kinealy.
,, Mackenzie.
Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy.

8. That a ryot having a right of occupancy shall not be allowed to mortgage it.

Carried unanimously.

9. That the statutory right of occupancy shall be transferable by private sale without the landlord's consent in those cases in which it is not now so transferable.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
Mr. O'Kinealy.	,, Mohini Mohun Roy.
,, Mackenzie.	Mr. Harrison.
,, Field.
Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Sixteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 30th January 1880, 3 P. M.

PRESENT

THE President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

The following propositions were discussed and settled:—

1. That all tenures, under-tenures, holdings transferable by custom, and the statutory right of occupancy shall be hypothecated for the rent thereof, and that such rent shall be a first charge thereupon.

Carried unanimously.

2. That the landlord having obtained a decree for arrears of rent due upon any such tenure, undertenure, transferable holding, or land in which a right of occupancy has been acquired, shall be bound to bring such tenure, undertenure, &c., to sale in execution before taking out execution against the person, movable property or other immovable property of the judgment-debtor.

Carried unanimously. [N. B.—The resolution of the last meeting on this point was thus deliberately reversed].

3. If, when any such tenure, undertenure, transferable holding, or right of occupancy is put up to sale in execution, no bid is made, the landlord shall bid, and, failing to do so, shall not be entitled to take out execution against the person, movable property or other immovable property of the judgment-debtor.

Carried unanimously.

4. The landlord may, upon grounds similar to those upon which attachment before judgment is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure, procure the attachment of any other immovable property of the judgment-debtor pending the sale of the tenure, undertenure, transferable holding, or right of occupancy.

Carried unanimously.

5. When a tenure, undertenure, transferable holding, or right of occupancy has been sold in execution, and after satisfying the decree executed, there remain surplus proceeds of the sale, the landlord shall out of such surplus sale proceed be paid any rent of such tenure, undertenure, &c., which has accrued after the last arrear recovered by the decree: provided that such landlord shall not so recover any rent which he could have included, but did not include, in his original claim for rent, and provided also that not more than six months' rent which fell due after the date of the final decree, shall be so recovered. In case of a dispute as to payment, the Court shall decide.

Carried unanimously.

6. When a landlord serves upon a ryot not having a right of occupancy a notice requiring him to quit or pay a specified increased rent, such ryot, if he do not quit, shall be liable to pay the increased rent specified in such notice up to the limit of double the former rent.

Carried, Messrs. O'Kinealy and Field dissenting.

7. No provision shall be made for giving compensation for improvements to ryots who have held for less than three years.

Carried unanimously.

8. Draft sections shall be prepared providing compensation for improvement in the case of ryots evicted after holding for three or more years, but less than twelve years.

Carried, Baboos Mohini Mohun Roy and Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting.

The Commission adjourned till 3 P.M. on the following Tuesday.

Seventeenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 3rd February 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S draft of sections dealing with the enhancement of money rents was taken up and part of it considered.

As regards ground 4, it was contended that the words "otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryots" be omitted, as a general increase in prices of produce could never be due to the agency of the ryots of a small local area. It was, however, pointed out that the ryots might combine to dig a canal or construct a road, and Mr. Mackenzie drew attention to a passage—pages 180-81—of the Administration Report of 1871-72, which showed that Sir George Campbell had distinctly contemplated this contingency, and had justified the imposition of the cess on the ryots on the ground that they would thereby obviate their liability to enhancement so far as due to all improvements connected with the road cess.

Mr. Harrison then contended that, in the face of this declaration, it was absolutely indispensable that the Commission should plainly state their views as to whether payment of the cesses was to obviate liability to enhancement. It should be decided one way or the other, and not left to be fought out at enormous expense in the courts. He thought the principle of allowing such payment to obviate liability to enhancement was unsound, and as the case of ryots combining to construct a canal or road was not one likely to occur, and, if it occurred, would only have an infinitesimal influence on prices of neighbouring markets, he would omit the words altogether. This was, however, negatived.

Mr. Field expressed an opinion that it would be wiser not to legislate on the subject at all. He doubted if it could ever be shown that a rise of prices in any locality was solely due to public works carried out by the proceeds of local taxes, or, where such rise was due to several causes, how much was due to this particular cause. If any rule were made by the Legislature on such a mixed subject, the fair rule would be that a rise of prices due to works carried out by local taxation should afford neither a ground of enhancement to the zemindar nor an answer to enhancement to the ryot. To enact that the ryot, who has paid a moiety of the cost of such works, may not plead that they were carried out, and the rise of prices so brought about partly at his expense, while the zemindar is in no way debarred from benefiting in his enhancement claims by such a rise so brought about, was to give the zemindar the full benefit of the taxes paid by him and to deny to the ryot the benefit of the taxes paid by him; nay, it was a further injustice, for it gave the zemindar the benefit of the taxes paid by the ryot.

Messrs. Mackenzie and O'Kinealy concurred in Mr. Field's view.

Mr. Harrison then proposed to add an illustration to ground No. 4 so as to make it clear that contribution to road cess and public works cess was not to be a ground of exemption from liability to enhancement.

Eighteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 6th February 1880.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

ARTICLES 37 to 40 of the Digest were discussed.

It was agreed that in Article 37, for the words "permanent settlement of such province," the words "permanent settlement of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa made in 1793" should be substituted.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal suggested for consideration whether it would not be proper to substitute a fixed period of 60 years for one which constantly increased as years rolled by. It was anomalous that the very law which absolutely protected a ryot from enhancement in 1859, on the ground of his having held at a uniform rate for a period of sixty-six years, should not give similar protection to his neighbour in 1820, though he paid at a uniform rate for more than eighty years. Under the law, if the zemindar mortgaged his estate to a ryot and did not choose to redeem within 60 years, he would lose his right to receive any rent from any ryot. The majority were, however, against this suggestion being adopted.

It was also agreed to adopt the proposal of Mr. Smith, Officiating Commissioner of Orissa, to the effect that in temporarily settled estates all rights to hold at fixed rates beyond the terms of the sanctioned settlement be disallowed, unless such right has been expressly sanctioned by the authority competent to sanction the permanent settlement of the estate.

Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy proposed to alter the presumption that, where a ryot's rent has not been changed for 20 years, the land has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement.

"Ryot," it was proposed, should be defined as one who cultivates land with his own hands, or through a member of his family, or by hired labour, or at whose sole risk the crop is grown.

It was also proposed that the payer of rent in kind shall not be regarded as the ryot, unless the person to whom he pays rent possesses a permanent and transferable interest in the soil, or is a farmer.

Both these propositions were carried unanimously.

The following proposition was carried, Mr. O'Kinealy and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal dissenting, and Mr. Mackenzie not voting:—

That an occupancy ryot shall not, except under special circumstances, be allowed to sub-let.

The following proposition was carried unanimously:—

That if an occupancy ryot does sub-let, he shall be held to have transferred to his lessee his right of occupancy in the lands sub-let; if these lands do not amount to the whole of the ryot's holding, the persons to whom he sub-lets shall be jointly and severally liable with him to the zemindar for the rent.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Nineteenth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 10th February 1880.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S sections on the enhancement of money rent were further discussed.

It was agreed to adopt Mr. Harrison's proposal that, when rent is enhanced upon the fourth ground, the Collector shall deduct from the increment to which the landlord would otherwise be entitled the amount payable by the ryot as cesses at maximum rates on his former rent.

Illustration.—A, the landlord, proves that prices have increased 50 per cent. since B's rent was fixed at Rs. 8. B's rent is therefore enhanceible to Rs. 12, but he is already liable to pay Rs. 8-4 for rent and cesses. Only Rs. 3-12 will therefore be added to his rent, making his new rent Rs. 11-12, on which amount he will also be liable to pay cesses according to law.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee expressed his dissent from the latter part of the proposition and proposed that, inasmuch as the road cess went to the maintenance not only of roads which communicated with marts and trading towns, but also of roads which improved the means of communication within the villages themselves, not more than half the amount of road cess payable by a ryot should be deducted from the enhanced rent. This proposition, however, was not agreed to by the other members.

It was at first agreed that the Bill shall provide forms of notice of enhancement, containing substantially the same particulars as mentioned in section 24; but, on further consideration of the whole subject, it was settled, upon the suggestion of Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy, that notices of enhancement served through the Court should be done away with, and that if the parties cannot agree to the enhanced rent, the first step by way of having notice served from the Court shall be the filing of a plaint, and that this plaint shall be filed one month sooner than the present enhancement notice is served, so as to give time for service of summons about the same time as the notice was formerly served, that is, that the plaint shall be filed four months from the end of the year in order to affect the rent of the year next ensuing.

In discussing the enhancement procedure, which is to apply only to ryots having a right of occupancy, it was agreed that the entry of a ryot's name in the jamabandi filed by the zemindar with his plaint shall be deemed an admission on his part that such ryot has a right of occupancy in the land specified opposite his name.

It was agreed that the table of rates prepared under Rule (b), section 28, shall be binding on the Civil Courts.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Twentieth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 13th February 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S sections on the enhancement of money rents were further discussed and settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Twenty-first Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 15th February 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S sections on occupancy ryots were considered.

It was proposed that if a ryot transferred his land before the completion of the twelve years with the sanction of his zemindar, the time during which the transferrer has held may not be added to the time during which the transferree has held.

It was then settled that such time may be added if the landlord expressly consent in writing to its being added.

It was proposed that a zemindar may, by a contract duly registered at the time of the commencement of the tenancy (and not otherwise), provide against a ryot acquiring a right of occupancy.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Twenty-second Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 20th February 1880.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Harrison, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

CONSIDERABLE discussion took place upon a suggestion of Mr. Harrison's that the actual cultivator should in every case be treated as the occupancy ryot, occupancy ryots who had sub-let being coverted into middlemen.

Mr. Field's sections dealing with occupancy ryots were further considered.

Mr. Mackenzie proposed—

(a) That any ryot having a right of occupancy at the time of the commencement of the Act shall be at liberty to sub-let his lands to a sub-ryot, but the rent payable by such sub-ryot shall not in any case be more than ten per centum above the rent payable by such ryot to his landlord.

(b) That no sub-ryot existing at the time of the commencement of the Act shall be at liberty to claim under this rule any abatement of rent actually paid by him at such time; but every such sub-ryot shall be protected against arbitrary ejectment by his landlord so long as he pays such rent.

Ayes.	Noes.
The President.	Mr. Field.
Mr. O'Kinealy.	,, Harrison.
,, Mackenzie.
Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal.
,, Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

It was then proposed that the principle of Mr. Mackenzie's propositions so carried be extended to all occupancy ryots, whether their rights accrued before or after the passing of the Bill.

Ayes.	Noes.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

NOTE.

Mr. Field subsequently drew up the following statement of his reasons for dissenting from Mr. Mackenzie's proposition.

He did not see his way to accepting it as a solution of the real difficulty. Let A be the proprietor, B be the ryot, and C the sub-ryot. The question is whether B or C shall pay according to the table of rates—shall pay what may be called Occupancy Rates. Under the proposed rule B will pay them, and C will pay ten per centum more. Thus there will be a double standard of rent; and under the influence of an increasing population, and the competition engendered thereby, the tendency will be towards the higher rent. B is a middleman. Now to improve and secure the position of the actual cultivator is a wise object of legislation for an agricultural community in a country like this, where manufacturing enterprize or the pursuits of commerce afford but a small field of employment for those whose lot is dissevered from the cultivation of the soil. In such a community men like B are the drones of society, and the creation of such a class ought not to be encouraged. To encourage it is not to promote the object of wise legislation. If the actual cultivator has an hereditary lien on the land upon which he is born; if the possession and occupation and cultivation of the soil for a brief period of years is, according to the arguments addressed to the Commission, sufficient to call this dormant but inherent lien into activity and life, it is difficult to see why the son of the soil who holds and cultivates land under a middleman should be in a worse position than his brother who holds and cultivates under a zemindar. Is there anything in the position or antecedents of the middlemen which entitles them to be dealt with less tenderly than the zemindars? It is said not to be politic that zemindars should let their lands as they please. Can it be argued for any good reason that it is politic that middlemen should do so? Mr. Field believed that to carry this proposed rule will be to lose sight of the true policy which ought to be borne in view, that is to raise the status and secure the position of the actual cultivator: he would, in order to effectuate this policy, benefit the actual cultivator wherever he found him, whether holding under a zemindar or under a middleman. If the proposed rule is carried into effect in the case that had been brought to the notice of the Commission it is material to see what the effect will be. B now pays eight annas per bigha to A, and receives Rs. 3-8 per bigha from C. Under the new procedure B's rent may be enhanced to double its present amount, i.e. to one rupee per bigah. Now B cannot in future take from any new sub-ryot more than one rupee plus one-tenth = Re. 1-1-9½ per bigha. No harm will be done to B, it is said, because C and his fellows will not be entitled to have their rents reduced from Rs. 3-8 to Re. 1-1-9½: but can it be doubted that C and his fellows will throw up their land in order to take land in the vicinity at about a third of the rent they were previously paying? The result will be that more than two-thirds of B's rental will be transferred from him to his tenants. Mr. Field has not much sympathy for middlemen; and in carrying out the policy he has mentioned if the interests of the actual cultivators and those of the middlemen come into conflict so that either must suffer, he would prefer that the interests of the middlemen shall suffer rather than those of the cultivating ryots. But the above result will be a confiscation of existing interests, which legislation would scarcely be warranted in carrying into effect. To legislate for the future is one matter, but to interfere with vested rights is another—is a course that can be justified only upon the strongest grounds, and such grounds are here wanting.

The proposed rule will knock on the head the bhag-jote system, which is customary more or less in every district in Bengal.

On the other hand, to treat C as the occupancy ryot—as the person liable to pay the occupancy rates—will be a consistent effectuation of the policy already mentioned. It will avoid the confusion and disadvantages of a double standard of rent and two grades of cultivators. If C's rent remain unchanged, the new Act will not injuriously effect A and B by altering their present position to their disadvantage. Then if C's rent is enhanced under the new procedure, there will be an increment to be divided. Let that increment be divided in the proportion in which A and B now share what C pays in the shape of rent, or in any other proportion that is fair and reasonable. A gets no increase under the existing law. He will be better off under the new Act by so much as his share of the increment amounts to. He cannot justly complain that he is not allowed to pocket the whole of the increment, for he cannot justly ask the Legislature to ignore the fact that the existence of a middleman necessitates the division of what can properly be taken from C as rents between two persons, instead of one getting the whole. It is contrary to the true principle of the well-being of an agricultural society that a number of middlemen should exist between the actual cultivator and the proprietor. The wisest method to discourage such an injurious condition of affairs is so to legislate that the rent of all cultivators shall be as nearly as possible equal, excepting of course allowed and recognized exceptions, and that this rent shall be divided amongst all who stand above the cultivating class, the shares being less as the number of sharers is greater. To allow the creation of intermediate interests, to force down the cultivator, to alter his position for the worse, is to introduce a wedge into the centre of the system which will in course of time force it in pieces.

Mr. Mackenzie records the following note explanatory of his suggestion adopted by the Commission :—

"The great difficulty which I feel in connection with this question of sub-letting by ryots is the fact that all over the country such sub-letting is practised, and has always been practised, and that it is clearly recognized by the existing law. We have before us no tabula rasa either in the country or in the Statute book, and I cannot myself understand how those members of the Commission, who at the outset objected to correct even the demonstrable errors of Act X, on the ground that, right or wrong, it was now law, can calmly propose to revolutionize the whole agricultural society of Bengal by sweeping away a provision of Act X which does recognize an existing fact.

"I do not for a moment imagine that the suggestion now provisionally adopted by the Commission is free from all objection. The whole question is involved in extreme difficulty, and any attempt at its solution must be put forward with diffidence by any person who has really tried to realize those difficulties. My present position may be explained thus :—

"I am desirous of doing all I can for the actual cultivator. I would do all I can to prevent rackrenting of every sort. I think it very undesirable that a ryot should by sub-letting to rackrented korfa ryots convert himself into a mere middleman. But, as a matter of fact, I find that men recognized as ryots, entered as such on the jummabundis of the zemindars and subordinate talookdars, do sub-let in this way, and I do not believe that any Legislature can by a stroke of the pen change the whole face of the country. If we are to endeavour to get rid of sub-infeudation of this objectionable sort, we shall only succeed by accepting patent facts, shaping our proposals so as to fit into these, and giving by law an impulse and a tendency in the direction which we wish to see things take. We may do what we fairly can to discourage this sub-letting, we cannot ignore it or change its character all at once.

"Hence I demur to the proposal that every korfa who has held 12 years shall be deemed to be the occupancy ryot of the future, the present occupancy ryot being simultaneously and instanter converted into a middleman. In the first place I suspect that the result of this would be that, in the greater part of the lands now sub-let to korfas, we should a year after the Act was passed have no occupancy ryots at all. There is no permanency whatever in the existing arrangements of ryots with their korfas. The latter are men of the lowest class, having no idea of fixity in their fields, and who will probably not be able to prove a 12 years' holding under any circumstances. It is, moreover, a very strong measure to say that holding during years in which the law distinctly declared that korfa ryots could not acquire occupancy rights shall now be held to have given such rights. If, on the other hand, korfa ryots are only now to begin to acquire such rights, and to take 12 years to get them, it again seems to me probable that not an occupancy ryot will eventually be found on the lands below the so-called new middlemen (now sub-letting occupancy ryots). It will be the easiest matter in the world to prevent the right accruing.

"Again the process of converting the korfas at large into occupancy ryots, however it is carried out, will have the most disastrous effect upon the rents of existing occupancy ryots who till their own fields. Where the rent of a cultivating occupancy ryot is now Re. 1, that of a korfa is probably Rs. 3 or even more. It is not proposed to reduce the rate actually paid by the korfa, now made an occupancy ryot. In the course of a few years the rates of the two classes of occupancy ryot (old and new) must tend to assimilate, and we shall have the rents of existing occupancy ryots forced up to what are now recognized as korfa rackrents. (I find in fact that Mr. Field distinctly contemplates that the Collector should take the korfa rate as the basis of his table of rates. This, I consider, would be certain to raise an agrarian revolution in many parts of Bengal, and I am tempted to say rightly so.)

"Then suppose the new occupancy ryot again sub-lets and makes himself a middleman, either the rent of the actual cultivator must be pushed higher and higher, or the profits which the zemindar and superior talookdars either actually receive or might fairly expect legally to make must be cut into for no fault of theirs. To call the lowest man, being the actual cultivator, an occupancy ryot, will not console him much for having to pay an impossible rent, or reconcile the zemindar to a reduction of his profits or a diminution of his powers of enhancement.

"It appears to me that the best way of stopping sub-infeudation, of discouraging sub-letting, and of encouraging and strengthening the position of the actual cultivator is to impose a legal maximum limit on rents. This can be done, I think, without upsetting the whole fabric of agricultural society, and in a way to give a stimulus to all the tendencies we desire to advance.

"I propose therefore, as a general rule, to treat as ryots the existing occupancy ryots, recorded as such in the jummabundis of the zemindars and recognized middlemen, and to say that they may sub-let to korfa ryots; but I would limit the rent demandable from a korfa ryot to a fixed percentage over the occupancy rate as determined by the Collector in our table of rates or as actually paid by the existing occupancy ryot. I think it is perfectly certain that the occupancy ryot's rate will always be such as to divide between him and his landlord the net profits of cultivation. It will be always very far from a rackrent. If there is any doubt of this, we must make sure of the point by legislation, and I shall return to this later on. Then if the percentage over this, payable by the korfa is reasonable, the korfa also, being the actual cultivator, will hold at a reasonable rent and be placed in an improved condition. (At the President's suggestion the percentage embodied in the resolution of the Commission is 10 per cent. I do not accept that as a final settlement of this particular point.)

"This being the proposal in its crudest form, we are met at once by the fact that probably all existing korfas are paying higher rents than those demandable under the rule. To reduce those rents summarily would be hard on the occupancy ryots. This is no doubt a difficulty, but there are difficulties everywhere. The best solution seems to me to be this. The existing korfas hold either as tenants-at-will from year to year, or under engagements for very limited terms. They must be bound to carry out their engagements; and I would encourage them to renew those engagements on existing terms by protecting them from arbitrary ejectment so long as they pay those rates, giving them in fact sub-occupancy rights good against the occupancy ryot, but not against his landlord. If, however, the korfa does not renew his engagement at the old rates, then the occupancy ryot would of course be able to recover no higher rent than our rule allows, if he chooses again to sublet. But he has thus laid upon him the strongest possible inducement to take the cultivation into his own hands, and to employ his korfas as hired labourers, paying them sufficient wages. I believe this would, in most cases, be for the good of the korfas themselves and for the general good of agriculture.

"Now, having thus stated the nature of the propositions adopted by the Commission, and the theory underlying them, I must go on to say that I am prepared to admit that they do not cover all the ground. This question of sub-letting is very complex. The proposals meet sufficiently well the case of the ordinary occupancy ryot, such as he is to be found in the greater part of Bengal, i.e. the man with a moderately sized holding, not much more than sufficient for the support in comfort of one family and its belongings of all sorts. It does not meet the case of the reclaiming jotedar, small capitalist, who having taken up as ryot originally a considerable tract of land settles other sub-ryots on it, and so by their agency brings it into cultivation and eventually ceases himself to be anything more than a rent-receiver. The incompleteness of our rent law has made it this man's interest, and the interest of his landlord also to classify him still as a ryot. On the one hand, this classification deprived the cultivators under him of all rights (other than customary rights); while on the other hand, the landlord was able to enchance his rents as those of a ryot without encountering the difficulties met with in enhancing the rents of a talookdar. In fact, however, such men are small talookdars, and ought to be treated as such. The question is how to define or distinguish them.

"I am inclined to transplant a principle from Regulation XIX of 1793, and to treat all tenures exceeding one hundred beeghas in area as differing in quality from those below that area. Any man holding over one hundred beeghas is almost certainly not a cultivator himself or likely to become one. I think we might very well say that any person now classed as an occupancy ryot, who holds over one hundred beeghas of land and does not himself cultivate the whole of it, shall be held to be an undertenure-holder. I would give the occupancy right to the actual cultivator under him, and if there is a sub-ryot below this last, I would apply our sub-ryot rules to that case. This would probably be found to meet the cases of the Rungpore jotedar and of the howladars.

"We should have to consider how to meet questions of existing rents, enhancement, and adjustment of rents; but I do not see insuperable difficulties in the way.

"Here, again, I submit that my proposal is in practical accord with existing circumstances.

"Then I must go further and say that I think the law should lay down a maximum standard of rent for occupancy ryots. I would not allow an occupancy ryot's rent to be enhanced to an amount which would be in excess of a sum equal to the value of one-fourth of the gross produce of his lands (as estimated by the Collector), if such lands were under the ordinary crop of the district. (Of course I would not allow existing rents to be lowered in any districts.) This standard limit of one-fourth might very well be made the object of the Collector's enquiries when he is called upon to draw up a table of rates. In the application of it to individual cases, it would be open to any ryot to show that he was by the rule of proportion entitled to a lower rate. The rule that rents could only be doubled once in ten years would prevent any violent and sudden disturbance of rents in districts where the landlord now only gets a small portion of the gross produce."

If this rule were adopted, then I think the rate of the korfa or sub-ryot might, as a maximum, be 20 per cent. in excess of the occupancy rates.

I would prohibit sub-letting by sub-ryots under any circumstances.

I should like the Commission to consider whether some provision could not be made for registering existing occupancy ryots in the zemindar's sherishta, and for registering as tenures holdings over one hundred beeghas.

"I desire, however, again to submit to the Commission that, while such a registration is desirable and necessary, it will only be brought about by our making it not the landlord's interest to refuse it or neglect it. If occupancy ryots are to have favoured rates, no landlord will admit them to registration if he can help it. If all permanently settled ryots are to pay the same rates (as I hold they should), they should all be protected against arbitrary eviction, and that is all that, in my opinion, a right of occupancy conveys.

"The proposals which I have from time to time submitted on this ryot question all hang together, as I venture to think, in a way that almost demonstrates the soundness of the theories underlying them. If the Commission will only come down to the recognition of occupancy rights as the general rule, it will, I believe, get rid safely of many complications that have already made our project of law such as we can have hope to get passed."

Mr. O'Kinealy notes that he would have voted in favour of Mr. Harrison's proposal, which he understood to be to give all cultivators a right to remain on the land as long as they paid according to the table of rates fixed by the Collector, provided Mr. Harrison could have protected the present occupancy royts from being rackrented. If all cultivators were turned into occupancy ryots and nothing further done, then the experience of the past left no doubt on his mind but that the rates paid by korfa ryots would in the course of a few years be looked upon as occupancy rates, and the result would be widespead rackrenting. On the other hand, Mr. Mackenzie's proposal gave nothing more to middlemen, took nothing from their ryots, protected the resident ryots in their acknowledged right to sub-let, and reduced the evil arising from this right to a minimum. He felt bound to vote for it. He did not understand that Mr. Field had put forward any scheme; but as he now understands the scheme now put forward, it is a proposal to benefit the ryot and save the middlemen from confiscation—a scheme where nobody loses and everybody gains—he does not understand how this can be done.

Twenty-third Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 24th February 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

MR. FIELD'S paper on the proposed special procedure for rent suits was discussed and settled.

It was agreed that the procedure of Act X, 1859, should be followed generally, and that any improvements suggested by the Civil Procedure Code should be incorporated by reference.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Twenty-fourth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 27th February 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

A DISCUSSION took place on Mr. Mackenzie's proposals of the preceding Friday, but nothing was definitively settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Twenty-fifth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 2nd March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

AFTER much discussion the following scheme was sketched out and reserved for future consideration:—

1. That holders of lands over 100 beeghas in extent (being occupancy ryots) be allowed to sub-let in the same manner as occupancy ryots holding less than 100 beeghas, and subject to the same restrictions, their korfas being treated in the same way as the korfas of small holders.

2. But when an occupancy ryot holding over 100 beeghas can show that his tenure was originally of the nature of a junglebooree tenure, i.e. that he came on the land as a reclaiming capitalist, he shall be exempt from these rules. His rent shall not, in that case, be more than 10 per cent. of the gross produce, and the rents of his undertenants of all grades shall be regulated by the custom of the district, if any such custom can be clearly established, or shall be enhanced only in the same ratio as the rent of the reclaiming tenant who holds direct from the proprietor.

3 That no sub-ryot of any grade shall be liable to pay more than the value of 30 per cent. of the gross produce.

4. That the maximum rent of the ordinary occupancy ryot be equal to 20 per cent. of the gross produce.

5. That the rent of the korfa tenant of an occupancy ryot be not more than half as much again as the occupancy rate, subject to the above limit of 30 per cent.

6. That the Collector shall determine the value of the gross produce of each of the classes of land within selected local areas, and declare those values, which will at once regulate the fixed maximum rents, and form the table of rates for those areas.

7. That a zemindar shall be at liberty to enhance any ryot's rent up to those rates, subject to the other limitations laid down in the law, unless the ryot can show that he is entitled to hold at a lower rate.

8. Existing rents not to be lowered in any case on account of the table of rates.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Twenty-sixth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 5th March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S sections relating to coparceners were discussed.

It was agreed by all, except Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee, that in the case of disagreement between coparceners as to the management of their estate, tenure, or undertenure, the District Judge shall only interfere upon the application of the Collector or of some person interested.

Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee contended that no manager should be appointed except on the application of a coparcener or coparceners owning more than a 12-anna share in the property.

The following proposition was carried, all the members of the Commission voting for it except Mr. Field:—

That where there shall have been a general manager appointed by the Government for any district, the Government being hereby authorized to appoint the same, all estates, tenures, and undertenures shall be placed under his management.

It was agreed by all the members, except Mr. O'Kinealy and Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal, that an arrear of rent shall bear interest at the rate of 12 per centum per annum.

It was pointed out by Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal that, by the use of the words "shall be liable to interest at 12 per centum" in section 21 of Act VII (B.C.) of 1869, the Legislature evidently intended to give a discretionary power to the Courts in the matter of awarding interest (Marshall's Reports 278, 1 W. R. 154, 6 B. L. R. 120), and he contended that the law on the subject ought not to be changed.

It was proposed that a tenant may deposit rent payable by him in the collectorate when he entertains a bonâ fide doubt as to who is entitled to receive the same, even though no dispute exist as to the right to receive it.

This was carried, Mr. Field, Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy objecting to the omission of any reference to a dispute existing.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Twenty-seventh Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 9th March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Mackenzie; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

IT was agreed that every tenure, undertenure, and occupancy holding should be deemed to be hypothecated for its own rent, and that such rent should be a first charge thereon; but that all words should be omitted providing that, in the event of such tenure, &c., being sold in execution of a decree obtained by a person other than the landlord, such landlord should be entitled to priority of payment before other creditors in respect of any rent that might be due to him.

Mr. Field's sections on the registration of transfers and limitation were discussed and settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday, but was subsequently further adjourned till Tuesday, the 16th March.

Twenty-eighth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 16th March 1880, 3 P. M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

THE following proposition was carried unanimously:—

That holders of land over 100 beeghas in extent (being occupancy ryots) be allowed to sub-let in the same manner as occupancy ryots holding less than 100 beeghas and subject to the same restrictions, their korfas being treated in the same way as the korfas of small holders.

The following proposition was carried, Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy dissenting:—

That when an occupancy ryot holding over 100 beeghas can show that his tenure was originally of the nature of a junglebooree tenure—that is, that he came on the land as a reclaiming capitalist—he shall be exempt from the rules now laid down. His rent shall not in that case and in the absence of contract be more than ten per cent. of the gross produce, and the rents of his undertenants of all grades shall be regulated by the custom of the district, if any such custom can be clearly established, or shall be enhanced only in the same ratio as the rent of the reclaiming tenant who holds direct from the proprietor.

The following propositions were carried, Mr. O'Kinealy and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting:—

That when a ryot or sub-ryot pays rent in kind, the maximum rent recoverable shall be one-half of the gross produce; and that when a ryot pays a money rent, the maximum rent recoverable from the ryot shall be 40 per cent. of the value of the produce.

The following proposition was carried unanimously:—

That the maximum rent of the ordinary occupancy ryots be equal to 25 per cent. of the gross produce.

It was understood that all the above propositions might be subsequently, if necessary modified.

The Commission adjourned till Friday, the 19th March 1880.

Twenty-ninth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 19th March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

THE consideration of the scheme sketched out at the meeting of the 2nd of March last was resumed.

It was agreed to leave to the revenue authorities the determination of the gross value of produce, proceeding as far as possible on a reasonable average of years and upon prices in the locality.

It was suggested that the rent of special crops be regulated by a maximum percentage of increase, but this point was left for final settlement hereafter.

Proposition No. 7 of the 2nd March was carried, the limitations therein referred to being (1) new rent not to be more than double the former rent; and (2) that increase may be progressive, and the word "entitled" being deemed to mean "entitled by contract or custom."

It was also agreed that existing rents should not be lowered in any case on account of the table of rates.

The report of the Behar Rent Committee was then taken up and its recommendations considered.

The proposal to enforce the filing of zemindari accounts by dismissing rent suits unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a definite receipt of his yearly accounts, or otherwise satisfactorily prove that his accounts have been duly filed in the rent-roll office was negativated.

The proposal to prevent loose sheets of papers, such as jamabundis, jamawasilbakis, &c., being considered "books kept in the regular course of business" and so being admissible as evidence was also negavated.

It was resolved not to make the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats compulsory.

Mr. Browne's recommendation that a Court which decrees rights of occupancy shall compel interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats, specifying the boundaries of the fields in which such rights are decreed, was considered to be sufficently met by what the Commission have already settled regarding the particulars to be given in plaints and decrees.

The proposal as to the use of counterfoil receipts is in accordance with the resolution of the Commission for Bengal, but it was not thought necessary to give a form for receipts.

"Head IV" of the Behar Committee's report on "the cheapening of registration" was held not to come within the purview of the Rent Commission.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Thirtieth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 23rd March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

THE report of the Behar Committee was taken up and the remaining portion of it considered.

With respect to "Head V," page 6, it was resolved that all ryots in Behar shall be deemed to have a right of occupancy in any land, other than zerat land, of which they are in possession on the [date to be fixed hereafter], if they have held such land for the three years next preceding such date, and if they have for twelve years next preceding such date held as ryots any land in the estate of which such land forms a part, or in any estate which with such former estate at any time formed a single estate.

It was further resolved that this rule shall apply in future.

It was agreed to accept the definition of zerat land given at page 7 of the Behar report, i.e. land continuously cultivated by the proprietor or co-sharer for twelve years with his own stock, or by his servants, or by hired labour at his expense.

It was agreed that when a ryot exchanges his land or any part of it, he shall have the same right in the land which he gets in exchange as he had in that which he gave in exchange.

As to the ejectment of non-occupancy ryots (p. 7, para. 16), it was resolved that this subject must be treated for Behar as for Bengal. A similar resolution was arrived at on the following points, viz. compensation for improvements (p. 7, para. 17); transferability of occupancy rights and presumptions in favour of ryots (Head VI, p. 8); distraint (Head VII, p. 8); enhancement (Head VIII, p. 9); demand of illegal cesses (Head IX, p. 9); summary procedure (Head XI, p. 10); settlement by Collectors in disputed cases (Head XII, p. 11); instalments (clause 1, para. 25, p. 12); measurements (clause 2, para. 25, p. 12); specification of boundaries, &c., in plaints (clause 3, para. 25, p. 12); and deposits of rent (clause 4, para. 25, p. 12).

On the subject of payment of rent in kind (Head X, p. 10), it was resolved to adopt the recommendations contained in clauses (a) and (b) of para. 23. The recommendation contained in clause (c) of the same paragraph was rejected. The recommendation contained in clause (d) was adopted with the following additions—"less a fair deduction in consideration of the ryot taking the whole risk, and allowing for land now usually left uncultivated." For the commutation of rents in kind into money rents, it was resolved that the same machinery should be used as for making a table of rates. The recommendation contained in clause (e) of the same paragraph was adopted with the following modifications—strike out the last five words; insert "not more than" between "to" and "half," and make the rule apply to all cases, whether a written agreement exists or not.

The propositions contained in clauses (a), (b), and (c) of para. 29 (p. 12) were rejected.

It was resolved to make provision for the away-going crop in the case of rejected tenants in Bengal and Behar.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Thirty-first Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 30th March 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal and Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

THE subject of enhancement was discussed.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Thirty-second Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 2nd April 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; and Baboos Brojendro Kumar Seal, Peary Mohun Mookerjee, and Mohini Mohun Roy.

THE subject of enhancement was again taken up and discussed.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Thirty-third Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 6th April 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

Messrs. Field, Mackenzie, and O'Kinealy; and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

THE Digest was considered, and it was resolved—

(1) to omit the following Articles and the matter of them, viz. 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9 in part; 11, 14, 15, 17, 18, 30, 31, 34, 41, 42, 48, 54, 56, 67, 70, 71, 72, 73, and 74;

(2) to retain the following Articles with certain amendments, viz. 6, 9 in part; 12, 24, 32, 33, 39, 47, 57, 58, 59, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 68, 69, and 98.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Thirty-fourth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 9th April 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and Mackenzie; Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy.

MR. FIELD'S draft of procedure, segment II, was taken up and considered, and sections 136 to 149 were settled.

Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy proposed that this procedure for sale without decree should be extended to give all proprietors and tenureholders the right to sell all tenures and under-tenures respectively. This proposal was not approved. His proposal that the mofussil notice of sale should be served through the Court was also negatived.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Thirty-fifth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 16th April 1880, 3 P.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

MR. FIELD'S note on enhancement was discussed, but not definitively. Articles 13, 75, and 83 of the Digest were settled; and sections 150 to 164 of the Procedure draft were discussed and settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Thirty-sixth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 23rd April 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookeejee.

MR. FIELD'S Draft of Procedure (Segment III) was taken up and discussed, and sections 165 to 224 were settled.

It was agreed that in section 175 (arrest of defendant before judgment in certain cases) the words "such defendant being resident within the district in which the suit is instituted" should be inserted.

Mr. O'Kinealy was in favour of substituting the sections of the Civil Procedure Code regarding arrest before judgment for the proposed sections relating to arrest, as this was the law in force since 1869; but a majority preferred Mr. Field's draft with a slight modification.

It was agreed that affidavits under section 137 of The Code of Civil Procedure might be made in rent cases by the plaintiff, his pleader, or any person acquainted with the facts.

Mr. O'Kinealy thought section 180 (making applicable the provisions of The Civil Procedure Code relating to attachment before judgment) unnecessary, the land being already hypothecated for the rent by section 54; but Mr. Field pointed out that there might be suits for the rent of land not so hypothecated.

Mr. O'Kinealy would have the provisions of section 206 (relating to the sale of tenures, &c., subject to their incumbrances) retroactive as regards previous incumbrances, whether registered or not, but majority of the Commission agreed to make it retroactive as regards registered incumbrances only if a copy be served within six months after the Act comes into operation.

The Commission adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Thirty-seventh Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 27th April 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

MR. FIELD'S Draft Procedure (Segment IV) was taken up and considered.

It was agreed to omit the proviso at the end of section 03 to the effect that, in the case of a non-transferable holding, the landlord may at his option accept a verbal relinquishment.

Mr. Mackenzie wrote that he would prohibit the landlord absolutely from taking any thing but rent from his tenants, and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee opposed the permitting revenue authorities to have any voice in determining the validity or otherwise of ancient customs by virtue of which landlords might claim other payments.

The following points were determined:—

1.—A section to be inserted declaring the right of a ryot to cut trees planted by himself or his predecessors.

2.—The Bill not to apply to Orissa in the first instance, but to empower the Lieutenant-Governor so to extend it if necessary.

3.—All notices to be served in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in section 174 of the Draft.

4.—The sale of an occupancy holding for arrears of rent to avoid all sub-leases, Mr. O'Kinealy and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting.

The Commission adjourned sine die.

Thirty-Eighth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Tuesday, the 25th May 1880, 11 A. M.

PRESENT:

The President, Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy, and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

The paper of propositions submitted by the President and Mr. Field to the other members of the Commission was taken up and considered, together with Mr. Mackenzie's remarks on the same.

The first question was as to what persons should be deemed tenure-holders within the meaning of sections 8, 9, and 10 of the Bill. The President and Mr. Field had proposed that—

(1) "every person let into possession of a single lot, including more than 50 standard bighas of land by a proprietor [or by Government in a khas mehal], before or after the commencement of this Act, should be deemed such a tenure-holder."

Mr. Mackenzie wrote that he was doubtful as to the propriety of an area-test of status, but that if such was to be an absolute test, the figure of 50 bighas seemed to him far too low. He proposed that where a person held lands as to part of which he might be considered a tenure-holder, and as to part a ryot, it should be left to the courts to settle his status on a consideration of the general circumstances and character of his tenure as a whole; making it a presumption that if the area of the whole was more than 100 bighas, the holder was a tenure-holder, and if it was under that amount, that he was a ryot.

The President said that, the chief point was to prevent a person possessing more than 100 bighas being considered a ryot.

Mr. Field was of opinion that, a tenant holding less than 100 bighas, should be allowed to contract as he chose, but that if he held more than 100 bighas, he should be considered a tenure-holder.

Mr. O'Kinealy would not allow such contracts.

Eventually it was agreed that the President's and Mr. Field's proposition as stated above should stand, with the substitution of "100" for "50,"—any contract to the contrary notwithstanding—in respect of lands let either before or after the commencement of the Act.

It was also agreed that persons let into possession of less than 100 bighas might be ryots or tenure-holders as they chose to arrange by contract.

The next proposition agreed to was that—

(2) "every person let into possession of a single lot, including more than 100 standard bighas of land by a tenure-holder or undertenure-holder, before or after the commencement of this Act, should be deemed to be an undertenure-holder within the meaning of sections 8, 9, and 10 of the Bill."

The third proposition carried was as follows:—

(3) "No such tenure-holder as is mentioned in proposition (1), no such undertenure-holder as is mentioned in proposition (2), and no mukarraridar or istemrardar can acquire a right of occupancy in land which is part of his tenure or undertenure."

The fourth proposition considered was that—

(4) "Any such tenure-holder or undertenure-holder shall be entitled to more favourable rates than those mentioned in section 9 if not less than three-fourths of the land was unreclaimed at the time of the original letting into possession, and such letting into possession was for the purpose of reclamation."

Considerable discussion arose as to the words "not less than three-fourths."

Mr. O'Kinealy was against any exact proportion being stated, and would compensate a tenant according to the amount expended. If a tenant who reclaimed three-fourths was entitled to more favourable rates, he did not see on what principle a tenant reclaiming less than three-fourths could be refused all compensation. The present section would not meet the case of a tenant spending large sums in keeping up embankments. Indeed, as it stood, the tenant might claim more favourable rates, although he had never spent a rupee on reclamation.

Mr. Field proposed to substitute the words "more than one-half," and this was eventually agreed to.

(5) "Section 9 as it now stands takes account only of the gross rents payable to the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder; but account should also be taken of land occupied and cultivated by him, or granted rent-free by him. A reasonable rent should be estimated for all such land taken into account."

This was agreed to.

(6) "Having regard to the actual rents now paid, we think that 10 per cent. of the net collections is not enough for the profit of the tenure-holder or undertenure-holder. We have carefully examined this point, and we think that the court should be allowed to give what is fair and equitable, provided that (a) in the case of a reclaiming lease-holder (jangalburi talukdar) not less than (say) twenty per cent. of the net collections shall be given, and (b) in the case of other tenure-holders and undertenure-holders not more than (say) thirty per cent. shall be given."

This was agreed to, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee objecting to thirty per cent. as an encroachment on the rights of zemindars.

(7) "The following persons shall be deemed to be ryots capable of acquiring a right of occupancy:—

(a) every person holding immediately under any such tenure-holder as is mentioned in proposition 1, or under any such undertenure-holders as is mentioned in proposition 2, and who is not himself an undertenure-holder, if before such person was left into possession no other person has acquired a right of occupancy in the same land under the provisions of this Act, or Act X of 1859, or Act VIII (B. C.) of 1869:—

(b) every ryot holding immediately under a mukarraridar or istemrardar."

These clauses were agreed to, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee suggesting that the last proposition should be modified, as he did not think a mukarraridar who let his land should lose his right of occupancy.

(8) "One person only can have a right of occupancy in land at the same time."

This was negatived: and it was resolved to retain the present law, under which a ryot, holding land under a right-of-occupancy ryot, can acquire a right of occupancy in such land, if let otherwise than on a lease for a term or year by year.

(9) "As a necessary consequence of the previous propositions, a right of occupancy may be acquired by 'holding' merely without cultivating, and the present draft Bill must be amended accordingly."

This was agreed to.

(10) "The Act to be silent about sub-letting, neither prohibiting nor authoritatively recognizing the practice by ryots."

Mr. Field undertook to add an Illustration to section 4 of the Bill, showing that the customary right of a ryot to sub-let is not intended to be affected by the provisions of the new Act.

The following proposition was carried, Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee dissenting:—

(11) "The operation of the enhancement provisions in the present draft Bill shall be subject to the following rules:—

(a) the enhanced money rent of an occupancy ryot shall not exceed 25 per cent. of the average annual value of the gross produce:

(b) such annual value shall be calculated upon staple crops only. Board of Revenue to declare staples for areas, and to make rules for calculation."

Mr. O'Kinealy proposed that the maximum rent of a non-occupancy ryot should be fixed.

Ayes.	Noes.
Mr. O'Kinealy.	Mr. Field
,, Mackenzie.	Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.
	The President.

The proposition was therefore negatived.

(12) "The rent in kind of an occupancy ryot, who receives no assistance in the way of seed, labour, &c., from his landlord, shall not exceed 50 per cent. of the gross produce in the case of staple crops. In the case of special crops, the parties may make a special contract. In the absence of such special contract, the courts shall not give more than 25 per cent. of the average annual value of the gross produce of staple crops."

This proposition was agreed to, Mr. O'Kinealy preferring that the rent in question should not exceed 40 per cent., and Mr. Mackenzie, that the courts should give a percentage of increase in the former rent in the latter case.

The President and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee thought this rule should not disturb existing rents, but the other members of the Commission were in favour of it operating on existing rents.

(13) "In order to facilitate the enhancement and abatement of rents on the ground of rise or fall of prices it is proposed—

"that the Collector of every district shall prepare annually and publish in the Gazette average price lists of the staple crops for suitable areas."

The areas, it was suggested, might be settled by the Board of Revenue upon the recommendation of the Collector. The prices of certain fixed marts should be taken, the same marts being always adhered to. The price of production in the field where it is grown varies according to the distance of the usual market, and the necessary cost of carriage thereto. The price in different markets varies according to their proximity to larger markets or the port of export and the facilities for carriage thereto. By taking always the prices of the same markets, the normal variation as affected by external and general, as distinguished from the local and particular, causes, is more likely to be obtained.

(14) It was also proposed that "the Gazette copy of these price list, should be made relevant—admissible as evidence—in cases between landlords and tenants concerned with the enhancement or settlement of rents:

"that to secure uniformity, the Board should be empowered to make rules for the preparation of these price lists, and should have a power of revision."

These propositions were agreed to.

(15) "Increase of the productive powers of the land may be brought about (1) by the agency or at the expense of the ryot; or (2) by the agency or at the expense of the landlord; or (3) without the agency or expense of either, by external causes. In the first case the ryot is not liable to enhancement. In the second and third cases he is liable, but the present law gives the whole increment to the landlord. It would be equitable to give the whole increment to the landlord in case (2); and in case (3) to divide the increment, share and share alike, between the landlord and tenant."

Messrs. O'Kinealy and Mackenzie would give the ryot two-thirds in case (3).

A majority, however, decided that the landlord and tenant should each have one-half.

The last proposition agreed to was—

(16) "In the case of an increment due to rise of prices only, the present law gives all the increase to the landlord. It is proposed to divide it between the landlord and tenant, giving a moiety to each."

The draft Bill, as amended up to the 8th May 1880, was then considered, section by section. The first 25 sections were settled.

Mr. O'Kinealy objected to section 17, viz,—

"(e) No ryot can be ejected from land in which he has a right of occupancy, whether for non-payment of rent or other cause not being a breach of a stipulation in respect of which such ryot and his landlord have contracted in writing that the ryot shall be liable to ejectment for a breach thereof."

A majority of the members of the Commission, however, resolved that it should stand.

The Commission adjourned till the following day.

Thirty-ninth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Wednesday, the 26th May 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

Sections 26 to 45 inclusive, of the draft Bill, as amended up to 8th May 1880, were considered and settled.

Mr. O'Kinealy enquired if the meaning of section 32 was that every ryot who had held land for less than three years might be ejected, whether it was customary for him to be ejected or not; as if so, he entirely objected to this section.

Mr. Field replied that, such provision was intended to be subject to any custom to the contrary which might be proved under section 4 of the Bill. In order to prevent possible misapprehension, he, in deference to Mr. O'Kinealy's view, undertook to introduce into the section the words "subject to the other provisions of this Act."

Mr. O'Kinealy wished it to be recorded that he objected to the whole of Chapter VI, dealing with "the use of land for building purposes." A majority decided that it should stand.

In section 42, which permits a landlord to enhance an occupancy tenant under certain circumstances so that the rent may be equal to five per cent. of the market-value of the land, Baboo Peary Mohun thought this percentage too low, and desired that the maximum might be twenty per cent.

This proposal was not agreed to by the other members of the Commission.

Mr. O'Kinealy thought Chapter VII "of Merger" unnecessary, and likely to cause difficulties. The other members were in favour of its retention.

The Commission adjourned till the following Friday.

Fortieth Meeting of Rent Commission.

Friday, the 28th May 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

The draft Bill was again taken up and considered, and Chapters VIII, IX, X, XI, XII, XIII and XIV (Sections 46 to 92 inclusive and Section 94), were settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following Monday.

Forty-first Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Monday, the 31st May 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field and O'Kinealy; Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy.

The draft Bill was further considered, and the whole of Part II, except Chapter XV, (i.e. Sections 133 to 225 inclusive) was settled.

In Chapter XVI, it was agreed that the zemindar should be bound to receive the arrears of rent of a tenure up to sunset on the day preceding the day of sale of such tenure for its own arrears, subject, however, to the rules made by the proper authorities for the receipt of money. It was further agreed that no tender of money after sunset on such day should stop the sale.

Mr. Field and Baboo Mohini Mohun Roy were in favour of allowing tenure-holders up to noon of the day of sale to tender arrears, but the majority of the Commission voted against this proposal.

Mr. O'Kinealy disapproved of the definition of "incumbrances" in section 206, on the ground that it did not include incumbrances made by unregistered as well as registered instruments before the commencement of the Act. The definition as drafted was retained, in accordance with the opinion of the majority.

Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy thought that a purchaser should be allowed twelve years to avoid and annul incumbrances on tenures sold for arrears of Government revenue. After the discussion it was settled in accordance with the opinion of a majority, that the limitation should be three years from the date of such incumbrances coming to the purchaser's knowledge.

Mr. O'Kinealy wished to record his vote against arrears of rent carrying interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum.

The Commission adjourned till the following Wednesday.

Forty-second Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Wednesday, the 2nd June 1880, 11 A. M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

Baboo Brojendro Kumar Seal's notes on Chapter XVIII (Procedure) of the Bill were discussed.

The Baboo proposed that any suit might be tried according to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code upon consent of parties.

A majority of the Commission, however, disapproved the proposal.

In section 205 the Baboo thought that anybody, without restriction, should be allowed to pay into court the amount of decree and costs awarded, but a majority of the Commission preferred the section as it was drafted.

In section 206 (Explanation), the Baboo and Mr. O'Kinealy thought, against the opinion of a majority of the Commission, that when the tenure is mortgagable without the zemindar's consent, there was no reason why any condition should be specially made, as the zemindar would be competent to sell free from incumbrances.

Section 210, first proviso. The Baboo and Mr. O'Kinealy would leave out the word "resident," but a majority of the Commission were in favour of retaining it.

Section 211, (3). The Baboo objected to not more than six months' rent after final decree being given. He thought that complicated questions might arise, which could not well be settled in the Execution Department, and that the landlord ought to be left to a regular suit. Mr. O'Kinealy wished to record his objection to this section, on account of 12 per centum interest being made compulsory.

A majority of the Commission were in favour of the section standing as drafted.

A discussion afterwards took place as to the application of the table of rates to the third and fourth grounds of enhancement.

The Commission adjourned till the following day.

Forty-third Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Thursday, the 3rd June 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs Field and O'Kinealy; Baboos Peary Mohun Mookerjee and Mohini Mohun Roy.

Mr. Field's draft Report on the proceedings of the Commission was taken up and a portion of it settled.

The Commission adjourned till the following day.

Forty-fourth Meeting of the Rent Commission.

Friday, the 4th June 1880, 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The President; Messrs. Field, O'Kinealy, and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee.

Mr. Field's draft Report was again taken up and finally settled.

The Commission adjourned sine die.

NOTES AND PAPERS CONSIDERED BY THE COMMISSION AND REFERRED TO IN THE REPORT AND PROCEEDINGS.

From—F. M. Halliday, Esq., Commissioner of Patna, dated 8th March 1879, with report, &c., of the Behar Rent Committee.

With reference to your letter No. 1122, dated 7th September 1878, I have the honor to submit herewith the report of the committee appointed to consider the question of the rent-law for Behar, together with minutes of the committee's proceedings. The report has been signed by the majority of the committee, but appended are also copies of the following:—

I.—Letter from Mr. Browne, the Judge of Patna. Mr. Browne has assented to the report, but desires that the suggestions contained in his letter may be laid before Government.

II.—Letter from Mr. T. M. Gibbon, containing his remarks dissenting from the resolutions of the Committee.

III.—Second letter from Mr. T. M. Gibbon, on the subject of the Behar Landholders' Association memorial, recently submitted to Government.

IV.—Letter from Baboo Hurbuns Sahai, a member of the committee.

V.—Letter from Baboo Joy Perkash Lall, a member of the committee.

2. From the notes of the proceedings it will be seen that, in anticipation of the meeting, Messrs. Worsely and Finucane had each drafted a Bill for consideration of the committee; copies of these I beg to enclose for the information of Government, as there is much in both Bills worthy of note, though the committee, as will appear, for reasons given in the minutes of proceedings, considered it advisable eventually not to adopt either the one Bill or the other as the basis of discussion at the meetings held at Sonepore.

3. Owing to the absence of Mr. Hodgkinson in Burmah, his signature to the report has not been obtained.

REPORT OF THE BEHAR RENT COMMITTEE.

We, the committee appointed to consider the subject of the proposed Rent-Law for Behar, beg to submit the following report:—

1. The objects which it is sought to effect are the enactment of an effective and simple procedure to enable the ryot—

Summary of points at which amendments of rent-law proposed.

(a) to maintain his rights of occupancy when acquired;

(b) to hold his land subject to fixed conditions of tenure;

(c) to be certified exactly of the amount which he will have to pay annually;

(d) to resist illegal distraint;

(e) to have at hand a trustworthy record of demands and payments.

All the suggestions contained in the papers which have been referred for our consideration, aim at improving the existing machinery for attaining these ends. The points at which it is proposed to strengthen and improve this machinery will be successively indicated under the following heads:—

(1) To improve the system of zemindari accounts in connection with the obligations imposed on putwarees.

(2) To encourage or render compulsory the interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats.

(3) To insist on the use of counterfoil receipts.

(4) To cheapen registration.

(5) To discourage disintegration of old and new holdings, whether by amalgamation or otherwise.

(6) To allow occupancy rights to be transferable by sale, and to create certain presumptions of law in favour of the ryot.

And for the other purposes in view, it is proposed—

(7) To simplify and amend the law of distraint, and to make illegal distraint, or restraint of crops, specially punishable.

(8) To limit the right to enhance, and make illegal enhancement punishable.

(9) To make the demand of illegal cesses punishable.

(10) To recognise and provide by law for the system of payment in kind which obtains largely in the province.

And to those may be added—

(11) The provision of a summary procedure, as in the Bengal Bill, for the recovery of undisputed arrears of rent.

(12) The empowering of Collectors to effect a settlement in certain disputed cases.

2. We propose to enumerate the amendments and alterations in the present law which we think best calculated to effect the objects stated in the preceding paragraph. It will, we trust, be found that the changes which we propose confer no novel rights upon the ryots; that they impose no novel obligations on zemindars; that they for the most part merely declare and define the existing law, and that they are strictly consistent with the fullest recognition of the rights which were conferred by the Permanent Settlement on all parties concerned.

No novel rights created or obligations imposed. Amendments chiefly declarations of existing law.

HEAD I.—IMPROVEMENT IN THE SYSTEM OF ZEMINDARI ACCOUNTS.

3. Under this head we propose—

First, to make it obligatory on landholders to file annually in the Collectors' or other public office, such accounts as the local Government may direct. These accounts should contain not less than the following particulars:—

Filing of accounts in Collectors' offices.

(1) The serial number of each ryot.

(2) The name of each ryot

(3) The area of land held by each ryot, and of the portions thereof of which rent is payable in cash and in kind.

(4) The details of each separate annual demand on each ryot, and the total thereof.

It is held by some of us that ryots, by taking copies of these accounts, can be certified of the areas of their holdings, the rates claimed, and the annual demand upon them; others of us are of opinion that any such extracts would, in practice, have to be repudiated by the ryot. For reasons which we give further on in this report, we do not see our way to enforce by any new legislation the interchange of any specific form of pottahs and kabooliyats. We propose therefore to adhere to the existing general declaration, that the terms on which land is held ought to be reduced to writing. But we consider it impossible to forecast any form of lease or counter-lease which shall sufficiently meet the requirements of every case. We trust that extracts from the accounts which we propose to have filed will practically serve the purpose of pottahs, without compelling the parties to have recourse to that litigation to which the compulsory interchange of leases and counterparts would give rise. Extracts from the accounts thus filed will also help the ryot to prove his occupancy rights and to maintain them when acquired. We propose that the filing of these accounts should be enforced by dismissing rent-suits, unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a deposit receipt for his yearly accounts, or unless he otherwise prove to the satisfaction of the court that such accounts have been duly filed in the rent-roll office.

Secondly.—Under this head we also propose to exclude from evidence loose sheets of paper produced from the putwarees' or zemindars' sherista, such as jummabundees, jumma-wasil bakees, and other papers of that kind. Under the present law such documents should not, we think, be received in evidence. Being written in loose sheets, any number of them may be fabricated to suit the exigencies of any particular case; and as they are written by the putwaree and produced from his sherista, it will be manifest that they are generally fabricated to suit the party who can offer the putwaree the highest bribe. The result is that the too frequent course of a rent-suit in Behar resolves itself into a prolonged, and often irrelevant, wrangling over a chaotic mass of jummabundee papers. The moonsif endeavours to grope his way as to how far, if at all, this or that set of jummabundee papers is not an utter fabrication by some putwaree not present in court to be examined touching those papers—a question which the moonsif need never have allowed to be raised if he had but excluded these papers, as being, under the circumstances, not admissible for the court to refer to, much less to explore. We are unable to see how these loose sheets of paper can be admitted in evidence at all, unless it be held that they are "books kept in the regular course of business." (Evidence Act, section 34.) Such a theory is a manifest absurdity to anybody who has had practical knowledge of the loose scraps of paper now filed in the courts as putwarees' accounts. We therefore propose to draw the attention of the civil courts to the inadmissibility in evidence of these loose sheets of paper, by distinctly declaring that they are not books kept in the regular course of business within the meaning of section 34 of the Evidence Act. Of course such documents, though not books, are yet admissible under section 159 of the Evidence Act, in order to refresh the memory of the particular putwaree who wrote them. In practice, we believe that they are not received under this section. It frequently happens, owing to the power hitherto exercised by ticcadars and zemindars in Behar of dismissing and appointing putwarees at their pleasure, that papers written by one putwaree are produced by his successor, who has no personal knowledge of their contents, and are received as being evidence per se. Under any circumstances it is objectionable that putwarees' papers, as now compiled, should continue to be admitted on a record on the same footing as a Government map.

4. Putwarees.—We do not deem it desirable to incorporate the law relating to putwarees with the rent-law. A separate draft Bill regarding putwarees has been submitted for our consideration. That Bill involves the imposition of a "putwarees' cess," to which a majority of us are, under present circumstances, opposed. We have therefore no suggestions to offer with regard to putwarees. We are, however, of opinion that the putwaree should be made (first) either a bonâ fide public servant paid by the State—a village record-keeper and nothing more; or (secondly) that he should be made entirely a zemindaree servant, liable to dismissal at the pleasure of his master, the landholder. The present system, under which the putwaree is nominally a public servant, but is in reality the zemindars' paid servant, we are unanimous in condemning.

Head II.—Compulsory interchange of Pottahs and Kabooliyats.

Compulsory interchange of leases and counterparts considered.

5. The next point referred to us for consideration is the encouragement, or the rendering compulsory, of the interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats. This is a subject which in our opinion is beset with considerable difficulty. We are aware that it is a condition of agricultural prosperity that the terms on which cultivators hold their lands should be defined and stable, and not arbitrary and precarious. The legislative enactments of our Government have, from the earliest period of our rule, over and over insisted in emphatic terms that agriculture, the great resource of this country, should be carried on with reasonable certainty, and that the contract between the rent-receiver and rent-payers shall be reduced to writing. On this subject we have caused a précis to be drawn up, tracing the rise and progress of formal lease deeds. It will be found in the appendix to this report.

6. Taking up this subject at 1859, we have to observe that Act X of 1859, and Act VIII of 1869 (section 2), declare that every ryot is entitled to receive a pottah from the person to whom the rent of the land cultivated by him is payable. The tender of such a pottah entitles the rent-receiver to a kabooliyat in conformity with the terms of the pottah.

It appears that while under the old regulations landholders were bound to tender pottahs in prescribed forms, failing in which they were liable to be non-suited with costs, more recent laws and regulations leave it to some extent optional with them to tender pottahs or not as they think fit, and merely declare that the ryots are entitled to pottahs. These the ryots can now obtain by regular suit, but only with an amount of delay and expense which has practically rendered the privilege a nullity.

Notwithstanding these repeated and peremptory injunctions, pottahs not granted.

7. We believe we may safely say that, notwithstanding the repeated and peremptory injunctions and declarations of the legislature in this matter, not one-fourth per cent. of Behar ryots hold pottahs; that in fewer cases still have the abwabs been consolidated with the assal rent, and have the ryots been certified of the specific amount which they have to pay from year to year.

Ryots' reluctance to accept pottahs.

In the précis appended to this report, we have quoted Sir John Shore's remarks explanatory of the zemindar's failure to give, and of the ryot's reluctance to accept, leases. The principal difficulties which have always obstructed the desirable practice of interchanging leases and counterpart-leases have been described by the author of "Land Tenure, by a Civilian" [1832], in terms which still serve to describe the existing state of things in Behar.

"It had been, in the first instance, declared that regulations (vide I, 1793, section 8; XXVII, 1795, section 5; XXV, 1803, section 35) for the protection and welfare of the ryots and other cultivators would be enacted, but none have ever been effectually passed restoring them to any of their rights. Even the single stipulation (VIII, 1793, clause 2, section 60; LI, 1795, section 10) most in their favour, which was intended to prevent the zemindars from raising the rents of khudkasht ryots, was so worded that it gave every zemindar the means of enhancing his demands at pleasure; since, to entitle the ryot to the benefits of the provision set forth in the clause in question, it was necessary, in the first place, that he should have accepted a lease or pottah, and as in so doing he would have acknowledged a feudal over-lord, in the person of the zemindar, he was naturally averse to become a party to the annihilation of his rights.

"2*nd*.—In the pottah prescribed by the Code, the abwab or illegal cesses were consolidated with the assal or authorized and prescriptive rate. The ryots did not acknowledge the existence of a right to levy anything in addition to the regular established rate; the abwabs were exactions which were submitted to of necessity, but which, as they were not sanctioned by the law as it formerly stood, could not, according to their notions, be enforced by legal means unless they acquiesced in the demand.

"3*rd*.—Supposing the ryot to have subscribed to the record of his future vassalage, he obtained no permanent benefit by his submission. The rate (nirkbandee), or average standard of rents paid in the pergunnah, might at any time be easily raised by compelling several of the inferior cultivators to take khamar or waste-land at enhanced rates, and thus to raise the average of the village rates (this was, and is, the common practice of the zemindar in Bengal), and after the expiration of three years the oldest ryot might be compelled by an action at law to pay the same.

"4*th*.—Proof of collusion would be assumed from an excess of land above the quantity specified in the pottah, or from the insertion of lower rates than are usually levied from lands capable of bearing the superior species of agricultural produce, though the one might have resulted from careless measurement and the latter from the improvement of inferior land originally incapable of producing the more valuable descriptions of produce, by the more assiduous or more scientific cultivation of the occupant. It has been said that many zemindars purposely inserted low rates and smaller quantities of land than were actually held, in order to forward their own views—a procedure which is not improbable.

"5*th*.—The lease afforded no protection against the consequences of a general pergunnah measurement (XLIV, 1793, section 5; L, 1795, XLVII, 1803, section 5) when, by any manœuvres of the description given, a real or fictitious enhancement of rates had been established, or after a public sale of the grantee's interest and title in satisfaction of arrears of revenue. (The Cornwallis Code limited the period of a lease by a proprietor to a ryot [i.e. holder of any degree] to ten years; this limitation was subsequently abolished.)

"6*th*.—A zemindar could only be compelled to abide by the tenor of the pottah by a civil action, which might be kept pending, by the usual course of legal artifice, for a period co-extensive with the unexpired term of the lease itself, and the ryot would in the meantime starve for his presumption in venturing to assert what even the Code admits to be his just rights and privileges"

8. From what has been stated in the preceding paragraphs it is, we think, clear that, whatever may be the cause, there exists, and always has existed, much reluctance on the part of zemindars to give leases, and possibly on the part of ryots to give kabooliyats, accurately defining the conditions of their tenures. We fear, therefore, that any attempt to render the interchange of any specific form of pottahs and kabooliyats compulsory would lead to general litigation and strife; that it would embitter the relations of landlord and tenant in Behar; that in the end it might possibly injure rather than improve the ryots' condition. Moreover, the compulsory interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats in any express statutory form would involve an enormous increase in the number of registration offices and civil courts, which we do not feel ourselves prepared to recommend.

Difficulties in the way of compulsory interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats.

8. (a) On this head Mr. Browne has made a recommendation, to which the committee has acceded, namely, that whenever a court decrees rights of occupancy, it shall compel the interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats specifying the boundaries of the fields in which such rights are decreed.

Recommendation of Mr Browne as to encouragement of interchange of pottahs.

9. It has been proposed to leave the law declaring the ryot entitled to a pottah, defining his status and the conditions of his holding as it is, but to make it compulsory on landlords and tenants to interchange chittahs, khatians, or abstract of holdings, and their counterparts. These chittahs would contain merely the areas of fields, rates actually paid, amounts of rent, and instalments thereof.

Proposed compulsory interchange of chittahs, khatians, or memoranda of holdings.

These documents, it was urged, exist in every putwaree's office. The interchange of them, not involving the determination of questions of status, would not give rise to litigation, while they would certify the ryot of the amount of the annual demand to be made upon him, and would compel the proprietor to obtain the ryot's assent in writing to his liability to pay that demand. On the other hand, it was urged that in some districts landholders cannot themselves give the areas of fields in their estates; that the compulsory interchange of chittahs, involving, as it would, the determination of rates actually paid, would lead to litigation. To these arguments it was answered—to the first, that if the landholders of any district are themselves unable to give the areas of their tenants' holdings, the sooner such landlords are compelled to measure their estates, the better both for them and their tenants: to the second, that, however undesirable it may be to drive proprietors and their tenants into court in order to determine questions of status, it is surely desirable that the rates actually paid should at least be defined and ascertained, and not arbitrary and uncertain. With these remarks and the record of the actual finding by the majority of the committee, we propose to leave the matter for the consideration of Government.

9. (a) Under this head Mr. Worsley proposed that non-occupancy ryots should be declared entitled to receive pottahs for a term not exceeding five years at the rates hitherto paid by them. The committee was of opinion that there is no need to alter the existing law regarding the right of non-occupancy ryots to pottahs (vide page 9 of minutes of proceedings).

Head III.—Use of Counterfoil Receipts.

10. The next point at which it has been proposed to improve the rent-law is in the giving of receipts.

Counterfoil receipts.

The present law requires that receipts for rent shall specify the year or years on account of which the rent is acknowledged to have been paid, and it is for the ryot to say on account of what year the payment is made. In practice the ryot is rarely consulted on the subject. Payments are, as a rule, credited to (hal bakaya) "current demand and arrears." The year or years to which the payment is credited are not specified. The result is that these receipts are no guide to a court in determining the amount of arrears due for any particular year. Moreover, the loose way in which receipts are written, on scraps of country-paper in no specified form, affords ryots great facilities for fabricating receipts for sums not really paid. For these reasons a majority of us are of opinion that the use of counterfoil receipts should be insisted on. The form of receipt which we recommend will be found in page 7 of the minutes of our proceedings.

Two of our number (Messrs. Gibbon and Anderson) are opposed to the compulsory use of counterfoil receipts, on the ground that, as the counterfoil part necessarily remains in the hands of the landlord, there is nothing to prevent him, if so bent, from falsifying his accounts, whereas it may be a hardship on the ryot to be bound to produce a receipt in prescribed form. After all due consideration of these opinions, the committee think that it would be an improvement in the present law to declare that receipts shall be in counterfoil, and that the refusal or neglect on the part of the landlord to give a counterfoil receipt in the prescribed form shall be deemed a withholding of a receipt. The committee also think that a suit for rent should not be entertained unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a receipt book for the period in respect of which rent is claimed, or for such additional period as to the court may seem necessary.

Head IV.—Cheapening of Registration.

11. The next point referred for our consideration is the cheapening of registration. It has been suggested that this might be effected by insisting on the use of a printed form of pottah, to be generally adopted in each district after approval by the Collector. From the extract which we have quoted in the précis appended to this report it will be seen that this suggestion is as old as the Permanent Settlement itself. It has never been found practicable, and we do not think it practicable now. Sane men entering into a contract, whether it be a lease or other agreement, should, we think, be allowed to adopt any form they may think best suited for the expression of their own intentions. The only feasible suggestions which we have to offer under this head are—

(1)—That the registration law might be so amended as to make it lawful for the parties to a deed to file a copy of it in the sub-registrar's office. The sub-registrar's duty would thus be limited to comparing the original with the copy filed. Copying fees would be saved, and the delay and incidental expenses which attach to the copying of documents would be avoided. The sub-registrars would have to number in serial order all documents thus filed; to certify them as true copies; to have them bound in monthly volumes and transmitted to the district registrar's office on such stated periods as may be thought necessary. Such copies would, for all purposes, be as valid as the copies now written out in the sub-registrars' offices, at considerable expense, authorized and not authorized, and often, we fear, with much delay and inconvenience to the parties.

(2)—We also recommend that sub-registrars be allowed to go into the interior to register documents without the issue of a commission, as required by the present law.

Our recommendations under this head will be found in page 8 of the minutes of our proceedings.

Head V.—Discouragement of disintegration of holdings, whether by amalgamation or otherwise.

Discouragement of disintegration of holdings

12. The fifth point which we had to consider is the discouragement of the amalgamation of old and new holdings, as tending to vitiate the ryot's occupancy rights in his holding. The amalgamation and sub-division of holdings in Behar, taken in connection with the zemindars's failure to give pottahs, have made it difficult for ryots who de facto have occupancy rights, to prove the existence of such rights. An examination of the jummabundee papers of Behar estates has shown that while 60 per cent. of the present ryots have held some land in the villages in which they reside for more than 12 years, less than one per cent. of them hold at present the same area of land which they held 12 years ago. Inasmuch as these ryots hold no pottahs or other documents showing which are the particular fields which they have held for more than 12 years, and which fields were subsequently acquired, it is doubtful whether any one of them could, under the existing law, prove their occupancy rights, even where these rights exist beyond all doubt. This is an evil which is due to the general failure on the part of landholders to comply with an obligation which the law has, from the earliest period of our rule, imposed upon them, namely, that of giving pottahs to their tenants specifying the boundaries and areas of their holdings.

Presumption that a ryot having held any land in an estate for 12 years, shall be presumed, till the contrary is proved, to have held the whole of his land for 12 years.

13. To remedy this evil we propose to make more clear than it is at present, the presumption of law that every resident ryot who has cultivated any land continuously in any estate for 12 years, shall be held to have acquired occupancy rights in the whole of his holding in such estate. The effect of this presumption will be, that on a ryot having proved continuous residence and cultivation of any land whatever in an estate for 12 years, the onus of proving that such ryot has not acquired occupancy rights, in the whole or any particular part of his holding, will be thrown on the zemindar. We need put the reasonableness of this presumption on no higher ground than the maxim, alike of common sense and universally received law, "that where the subject-matter of an allegation lies peculiarly within the knowledge of one of the parties, that party must prove it, whether it be affirmative or negative."

14. When a Behar ryot is taken into court and claims occupancy rights, on the ground that he has cultivated for 12 years, and the zemindar meets him with a denial of these rights, on the score that the ryot has not held the whole, or any particular part of his holding, throughout that period, it is, we submit, the obvious duty of the zemindar to prove which particular parts of the holding have been held for less than 12 years. The zemindar, and he alone, has papers showing when the tenant's occupancy in each field began. Owing to the zemindar's failure to give pottahs, the ryot has, and can have, no such proof. It is therefore the duty of the zemindar to establish an allegation advanced on his behalf, and the subject-matter of which lies peculiarly within his knowledge. Without discussing farther the legal aspect of this presumption, it is, in our opinion, expedient and just that such a presumption should be specifically recognized. Strong arguments have, we believe, been advanced to show that not only is the presumption in question fully consistent with the letter and spirit of the Permanent Settlement, but that according to the terms of that Settlement, Government would be justified in declaring that all khudkasht resident ryots are entitled to occupancy rights in the land they cultivate, as long as they pay the rate current in the pergunnah or village. We refrain from discussing this subject. All we propose to do is to specifically impose the burden of proof on the party who alone can, and ought, to produce proof. We do not think it desirable to restrict the amalgamation of new with old holdings by any arbitrary interference between ryots and landlords. The evils arising from the amalgamation of holdings will, we think, be sufficiently met by the presumption which we have just discussed.

15. With regard to the disintegration of holdings, Sir Stuart Bayley has noticed the practice, on the part of some indigo planters, of violently wresting part of their lands from ryots, or of exchanging ryotee for zerat lands, and then entering both as zerat in the jummabundees. These things are, we believe, of rare occurrence now-a-days, and they are, moreover, provided for by the present law. We propose to define "zerat" as land continuously cultivated by the proprietor or co-sharer for 12 years with his own stock, or by his servants, or by hired labour at his expense. This definition (which is borrowed from the North-West Provinces' Rent Act) would clear up any doubt there may be as to the illegality of the practice noticed by Sir S. Bayley.

Ejectment of non-occupancy ryots.

16. The provisions of the present law as to the ejectment of non-occupancy ryots being somewhat vague, we propose to define them more clearly. Section 53, Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, provides that in a suit for the ejectment of a non-occupancy ryot, the court shall grant a decree in favour of the plaintiff forthwith, on the plaintiff depositing the necessary expenses; but nowhere in that Act do we find it specially stated whether a landlord may or may not of his own motion, eject a non-occupancy ryot without the institution of such suit. It is obviously consonant with existing law, and with the practice in all civilised countries, that every tenant should have timely notice of the landlord's intention to eject him. This is specially expedient and equitable in this [illegible] where the distinction between non-occupancy and occupancy ryots is confused, and difficult of proof. A landlord should not have arbitrary power to eject any tenant without affording him an opportunity of contesting his liability to eviction. In order the more clearly to define the law on this subject, we have borrowed from the Rent Act of the North-West Provinces certain sections, the enactment of which would, we believe, secure non-occupancy ryots against arbitrary and illegal eviction. (Pages 14 and 15 of minutes of proceedings.)

Compensation for Improvements.

17. It was proposed to confer on a ryot, on the termination of his tenancy, a right to compensation for such improvements suitable to his holding as he may have made during his occupation of the land, provided the letting value of the land has been and continues increased in consequence of such improvements. This principle has been recognized in the Rent Acts of Oudh and the North-West Provinces. It was argued that provisions which are deemed necessary for the protection of the tenantry of Oudh and the North-Western Provinces cannot be other than just and necessary for the protection of the ryots of Behar.

"A farther special justification of these provisions will be found in the fact that the ryots of some Behar zemindarees are not only prohibited from making tanks or other improvements for the purposes of irrigation without the zemindar's consent, but when that consent is obtained, the ryot has to execute a registered deed by which he agrees—

(1st) to pay the grount-rent of the tank;
(2nd) to have no claim to the fish or other profits arising therefrom;
(3rd) to keep the tank clear and neat at his own expense;
(4th) to pay a penalty of Rs. 200 for violation of any of the foregoing provisions.

Against allowing compensation for improvements, it was argued that there is no demand on the part of Behar ryots for compensation for improvements, and moreover, there are no special circumtances in Behar to justify this innovation in the existing law. A majority of our number are in favour of allowing compensation for improvements. Some of us are of opinion that no compensation should be allowed under any circumstances, while some think that compensation should, on ejectment or on termination of the tenancy, be allowed for the unexhausted value of all improvements suitable to the holding. For our recommendations on this point we would refer to page 16 of the minutes of our proceedings.

Head VI.—Transferability of Occupancy Rights and Presumptions in favour of ryots.

18. The presumption of law by which we propose to throw the onus of proving the non-existence of occupancy rights on the landlord, provided the ryot has been in continuous possession of any land in the village or estate, has been already discussed. Some difference of opinion exists as to the expediency of rendering occupancy rights transferable by sale.

Against the principle it was urged—

(1st) That occupancy rights are under the present law transferable where it is the local custom to transfer them. There is therefore no need of altering the law;
(2nd) That the effect of a measure rendering occupancy rights transferable would be to throw the ryots' lands into the hands of mahajuns or other moneyed men;
(3rd) That a measure rendering occupancy rights transferable, being subject to the Hindoo law of inheritance, would lead to much litigation.

In reply to these arguments it was urged, that as occupancy rights are already transferable by local custom throughout the greater part of Behar, it would be well to bring the law into harmony with the local practice.

With reference to Mr. Gibbon's objections to the sale and purchase of occupancy rights, it was said that in Shahabad and other parts of Behar, where occupancy rights are at present transferred by sale and purchase, the effect has not been to throw ryots' lands into the hands of mahajuns, or other moneyed men, nor have any difficulties arisen in connection with the Hindoo law of inheritance. The peculiar guzashta tenures of Shahabad are an instance where cultivators, although Hindoos, have developed a custom of sale and purchase as complete in its way as that of the petty talooks of Eastern Bengal.

After due consideration of these arguments, the opinion of a majority of the Committee is, however, against rendering occupancy rights transferable by sale and purchase. It is also the opinion of a majority of our number that occupancy ryots should have the power of sub-letting their holdings, and that non-occupancy ryots, holding under a lease, should have the power of sub-letting for the unexpired term of their leases, provided the zemindar is secured in the due payment of his rent.

HEAD VII.—SIMPLIFICATION AND AMENDMENT OF THE DISTRAINT LAW.

19. On this point Mr. Gibbon proposed that the right of distraint be abolished altogether. By compelling Behar proprietors to adhere to the restrictions which the law imposes on distraint, you would practically deprive them of the only power of distraint which they care to exercise, namely, that of a private distraint or restraint of crops. It is, Mr. Gibbon thinks, better to do away altogether with a right which, if exercised according to the intention of the law, would be of little or no value, and which, not being exercised in accordance with law, has in the past, and may in the future, lead to great abuses. In these views a majority of the members concur.

20. In case, however, the proposal to abolish distraint should not meet with the approval of Government, the amendments in the present law which we recommend are, that distraint be initiated in a court; that the zemindar shall make to the Collector or other court an application, which may be for distraint of the crops of any number of ryots residing in the same estate or village, showing the amount due from each ryot and the instalments in which the arrear is due; that the Collector shall thereupon make a summary order, a copy of which shall be given to the applicant for service. In addition to this, it was also proposed to make illegal distraint on the part of a person empowered to distrain liable to the same penalties as are provided by the present law [section 99, Act VIII of 1869] for illegal distraint on the part of a person not empowered to distrain. This proposal was, it will be observed, rejected by a majority of one. Those of us who are in favour of making illegal distraint specially punishable, yield only a qualified assent to the amendments in the distraint law above described. We think that the proposed alterations are not sufficient to suppress the illegal practices which now prevail. For our proposals in detail under this head we would refer to pages 10, 11, and 13 of the minutes of our proceedings.

HEAD VIII.—TO LIMIT THE RIGHT TO ENHANCE AND MAKE ILLEGAL ENHANCEMENT PUNISHABLE.

21. Our recommendations under this head are—

(a) That enhancements shall not be allowed, except—
  (a) by written agreement registered under the Registration Act; or (b) by order of a court under the Landlord and Tenant Act.

(b) That enhancement shall not be allowed, except at the suit of a person having a permanent interest in the land the rent of which it is sought to enhance.

(c) That any rate of rent decreed by a court on enhancement suit shall not be liable to revision for ten years.

(d) That any measurement of land accepted by both parties shall not be liable to revision for ten years.

(e) That a co-sharer shall not be entitled to enhance the rent of any ryot otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents of the whole estate.

(f) That at least six months' notice of enhancement shall be given before the beginning of the year from which the enhancement is to take effect.

(g) That notice of enhancement shall be served in the same way as a summons under the Civil Procedure Code, and that such notice, in addition to the grounds on which the enhancement is claimed, shall also specify the particulars alleged in support of those grounds, namely, the precise particulars of the computation on which the enhancement is claimed.

(h) We propose to define "adjacent places" in section 18, Act VIII of 1869, as meaning the same village, or a village immediately adjoining that in which the land is situated.

These restrictions will, we think, be sufficient to prevent illegal and arbitrary enhancements.

HEAD IX.—TO MAKE THE DEMAND OF ILLEGAL CESSES PUNISHABLE.

22. Under this head we have no suggestions to make. The exaction of illegal cesses is punishable under the present law. The accounts which we propose to have filed in the Collectors' offices will enable a ryot to certify himself of the amount of the zemindar's annual demand. If the ryot voluntarily pays cesses over and above that demand, we do not see how he can be prohibited by law from doing so. All that we desire to secure is, that the ryot shall really have a genuine choice in the matter.

HEAD X.—TO RECOGNIZE AND PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE SYSTEM OF PAYMENT IN KIND.

23. Under this head we recommend—

(a) That in case of dispute as to the amount or value of the crop, the Collector shall, on application from either party, depute a proper officer to make the division, estimate, or appraisement. This provision we have borrowed from the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Rent Acts.

(b) That the danabundi (appraisement) papers be filed in the Collector's office within fifteen days of the appraisement.

(c) That where a tenant, without due cause, allows bhaoli lands to lie fallow, he shall be liable to pay a cash rent for such lands in respect of the period during which the land was fallow, such cash rent not to exceed that paid for the same description of land in the neighbourhood.

(d) That where occupancy rights have been established, the occupancy ryot or the zemindar shall be entitled to commute bhaoli into cash tenures at the cash rates paid by other occupancy ryots in the neighbourhood, and if cash tenures do not exist in the neighbourhood, at a cash rate equivalent to the average value of the zemindar's share of the produce, calculated on the outturn of the preceding five years.

(e) That where the proportion of the produce to be taken by the zemindar is not specified on any written agreement, it shall be presumed that the zemindar is entitled to half and the ryot to half.

24. In the papers referred for our consideration, the evils of the bhaoli system in South Behar are described by Baboo Bhemola Churn Bhattacharjeea, Deputy Collector of Behar, as follows:—"The next engine of oppression in the hands of the zemindar is not to make the danabundi (appraisement of crops) at all, but to let the grain rot in the threshing floor or in the field. When the ryots decline to accept the zemindar's terms as to the share of the produce, the zemindar declines to make the appraisement. One year's loss of rent is nothing to him (the zemindar), but to the ryot the loss of one year's crop means starvation. The grain is allowed to rot in the fields, or is eaten up by birds, unless the ryots come round in time." "Another mode of oppression," writes the same gentleman, "is that after the danabundi or agorabattai (appraisement or apportionment of the crops) has been made, the zemindars do not allow the ryots to take away their grain."

25. It will be seen from the above description that the zemindars of South Behar practically take, by way of rent, as much of the crop as they choose to claim. The existing law makes no special provision for the realization of rents in kind. It therefore intended that rents in kind should be realized by regular suit or by distraint, in the same way as where rent is payable in cash. The practice, however, is for the zemindar to prohibit the cutting or removal of the crop till the tenant agrees to his appraisement or division of the produce, as the case may be. The evils attendant on the system described will, we think, be sufficiently met by the measures which we recommend, and which will be found in detail in page 12 of the minutes of our proceedings.

HEAD XI.—THE PROVISION OF A SUMMARY PROCEDURE FOR THE REALIZATION OF RENTS.

26. Under this head Mr. Browne brought forward proposals for a Summary Procedure Bill, to be extended to Behar in case the right of distraint is abolished. Mr. Browne's proposals are—

1*st*.—That landlords be allowed to sue summarily for arrears of rent of one year's standing or less; that such suits shall be entered in a register to be called the "Summary Register." Such summary suits shall be instituted on payment of a small fixed fee, the amount of which is to be determined by the local Government.

2*nd*.—That if in such summary suit the tenant denies altogether the relationship of landlord and tenant, the suit shall be dismissed, and the zemindar shall be left to sue in the ordinary way.

3*rd*.—If the relationship of landlord and tenant is admitted, the tenant shall be allowed to raise no other plea than that of payment. After deciding on that plea, the court shall pass orders for payment of amounts admitted, if any, and of amounts respecting which the plea of payment has been raised, but not proved to the satisfaction of the court. The plaintiff will be left to sue for the balance of his claim in the ordinary way, that is to say, by regular, as distinguished from summary, suit.

4*th*.—That when a decree is passed for an arrear of rent, whether due at the end of the year or not, and the plaintiff has included in his plaint a prayer for ejectment of the defendant, such defendant shall at the end of the year be liable to be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the amount of the decree, with interest and costs of the suit, be paid up within thirty days from the date of the decree.

To show the way in which this procedure would work in practice, we may take a concrete example:—

A, a ryot, is sued by B, his landlord, for one year's rent, alleged to be Rs. 25. A says that his rent is only Rs. 10, and alleges that he has paid that amount. The court would only go into the question of payment of Rs. 10, and B would have to sue for the balance of his claim in the regular way.

We think this procedure better than that suggested in the Bengal Summary Procedure Bill—

1*st*.—because under the Bengal Bill (section 10) a summary suit cannot be entertained without satisfactory proof that rent at the rate claimed has been paid in respect of the holding during the preceding year or years.

This section would, we fear, render the Summary Procedure Bill ineffectual in Behar. The rate would in every case be disputed, the whole case would have to be gone into, and the proceedings would be nearly as dilatory as they now are under the present law.

2*nd*.—We prefer Mr. Browne's proposals to the Bengal Summary Procedure Bill, because the latter leaves it to the discretion of the court to allow the tenant to appear and defend the case or not as the court deems fit.

We are not in favour of conferring any such discretion on the courts. We think the practical working of the Bengal Bill would be, that the courts, according to the bias which may be given them, would either allow the ryot to defend every suit, or that they would arbitrarily refuse permission to defend suits. In the former case the Bill would be inoperative, and in the latter much hardship might be caused to the ryots. For those reasons a majority of our number prefer Mr. Browne's proposals to the Bengal Bill. One of us (Mr. Gibbon), prefers the Bengal Bill, so far modified, that a ryot shall not be liable to ejectment except at the end of the year, while another (Mr. Anderson), prefers the Bengal Bill in its entirety.

HEAD XII.—THE EMPOWERING COLLECTORS TO EFFECT A SETTLEMENT IN DISPUTED CASES.

27. A majority of us think that no action under this head is generally required in Behar. In special cases the Settlement Bill may be found useful, but these cases can be separately dealt with as they arise. Two of our number (Babus Joy Prakash Lal and Harbans Sahai), think that the Hon'ble Krisdodas Pal's Bill will be of much benefit in Behar, while another thinks that the Bill, if modified in certain particulars, is much required, and that it would be of great benefit to zemindars and ryots alike.

HEAD XIII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

28. In addition to the measures summarized under the preceding heads, we also recommend the following amendments in the existing law:—

1*st.*—Where the instalments in which rent is payable have not been settled by a written agreement between the parties, that the Collector be empowered to fix and declare for each district or part of a district, the instalments in which rent shall be payable.

2*nd.*—That measurements of estates or tenures be not allowed oftener than once in ten years, and only on the part of a person or body of persons representing the entire proprietary interest. A co-sharer may dispute the accuracy of the measurement within six months of its completion.

3*rd.*—That plaints for arrears of rent should specify the boundaries and arrears of the fields and plots in respect of which the arrear of rent is claimed.

4*th.*—That where there is a dispute between rival rent claimants as to which of them is entitled to the whole or any quota of a ryot's rent, and the ryot is doubtful as to which of the rival claimants is entitled to the rent, he shall be entitled to deposit it in court; that such deposit shall have, as far as the ryot is concerned, the same force and effect as if he had paid the amount deposited to the person legally entitled to it. The existing provisions as to deposits in court contemplate disputes as to the amount, not the distribution, of the rent.

29. With a view to defraying the expenses of the extra establishment required for the hearing of summary suits, for the enforcement of legal distraint, for the suppression of illegal distraint, for the division and appraisement of crops in bhaoli tenures, and for carrying out our other recommendations, it was proposed—

(a)—To legalise the cess known locally as hisabana, and to have it paid into the Government treasury as a putwarees' and kanoongoes' fund, in the same way as is done in the North-West Provinces.

(b)—To charge court fees on applications for distraint, such fees to be assessed at double the ordinary ad valorem rate for a suit for the amount claimed. At present such applications escape without any ad valorem court fee. The word "DISTRAINT" might, it was suggested, be written across stamps borne by such applications; a separate account of the amount of such fees might be opened, and the proceeds might be appropriated to the payment of the necessary establishment.

(c)—It was also proposed that applications for service of enhancement notices (section 14, Act VIII of 1869), should bear court fees as in a civil suit, such fees to be assessed on the capitalised value of the proposed enhancement.

30. In support of these proposals, it was urged (1) that it is not fair to burden imperial funds with the special expenditure required in order to remedy particular abuses in a particular province; (2), that in principle it is the same thing whether the assistance of the court in recovering rent is sought by process of distraint or by regular suit. If the plaint in the latter case bears court fees, so should application for distraint in the former. The process of distraint being the more open to abuse, should, it was argued, be discouraged, and should therefore bear higher court fees. (3) Similar arguments were advanced in favour of assessing court fees on enhancement notices. A majority of our number think that it is not expedient to impose any new cesses. We are also of opinion that, inasmuch as the zemindar seeks to recover, whether by distraint or by enhancement notice, only his dues, no special court fees should be charged.

Mr. Browne thinks that the summary suits will pay for themselves, while Mr. Hodgkinson is of opinion that the stamp fees to be paid by landlords on filing their accounts, and by ryots for copies of these accounts, will meet the other expenses to be incurred.

In these views a majority of us concur.

31. We beg to say that our proposed amendments and alterations affect so many provisions of the present law that we do not deem it sufficient to draft a supplementary Bill. We think it in every way expedient that the whole rent-law should be recast, and that the intermixture of the subjects which occurs in the present law should be avoided.

To recast the whole law would be, we regret to find, a task which, for various reasons, is beyond our powers. We would therefore respectfully request that the drafting of a Bill be undertaken by a trained officer of the Legislative Department.

32. In conclusion, we would express a hope that the results of our deliberations may in some degree help towards the framing of a rent-law for Behar, which will prove beneficial alike to tenant and landlord, and which will thus promote the general prosperity of the province.

APPENDIX I.—Précis of Declarations of Government as to interchange of Leases and Counterparts.

1. "On the 14th May 1772 it was determined to conclude a settlement of these provinces Bengal, Behar, and Orissa) for a period of five years. It was at the same time resolved that, as the Company have determined to stand forth as Dewan, the servants employed in the management of collections shall be henceforward styled Collectors, instead of Supervisors." Rules were therefore passed for the guidance of the Collectors and Dewans, and the following provisions were made for the security of the ryots: "That the farmer or contractor with Government (i.e. the predecessors of the present zemindars) shall not receive larger rents from ryots than the stipulated amount of the pottahs on any pretence whatever; that no mathoots or assessments under the name of mangni, bouree gunda sood, or any other abwab or tax, shall be imposed upon the ryots; that those articles of abwab which are of late establishment shall be carefully scrutinised, and, at the discretion of the committee, abolished, if they are found to be oppressive and pernicious" (Harrington's Analysis, Volume II, pages 12 and 13.) On conviction for a violation of the foregoing provision, the [then] farmer (i.e. the now proprietor) "was to be compelled to repay to the ryot the sum EXTORTED, and to Government a penalty of equal amount, and for a repetition of the offence, or in a notorious case, the farmer's lease was to be annulled."

Declarations of ryots' title to pottahs before the Permanent Settlement.

2. In 1776, the five years' settlement being about to expire, the Governor-General (in a minute dated 1st November, printed in Colebroke's Digest, page 206) proposed that special officers should be deputed, among other things, "to secure the ryots in perpetual and undisturbed possession of their lands, and to guard them against arbitrary exactions"—an object which the Governor-General remarked could not be secured "by proclamations and edicts, nor by indulgences to zemindars and farmers." The Governor-General added that, "notwithstanding the solemn engagements of the zemindars and the peremptory injunctions of Government, not a pottah had yet been granted, nor will be granted unless further measures are taken." (Phillips' Tagore Law Lectures, 1876, page 251. Harrington's Analysis, page 35.)

Ryot's title to a pottah and zemindar's duty to give pottahs declared in discussions connected with the Permanent Settlement.

3. The farming settlements terminated in 1777. Annual settlements were made from 1778 to 1786. Much power seems to have been thrown into the hands of the zemindars by Government at this time. In 1787 Lord Cornwallis, in accordance with the directions of the Board of Directors, instituted inquiries of a comprehensive character, with a view "to settling a permanent revenue with each zemindar for a long term of years." In connection with these inquiries, we find that Mr. Shore, in his minute respecting the Permanent Settlement of lands in the Bengal Provinces, dated 18th June 1789 (printed in Appendix No. 1 to the fifth Report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed to enquire into the affairs of the East Indian Company, 1812), describes the condition of the ryots and their reluctance to accept pottahs in words which, with slight modifications, might not inaptly be applied to the state of things existing in Behar up to the present day.

"The abuses," remarked Sir John Shore, "that subsist are great, and more important to be known. Amongst these the following may be enumerated—

"First.—The arbitrary impositions of the zemindars, farmers, and others to which the ryots are subject, which are generally measured by their supposed ability to pay them. The pretences for these impositions are various; the death of a zemindar, the birth of a son, any increase by Government upon the zemindar, are some amongst the number. A stipulation is sometimes exacted, and without ceremony given, that these taxes shall terminate with the year, but they are seldom relinquished without the substitution of others to an equivalent amount.

"Second.—The want of formal engagements between the renters and the ryots. This is a very general complaint, as it renders it almost impossible to detect exactions.

"Third.—The inequality of the assessment, to the advantage of the superior, and to the great injury of the inferior, ryots, established by the influence or impositions of the former.

"Fourth.—The indefinite terms of the pottahs in some places, which neither specify the quantity nor the quality of the land, or rate of payment.

"Fifth.—The arbitrary custom of levying the deficiency occasioned by failures in some parts of a district upon the other ryots.

"Sixth.—The continual breach of engagements with the ryots on the part of the zemindars or landlords and renters.

"Seventh.—The want of regular discharges to the ryots for the rents which they pay.

"On the other hand, the ryots derive advantages even from abuses. The want of engagements, or of precision in the terms of them, affords them opportunities of imposing upon the landlords. Artifice is opposed to exaction, and often with success. They cultivate lands of which there is no account, and hold them in greater quantity than they engage for: hence they are enabled to pay rents and cesses which appear extortionate. They hold lands at reduced rates by collusion; obtain grants of land fit for immediate cultivation on the reduced terms of waste land, and, by management with a renter at the close of a lease, procure fictitious pottahs and accounts, to be made out with a view to defraud his successor.

"It has been found that the ryots of the district have shown an aversion to receive pottahs, which ought to secure them against exaction; and this disinclination has been accounted for in their apprehensions that the rates of their payments being reduced to a fixed amount, this would become a basis of future imposition. But admitting this to have its weight, the objection may be also traced to other sources. In the preceding explanations the Collector of Rajshahye informs us 'that he fears the ryots would hear of the introduction of new pottahs with an apprehension that no explanation could remove.'

"In almost every village, according to its extent, there is one or more head ryot, known by a variety of names in different parts of the country, who has in some measure the direction and superintendence of the rest. For distinction, I shall confine myself to the term mundul; he assists in fixing the rent, in directing the cultivation, and in making the collections.

"This class of men, so apparently useful, seem greatly to have contributed to the growth of the various abuses now existing, and to have secured their own advantages, both at the expense of the zemindar, landlord, renter, and inferior ryots.

"Their power and influence over the inferior ryots is great and extensive; they compromise with the farmer at their expense, and procure their own rents to be allowed, without any diminution in what he is to receive, by throwing the difference upon the lower ryots, from whom it is exacted by taxes of various denominations. They make a traffic in pottahs, lowering the rates of them for private stipulations, and connive at the separation and secretion of lands. If any attempt is made to check the abuses, they urge the ryots to complain, and sometimes to resist. In Beerbhoom a striking instance of this has been exhibited. When an attempt was made to equalise the assessment of the ryots, by removing the burthen from the lower class and resuming the illegal profits of the munduls [called in Behar jeth-ryots], an immediate opposition was made, and the complainants came to Calcutta. The Government was obliged to interfere with a military force to anticipate disturbances, and at present the ryots are apparently averse to an arrangement proposed for their benefit, and upon principles calculated to ensure it. On a former occasion, when a general measurement was attempted by the zemindar of the same district, as a basis of a general and equal assessment, the munduls, by a contribution, prevailed upon him to forego it. In Purneah this influence has equally been exerted to interrupt the power and duties of the Collector. In Rajshahye we are informed by the Collector that the head munduls are become the real masters of the land, and the first object of a zemindar should be to effect a gradual reduction of their power."

In the same minute Mr. Shore proceeds to state (page 207 of the fifth report) the several propositions which had been made at various times "for the introduction of regularity and the correction of existing abuses." "Mr. Francis," he says, "proposed that it should be made an indispensable condition with the zemindar that in the course of a stated time he shall grant new pottahs to his tenants, either on the same footing with his own quit-rents, that is, as long as the zemindar's quit-rent remains the same, or for a term of years, as they may agree. The former is the custom of the country. This will become a new assil jumma for each ryot, and ought to be as sacred as the zemindar's quit-rent. The pottah should be expressed in the simplest terms possible without a single abwab or muthote—so much per beegha of land which he cultivates, varying only according to the articles of produce or quality of the soil. (Paras. 233-244.)

"By some it has been proposed that the Collectors should grant pottahs to the ryots, and we have, I believe, on some occasions authorized this measure, but of late the applications on this subject have been postponed for general considerations." (Para. 411.)

Notwithstanding these injunctions, pottahs not given.

4. Notwithstanding the peremptory injunctions for interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats, only one Collector, namely, the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, was able to report, in 1789, "that a form of pottah had already been adopted for the lands in his Division; that pottahs were granted according to that form, and that a general register of them was kept"; and it is a significant circumstance that in 1832 we find it recorded "that in the villages of the 24-Pergunnahs which comprise what is denominated the Honorable Company's zemindari (and in these only) the rights of the ryots were fully recognised and maintained, and exist to this day." (Land Tenure, by a Civilian, 1832.)

Provision made in the decennial settlement for interchange of pottahs and kabooliyats.

5. We now come to the decennial settlement, which, in the words of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, "led to one of the most important measures ever adopted by the East India Company, in reference to themselves by fixing the amount of their land revenue in perpetuity, and to the landholders in the establishing and conveying to them rights hitherto unknown and unenjoyed in this country." On the conclusion of the decennial settlement a reference was made by the Governor-General to the Board of Directors, asking their approval to rendering the settlement just concluded permanent and fixed for ever. The Directors in their reply, dated 29th September 1792, expressed their assent; but added "that they considered the settlement of rents in perpetuity, not as a claim to which the landholders had any pretensions, founded on the principles or practice of the native Government, but as a grace which it would be good policy for the British Government to bestow upon them. In regard to the proprietary right to the land, the recent inquiries had not established the zemindar on the footing of the owner of a landed estate in Europe, who may let out portions, and employ and dismiss labourers at pleasure; but on the contrary, had exhibited, from him down to the actual cultivator, other inferior landholders styled talookdars and cultivators of different descriptions, whose claim to protection the Government readily recognised, but whose rights were not, under the principles of the present system, so easily reconcilable as to be at once susceptible of reduction to the rules about to be established in perpetuity.

These the Directors particularly recommend to the consideration of the Government, who, in establishing permanent rules, were to leave an opening for the introduction of any such in future as from time to time may be found necessary to prevent the ryots being improperly disturbed in their possessions or subjected to unwarrantable exactions. This, the Directors observed, would be clearly consistent with the true practice of the Mogul Government, under which it was a general maxim that the immediate cultivator of the soil, duly paying his rent, should not be dispossessed of the land he occupied; and this (they further observed) necessarily supposes that there were some limits by which the rent could be defined, and that it was not left to the arbitrary determination of the zemindar, for otherwise such a rule would be nugatory; and in point of fact, the original amount seems to have been anciently ascertained and fixed by an act of the Sovereign. Subsequent inquiries, particularly in the Deccan and more southern part of India, have confirmed these observations. The division of the crop or produce, taken in money or in kind, fixes and limits this demand; and as long as the ancient rules were scrupulously observed, the State and its subjects derived a mutual advantage from the increase of cultivation, while the rate of taxation remained fixed and invariable. Notwithstanding the foregoing reservations, the advantage actually to be conferred, in rendering the amount of revenue which the landholders had recently entered into voluntary engagements to pay, perpetual or fixed for ever, and thereby securing them from any further demand of rent or tribute, or of any arbitrary exaction whatsoever, was so new, so unexpected, and of such inestimable value to the landholders, as led the Directors to believe would induce them assiduously to employ themselves in improving their estates, and, on the other hand, would place the security of the public revenue on a solid basis founded on the growing prosperity of the country."

Specific declarations of the permanent settlement as to zemindar's obligation to give pottahs.

6. On the authority conveyed in the Directors' letter, Lord Cornwallis proceeded to notify, in 1793, the permanency of the decennial settlement. To prevent any possible misconception, the proclamation distinctly declares that, "it being the duty of the ruling power to protect all classes of the people, particularly the helpless, the Governor-General in Council reserves the right to make such regulations as may be necessary from time to time for the protection and welfare of the dependent talookdars, ryots, and other cultivators of the soil." Under the rules of the decennial settlement it was provided—

(a) that zemindars should prepare a suitable form of pottah and submit it to the Collector, who, after approval, was to notify to the ryots that such pottah might be obtained, and no other form of pottah was to be allowed; (Article 61.)

(b) rents were to be specifically stated in the pottah by whatever rule or custom they were regulated; (Article 60.)

(c) landholders were required to prepare and tender pottahs for the adjusted rent, and were to be fined for refusal; (Article 62.)

(d) landholders were allowed to the end of 1198 to prepare and deliver pottahs. After that period no engagements for rent contrary to those ordered were to be valid, and claims made by landholders on engagements on which the assul rent and abwabs had not been consolidated were to be nonsuited with costs. (Amended regulation for decennial settlement, Article 65.)

7. These provisions, forming as they do part of the permanent settlement, were, with modifications and amendments, re-enacted by Regulation VIII of 1793, which, in section 59, again reiterates the declaration that "actual proprietors, dependent talookdars, and farmers were required to cause a pottah for the adjusted rent to be prepared end tendered to the ryot, either granting the same themselves, or entrusting their agents to grant the same."

Regulation V of 1812, section 3, repealed the provision for rendering all pottahs not in the prescribed forms invalid, and declared zemindars entitled to grant pottahs in such form "as the contracting parties might deem most convenient and most conducive to their interests."

Act X of 1859 and Act VIII of 1869 (section 2) declare that every ryot is entitled to receive a pottah from the person to whom the rent of the land cultivated by him is payable. The tender of a pottah entitles the landholder to receipt of a kabooliyat in conformity with the terms of the pottah.

It thus appears that, while under the old regulations, landholders were bound to render pottahs in prescribed forms, failing in which they were liable to be nonsuited with costs, more recent laws and regulations leave it optional with them to tender specific forms of pottahs or not, as they think fit, and merely declare that the ryots are entitled to pottahs. These the ryots can now obtain by regular suit, but only with an amount of delay and expense which has practically rendered the privilege a nullity.

APPENDIX II.—Note on Limitation of Enhancement of Rents.

At the instance of the Commissioner of Patna, the following note has been drawn up with a view to showing that the limitations on the right to enhance, proposed by the Committee, are not inconsistent either with the rights conferred on proprietors by the permanent settlement, or with the ancient customs of this country.

Hindoo law (1).—According to the ancient Hindoo law, "cultivated land was the property of him who cut away the wood or who cleared and tilled it."—Munnoo Smrita, Chapter IX, Shlok 44, Land Tenure, by a Civilian, page (1).

"The right so acquired might be sold, bequeathed, or otherwise alienated at the discretion of the individual who cultivated it."—(Idem.)

"Land under cultivation was liable to a tax to the State of a certain proportion of its produce, the amount of which was an eigth, sixth, or twelfth part of the produce, according to the capabilities of the soil and expense of cultivation. The demands of Government were limited to this amount except on occasions of great public emergency."—(Idem, page 2.)

Extracts from the Institutes of Munnoo, (quoted by the author, pages 1 to 20) go to show that the proprietary right in the soil was vested neither in the Sovereign nor his tax-gatherers, but in the ryot or cultivator; that the State claimed and received a portion of the crop raised in consideration of the protection afforded to the cultivator under a regular Government. To the same effect was the Mohamedan law, as is shown by the extracts from Mohamedan law books of great celebrity quoted by the author of "Land Tenure by a Civilian," pages 33 to 39 (also "Baillie's Land Tax," introductory essay).

It is unnecessary to enter into the discussions which arose in connection with the decennial settlement as to who was the real proprietor of the soil, whether the actual cultivator, the zemindar who collected the Government tax, or the Sovereign. It is sufficient to note that a Select Committee of the House of Commons, on consideration of the best evidence that could be advanced on the subject, recorded, in 1812, its opinion on the position of zemindars before and after the permanent settlement in the following words :—

" In the extensive plains of India a proportion, estimated in the Company's provinces at one-third by Lord Cornwallis, at one-half by others, and by some at two-thirds of land capable of cultivation, lies waste, and probably was never otherwise. It became, therefore, of importance to the native Governments, whose principal financial resource was the land revenue, to provide that as the population and cultivation should increase, the State might derive its proportion of advantage resulting from this progressive augmentation. Whatever might be the motive of its introduction, the rule of fixing the Government share of the crop had this tendency. This rule is traceable as a general principle through every part of the Empire which has yet come under the British dominion, and undoubtedly had its origin in times anterior to the entry of the Mohamedans into India. By this rule the produce of the land, whether taken in kind or estimated in money, was understood to be shared in distinct proportions between the cultivator and the Government. The shares varied when the land was recently cleared and required extraordinary labour; but when it was fully settled and productive, the cultivator had about two-fifths, and the Government the remainder. The Government share was again divided with the zemindar and the village officers, in such proportion that the zemindar retained no more than about one-tenth of this share, or little more than three-fiftieth parts of the whole; but in instances of meritorious conduct, the deficiency was made up to him by special grants of land, denominated nauncaur (or subsistence). The small portions which remained were divided between the mokuddim, or head cultivator of the village, who was either supposed instrumental in originally settling the village, or derived his right by inheritance or by purchase from that transaction, and had still the charge of promoting and directing its cultivation; the pausbaun or gorayat, whose duty it was to guard the crop, and the putwaree or village accountant, perhaps the only inhabitant who could write, and on whom the cultivators relied for an adjustment of their demands and payments to be made on account of their rents."

Further on in the same report, the Select Committee proceed to describe the changes in the native system which were introduced by the permanent settlement. Extracts from this description have been already quoted. Who ever was the real proprietor before the permanent settlement, that settlement did, at all events, distinctly declare that zemindars were to be considered as the real proprietors for the future. But the declaration was equally distinct that " a property in the soil was not to be understood as conveying the same rights as in England; the difference being as great as between a free constitution and an arbitrary power (vide Sir John Shore's minute printed in 5th report).

Sir John Shore, in his minute dated 8th December 1789 (Appendix 5 to 5th Report, page 478), remarked that, " though the interference on the part of Government between tenants and zemindars was absolutely necessary, yet this interference was an invasion of proprietary rights and an assumption on the part of Government of the character of landlord which belonged to the zemindar." In answer to Mr. Shore, Lord Cornwallis, in a minute dated 10th February 1790 (printed 5th Report, Volume I, page 486), wrote as follows :—

" I agree with Mr. Shore that some interference on the part of Government is undoubtedly necessary for effecting an adjustment of the demands of the zemindars upon the ryots, nor do I conceive that the former will take alarm at the reservation of this right of interference when convinced that Government can have no interest in exercising it, but for the purposes of public justice. Were the Government itself to be a party in the cause, they might have some grounds for apprehending the result of its decisions.

" Mr. Shore observes that this interference is inconsistent with proprietary right, that it is an encroachment upon it to prohibit a landlord from imposing taxes upon his tenant, for it is saying to him that he shall not raise the rents of his estates; and that if the land is the zemindars, it will only be partially his property, whilst we prescribe the quantum which he is to collect, or the mode by which the adjustment is to take place between the parties concerned.

"If Mr. Shore means that after having declared the zemindar proprietor of the soil, in order to be consistent, we have no right to prevent his imposing new abwabs or taxes on the lands in cultivation, I must differ with him in opinion. Unless we suppose the ryots to be absolute slaves of the zemindars, every beegha of land possessed by them must have been cultivated under an express or implied agreement that a certain sum should be paid for each beegha of produce, and no more. Every abwab or tax imposed by the zemindar over and above that sum is not only a breach of that agreement, but a direct violation of the established laws of the country. The cultivator therefore has in such case an undoubted right to apply to Government for the protection of his property, and Government is at all times bound to afford him redress. I do not hesitate, therefore, to give it as my opinion that the zemindars neither now nor ever could possess a right to impose taxes or abwabs upon the ryots; and if, from the confusions which prevailed towards the close of the Mogul Government, or neglect, or want of information, since we have had the possession of the country, new abwabs have been imposed by the zemindars or farmers, that Government has an undoubted right to abolish such as are oppressive and have never been confirmed by a competent authority, and to establish such regulations as may prevent the practice of like abuses in future.

"Neither is the privilege which the ryots in many parts of Bengal enjoy of holding possession of the spots of land which they cultivate, so long as they pay the revenue assessed upon them, by any means incompatible with the proprietary rights of the zemindars. Whoever cultivates the land, the zemindars can receive no more than the established rent, which in most places is fully equal to what the cultivators can afford to pay. To permit him to dispossess one cultivator for the sole purpose of giving the land to another, would be vesting him with a power to commit a wanton act of oppression, from which he could derive no benefit. The practice that prevailed under the Mogul Government of uniting many districts into one zemindari, and thereby subjecting a large body of people to the control of one principal zemindar, rendered some restriction of this nature absolutely necessary. The zemindar, however, may sell the land, and the cultivators must pay the rent to the purchaser.

"The rents of an estate can only be raised by inducing the ryots to cultivate the more valuable articles of produce, and to clear the extensive tracts of waste land which are to be found in almost every zemindari in Bengal."

The* Select Committee, who framed Act X of 1859, in their report, presented to the Legislative Council of India, dated 26th March 1859, made the following remarks regarding occupancy rights and the limitation of enhancement of rents:—

"Section V.—The original Bill, following the phraseology of the existing law, declared ryots not holding at fixed rates entitled to pottahs at pergunnah rates." This expression has been objected to on the ground that there are really no known pergunnah rates. The recognition of a right of occupancy implies necessarily some limit to the discretion of the landholder in adjusting the rent of persons possessing such a right. There was a discussion on this subject between the North-Western Provinces, the Sudder Court, and the Board of Revenue in 1850, and it was then apparently admitted that it was the acknowledged right of the ryot to hold at† customary and fair rates." We have adopted similar phrases.

† Mamooli and wajibee.

"Section VI.—The laws in force speak of "khoodkasht ryots" as possessing rights of occupancy, and in some places the word "khoodkasht" seems to be considered as synonymous with "resident."

"Resident was therefore the word used in the original Bill. But it has been pointed out by the Western Board that residency is not always a condition of occupancy, and it appears that, after much inquiry, it was prescribed by an order of the North-Western Provinces in 1856, as most consistent with the general practice and recognized rights, that a holding of the same land for 12 years should be considered to give a right of occupancy.

* NOTE.—The Select Committee consisted of the following gentlemen:—Sir B. Peacock, H. B. Harrington, H. Ricketts, E. Currie.

Minutes of the Proceedings of the Behar Rent Committee.

THE first meeting of the Committee was held at Sonepore on the 9th of November 1878.

PRESENT:

1. F. M. Halliday, Esq., Commissioner of Patna, President.
2. J. F. Browne, Esq., Judge of Patna.
3. C. F. Worsley, Esq., Collector of Mozufferpore.
4. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, Esq., Collector of Sarun.
5. G. Toynbee, Esq., Collector of Patna.
6. W. B. Hudson, Esq., Indigo-Planter, Chumparun.
7. D. Reid, Esq., Indigo-Planter, Sarun.
8. Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea, Deputy Collector.
9. „ Bhoop Sen Singh, Government Pleader, Gya.
10. „ Joy Prakash Lall, Manager of Doomraon Raj.
11. „ Hurbuns Sahai, Pleader, Arrah.
12. M. Finucane, Esq., C.S., Secretary.

The President, in opening the proceedings, said that two draft Bills had been drawn up for the consideration of the Committee—one by Mr. Worsley the Collector of Mozufferpore; the other by Mr. Finucane, the Secretary of the Committee. Mr. Worsley's draft Bill, which had been circulated among the members of the Committee, was, they would observe, new both in form and substance. Mr. Worsley had, as pointed out in the memorandum attached to his draft Bill, brought together the most approved suggestions which had been made for the amendment of the rent law in Behar, and in pursuing this object he had discarded the awkward intermixture of subjects displayed in the Bengal Acts, and adopted the more scientific and lucid arrangement of the North-Western Provinces Acts. Mr. Finucane's draft was based on the existing law, certain sections being amended or supplementary sections embodying the various suggestions made being added.

The President invited the attention of the Committee to an extract from the Government letter to Mr. Moloney, in which it is stated that the less radical the interference with the existing law, the more chance there is of the proposals of the Committee being accepted. The question was then put to the vote whether Mr. Worsley's or Mr. Finucane's draft should be taken as the basis of discussion. For making Mr. Worsley's Bill the basis of discussion the following gentlemen voted:—

Messrs. Hodgkinson, Worsley, Hudson, Reid, Babus Hurbuns Sahai and Joy Prakash Lall.

For making Mr. Finucane's draft the basis of discussion—

The President, Messrs. Browne, Toynbee, Finucane, and Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.

The Committee then proceeded to discuss Mr. Worsley's Bill section by section.

Section 1—Was amended by the insertion of the words "or in any district thereof" after "province of Behar." The section thus amended (quoted below) was agreed to—

(1)—This Act may be called the Behar Rent Act, 1879, and shall take effect in the province of Behar or in any district thereof from the date which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall fix by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Section 2—Was amended by the insertion of the words "or in any district thereof to which this Act shall be extended" after the words "province of Behar." The amended section (quoted below) was agreed to—

(2)—When, and so soon as this Act shall commence and take effect, the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, shall cease to have operation or effect in the province of Behar, or in any district thereof to which this Act shall be extended, save so far as it repeals or modifies any other Regulations or Acts, and save so far as regards suits or proceedings which, before the time of commencement of this Act, shall have been instituted before any court.

Section 3, Clause 1—Was allowed to stand over for future discussion.

Clause 2—Quoted below, was agreed to—

Rent means whatever is to be paid, delivered, or rendered by a tenant on account of his holding, use, or occupation of land.

Clause 3—Was amended by the insertion of the word "entire" before "estate." The amended clause, as quoted below, was agreed to—

(3)—Proprietor means a person or body of persons being in possession of an entire estate or revenue-free property as owner or owners thereof, and includes a sharer or body of sharers being in possession of separate lands held in severalty, or of certain specific mouzahs or lands forming part of an estate or revenue-free property under such circumstances as are described in sections 12 and 9(b) of the Estates Partition Act, 1876, and section 11 of Act XI of 1859.

Clauses 4 and 5—Quoted below, were agreed to—

(4)—Co-sharer means any person being in possession of an undivided share in an estate or revenue-free property as owner thereof.

(5)—Landholder means the person to whom a tenant is liable to pay rent.

Clause 6—Quoted below, was reserved for future discussion—

Resident ryot means a cultivator whose homestead is situated in the same estate or village in which he holds lands, AND whose father or other relative from whom he has inherited resided and held land in the said same estate or village, provided that the aggregate period for which such ryot and his father or such ryot and his other relative aforesaid may have so resided and held land shall have been not less than 12 years.

Clause 7—Quoted below, was agreed to—

Non-resident ryot means a cultivator who holds land in an estate or village other than that in which his homestead is situated.

Clause 8—Was amended by the substitution of the words "agricultural year of the district" for "Fusli year." The amended clause, as quoted below, was agreed to—

Month means a month of the agricultural year of the district.

Clause 9—Was amended by the substitution of the words "agricultural year of the district" for "Fusli year." The amended clause, quoted below, was agreed to—

Year means the agricultural year of the district.

Clause 10—Quoted below, was agreed to—

The Court means a Civil Court having jurisdiction in any suit or matter.

Section 4—Referred to below, was agreed to—

Definition of Collector taken verbatim from section 1, Act VII (B.C.) of 1869.

CHAPTER II.—Rights and Liabilities of Landlords and Tenants.

Section 5—Referred to below, was agreed to—

Taken verbatim from section 16 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, i.e., dependent talookdar, &c., holding land at fixed rates since Permanent Settlement not liable to enhancement of rent.

Section 6—Referred to below, was agreed to—

Taken verbatim from section 17, Act VIII of 1869. Rent of talookdars not changed for 20 years to be primâ facie evidence of occupancy at that rent since Permanent Settlement.

Section 7—Quoted below, was agreed to—Ryots who hold at fixed rates of rent, which shall not have been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, shall continue to hold at such rates; their tenures are heritable and transferable. Such ryots shall be called ryots at fixed rates.

Section 8—It was agreed that the second part, beginning with "the presumption," should be omitted (section as amended, referred to below, agreed to). The words which the Committee agreed to strike out are quoted below:—

Section amended taken verbatim from section 4 of Act VIII of 1869. The words which it was agreed to omit are—

"The presumption which in this section and section 6 arises from payment of rent at one uniform rate for 20 years is not rebutted by a tenant's omission to plead specially that he has held at the same rate from the time of the Permanent Settlement, nor by the production of a pottah dated subsequently to the permanent settlement, unless the tenant expressly admits that the tenancy or rate commenced from the date of such pottah."

Section 9.—The section amended, as quoted below, was agreed to—

Every ryot who shall have cultivated or held land for a period of 12 years shall have a right of occupancy in the land so cultivated and held by him, whether he holds under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same; but this rule does not apply to kamat, seer, or zerat land belonging to the proprietor of the estate or tenure and let by him on lease for a term or year by year, nor (as respects the actual cultivator) to land sublet for a term or year by year by a ryot having a right of occupancy, nor to lands held by a tenant in lieu of wages.

Every resident ryot shall be presumed to have a right of occupancy in all lands which he holds in that estate or village with reference to which he is a resident ryot. The holding of the father or other person from whom a ryot inherits shall be deemed to be the holding of the ryot within the meaning of this section.

Explanation II—Was amended by the addition of the following words: "provided that the transferrer holds at the time of transfer a registered pottah for the whole tenure so transferred." The explanation as amended would stand thus:—"A right of occupancy is heritable: it is also transferable with all liabilities, provided that no decree is outstanding against the tenant for rent due; provided, also, that the transferor had at the time of transfer a registered pottah for the whole tenure so transferred." (See page 8, Head VI, post.)

Explanation III—Was agreed to, as quoted below—

The presumption created by this section in favour of a resident ryot may be rebutted in respect of any portion of his tenure by proof that such portion has been held for less than 12 years.

Explanation IV.—It was agreed that clause (a) be omitted. That clause (b) remain as in draft.

That (c) be amended as follows:—

(c).—Land recognised by village custom as the special holding of a co-sharer, or land recognised by village custom as the special holding of a co-sharer and treated as such in the distribution of profits or charges among the co-sharers. The explanation as amended, and quoted below, was agreed to—

For the purposes of this section, seer or zerat or khamat or nij jote means—

(b).—Land continuously cultivated for 12 years by the proprietor or co-sharer himself with his own stock, or by his servants, or by hired labour at his expense.

(c).—Land recognised by village custom as the special holding of a co-sharer, or lands so recognised by village custom and treated as such in the distribution of profits and charges among the co-sharers.

Section 10.—Agreed to, as quoted below—

Ryots having rights of occupancy shall be called occupancy ryots, and all ryots of inferior legal status shall be called common ryots.

Section 11.—As quoted below, was agreed to by a majority of the meeting—

On the application of any ryot to have his class of tenure determined, the court shall determine the class to which he belongs, namely, whether he is a ryot at fixed rates or an occupancy ryot, resident or non-resident, or whether he is a common ryot.

Section 12.—Quoted below, was agreed to—

The rent paid by an occupancy ryot shall not be liable to enhancement, except (a) by written agreement registered under the Indian Registration Act of 1877, or (b) by order under this Act.

Section 13.—Was agreed to after substituting for the words "in places adjacent" the words "in the same village or villages immediately adjoining that in which the land is situated," and omitting all that follows after the words "provided, however." The section as amended is quoted below—

No occupancy ryot shall be liable to enhancement of rent previously paid by him except on some one of tht following grounds, namely, that the rate of rent paid by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same village or in any village having any part of its boundary common with the boundary of the village in which the land is situated. That the value of the produce or the productive powers of the land have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot. That the quantity of land held by the ryot has been proved by measurement to be greater than the quantity for which rent has been previously paid by him.

The words which it was agreed to omit, beginning "provided, however," are also quoted below—

"Provided however,"—

(1)—That when the rent is paid in money, the court shall in no case fix a rate in excess of one-sixth part of the value of the estimated average produce of the land;

(2)—That the value of the produce shall be deemed to be the average price realizable for each kind of produce at the date of the instalment next following the time at which such produce is ordinarily reaped.

The President here invited suggestions for an easy and practicable way of enhancing rents. None were offered.

Section 14.—First part was agreed to. Second part was amended by the omission of the word "transferable" before interest, by the substitution of the words "to sue for enhancement of rent" of any ryot for "shall be entitled to enhancement of rent of any ryot," and by the omission of all that follows those words. The section thus amended and quoted below, was agreed to:—

No co-sharer shall be entitled to enhance the rent of any ryot otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents of the whole estate or revenue property on behalf of all the co-sharers in the same.

No landholder, not being a proprietor nor possessing a permanent interest in land, shall be entitled to sue for enhancement of rent of any ryot.

Section 15.—It was agreed that section 18(a) of Mr. Finucane's draft Bill (quoted below) be substituted for this section—

Any rate of rent decreed after enhancement suit, and any measurement of land accepted by both parties, shall be binding on such parties for not less than 10 years, and shall not be liable to revision during that period.

Section 16.—Referred to below, was agreed to—

This section corresponds generally with section 19 of Act VIII of 1869.

Section 17.—It was agreed to substitute section 14 (amended) of Mr. Finucane's draft Bill for this section. This section thus amended is quoted below—

No undertenant or ryot who holds or cultivates land without a written engagement, or under a written engagement not specifying the period of such engagement, or whose engagement has expired or has become cancelled in consequence of the sale for arrears of rent or revenue of the tenure or estate in which the land held or cultivated by him is situated, and has not been renewed, shall be liable to pay any higher rent for such land than the rent payable for the previous year, unless a written notice shall be served on such undertenant or ryot specifying the rent to which he will be subject for the next ensuing year, the ground or grounds on which an enhancement of rent is claimed, and the particulars alleged in support of the same. The notice required under this section must be served at least six months before the date from which the enhancement is to take effect.

Such notice shall be served by the civil court, in the same way as a summons under the Civil Procedure Code. The provisions of sections 72 to 92 of the Civil Procedure Code shall govern service of notice under this section.

Section 18.—It was agreed to omit this section.

This section, taken from section 20 of North-Western Provinces Act, was to the following effect:—

In determining the rate of rent payable by a ryot, his caste shall not be taken into consideration, unless it is proved that by the local custom caste is taken into account in determining such rate. And that, whenever it is found by local custom or practice that any class of person, by reason of their having formerly been proprietors of the soil or of their being resident ryots or otherwise, hold land at favourable rates of rent, the rate shall be determined in accordance with such custom or practice.

Sections 19 and 20.—It was agreed to substitute section 14 (amended) of Mr. Finucane's draft Bill already quoted for these sections.

Section 21.—Taken verbatim from section 15 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, omitting the explanation of Mr. Worsley's draft, was agreed to.

The second meeting of the Committee was held on Monday, the 11th November 1878.

PRESENT:

F. M. Halliday, Esq., President.
J. F. Browne, Esq.
C. F. Worsley, Esq.
T. M. Gibbon, Esq.
G. Anderson, Esq.
W. B. Hudson, Esq.
D. Reid, Esq.

„ Hurbuns Sahai.
„ Bhoop Sen Singh.
G. Toynbee, Esq.
G. Hodgkinson, Esq.
M. Finucane, Esq., C.S., Secretary.

Mr. Browne said that he thought, with the limited time at the disposal of the Committee, it would not be possible for them to continue the discussion, section by section, on Mr. Worsley's draft Bill. It would, he suggested, be better to take up seriatim the points indicated in paragraph 6 of the Government letter No. 2222, dated 7th September, as those at which it is proposed to improve the present law. Any member might offer such suggestions as he had to make under the various heads, and the Secretary of the Legislative Department, or the Secretary in communication with the Legislative Department, might afterwards draft a Bill embodying the suggestions which commended themselves to the Committee. Mr. Worsley having said that he had no objection to Mr. Browne's proposal, the Committee proceeded to discuss seriatim the points indicated in the Government letter. It was, however, understood that any question as to which the Committee had come to a conclusion at their first meeting should not be open to re-discussion, except with the special consent of the President, and, also, that the conclusions arrived at in the first meeting should be allowed to stand, unless specially modified by the subsequent resolutions of the Committee.

HEAD I.—IMPROVEMENT OF THE SYSTEM OF ZEMINDARI ACCOUNTS IN CONNECTION WITH THE OBLIGATIONS IMPOSED ON PUTWAREES.

Under this head it was put to the Committee—

(a) Whether zemindars should be bound by law to file accounts annually in the Collector's office or in such other public office as the local Government may direct.

It was unanimously agreed that they should be so bound.

(b) It was next put to the Committee whether the accounts to be filed may be in any form as long as they embody a certain amount of information, or whether they should be confined to prescribed forms.

It was carried by a majority of ten to four that the accounts to be filed may be in any form provided they contain not less than the following particulars:—

(1) The serial number of each ryot.

(2) The name of each ryot.

(3) The area of land held by each ryot, and of the portions thereof of which rent is payable in kind and cash respectively.

(4) The details of each separate annual demand on each individual ryot, and the total thereof.

For—	Against—
President.	Mr. Browne.
Mr. Gibbon.	„ Worsley.
„ Anderson.	„ Hudson.
„ Reid.	Babu Bhoop Sen Singh.
„ Hodgkinson.
„ Toynbee.
„ Finucane.
Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.
„ Joy Prakash Lall.
„ Hurbuns Sahai.

(c) Mr. Browne proposed that a suit for rent shall not be entertained unless the plaintiff file with the plaint a deposit receipt (for the accounts which zemindars shall be bound to file in the Collector's or other office) showing that such accounts have been duly filed.

Mr. Gibbon proposed as an amendment that no suit for rent shall be entertained under the Landlord and Tenant Act unless the plaintiff file the deposit receipt for accounts required to be filed in the Collector's or other office, or unless he otherwise prove to the satisfaction of the court that he has so filed such accounts.

Mr. Gibbon's amendment was agreed to.

(d) Under the head of improvement in zemindari accounts it was proposed by Mr. Finucane that loose sheets of paper not being written in bound volumes shall not be admissible in evidence as books kept in the regular course of business in any suit under the Landlord and Tenant Act. Mr. Gibbon proposed as an amendment that copies of papers filed under the Landlord and Tenant Act in the Collector's office be admissible in evidence, whether written in bound volumes or not.

Mr. Gibbon's amendment was accepted as a rider to the original resolution.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed that the proposal to exclude loose sheets of paper from evidence be rejected, and that there be substituted for it the following :—

"No accounts of the nature of those which zemindars shall be bound to file in the Collector's or other office shall be received in evidence unless they have been so filed."

Mr. Hodgkinson's amendment was then put to the vote and lost by a majority of 11 to 3.

For the amendment—	Against—
Mr. Hodgkinson.	Mr. F. M. Halliday.
Babu Hurbuns Sahai.	„ J. F. Browne.
„ Joy Prakash Lall.	„ C. F. Worsley.
	„ T. M. Gibbon.
	„ G. Anderson.
	„ B. Hudson.
	„ D. Reid.
	Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.
	„ Bhoop Sen Singh.
	Mr. G. Toynbee.
	„ M. Finucane.

The original resolution, with Mr. Gibbon's rider, was then declared carried by the same majority.

Head II.—The Encouragement or rendering Compulsory of Pottahs and Kabuliyats.

Under this head it was put to the Committee—

(a) Whether the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats should be rendered compulsory by law. It was carried by a majority of 12 to 2 that the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats should not be rendered compulsory by law.

For rendering pottahs compulsory by law—	Against—
Mr. Reid.	Mr. Toynbee.
Babu Bhoop Sen Singh.	„ Browne.
	„ Hudson.
	„ Anderson.
	„ Gibbon.
	„ Worsley.
	„ Hodgkinson.
	„ Finucane.
	The President.
	Babu Hurbuns Sahai.
	„ Joy Prakash Lall.
	„ Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.

(b) Mr. Finucane proposed that the interchange of "chittahs," "khatians," or abstracts of holdings and counterpart "chittahs," "khatians" or abstracts of holdings, containing merely the areas of holdings, amounts of rents actually paid, and instalments thereof, and involving the determination of no question of right or status, should be made compulsory by law. It was carried by a majority of 12 to 2 that the interchange of "chittahs," "khatians," or memoranda of tenures, should not be made compulsory.

For rendering interchange of "chittahs" compulsory—	Against—
M. Finucane, Esq.	F. M. Halliday, Esq.
Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.	J. F. Browne, Esq
	C. F Worsley, Esq.
	T. M. Gibbon, Esq.
	G. Anderson, Esq.
	B. Hudson, Esq.
	D. Reid, Esq.
	Babu Joy Prakash Lall.
	„ Hurbuns Sahai.
	„ Bhoop Sen Sing.
	G. Toynbee, Esq.
	G. Hodgkinson, Esq.

(c) Mr. Browne proposed that whenever a court decrees rights of occupancy, it shall compel the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats between the parties, specifying the boundaries of the fields in which such rights are decreed.

Unanimously agreed to.

Head III.—To Insist on the Use of Counterfoil Receipts.

The question was put to the Committee—

(a) Whether the use of counterfoil receipts should be insisted on. A majority (12 to 2) agreed that the use of counterfoil receipts should be insisted on.

HEAD IV.—CHEAPENING OF REGISTRATION.

It was unanimously agreed that registration expenses should be lessened. The President suggested that this might be done by allowing parties themselves to file copies of the documents to be registered, instead of having them copied in the Sub-Registrar's office. The suggestion was unanimously approved of.

The President next asked for an expression of opinion as to whether it was possible, with a view to cheapening registration, to adopt printed forms of pottahs and kabuliyats for each district, as suggested in the papers referred for the consideration of the Committee. It was unanimously agreed that such forms could not be adopted.

It was suggested by Mr. Browne that it would be advisable to allow Sub-Registrars to go into the mofussil to register documents without the issue of a commission, as required by the present registration law. The suggestion was approved of by the Committee.

HEAD V.—THE DISCOURAGEMENT OF THE AMALGAMATION OF OLD AND NEW HOLDINGS.

The Committee was unanimously of opinion that it is not desirable to interfere with the amalgamation of holdings. In connection with this subject, it was proposed by Mr. Finucane to add (a) a declaratory section in the present law to the effect that rent claimants are bound to ensure cultivators in peaceable possession of the whole of their holdings, undisturbed by force or show of force on the part of the rent claimant himself (or on the part of a paramount rent claimant, or on the part of any person claiming through them) throughout the period in respect of which rent is claimed;

(b) that failing, without sufficient cause, to ensure the cultivator in peaceable possession, the rent claimant should forfeit the rent of the entire holding if the cultivator's possession was disturbed in any part thereof by force or show of force on the part of the rent claimant himself, or on the part of any person claiming through or under him.

The Committee was of opinion that this was unnecessary.

HEAD VI.—TRANSFERABILITY OF OCCUPANCY RIGHT.

(*1) A majority of the Committee was of opinion that it is not desirable to alter the existing law on this subject.

The third meeting of the Committee was held on Tuesday, 12th November, at Sonepore.

PRESENT:

1. F. M. Halliday, Esq., President.
2. J. F. Browne, Esq.
3. C. F. Worsley, Esq.
4. T. M. Gibbon, Esq.
5. G. Anderson, Esq.
6. B. Hudson, Esq.
7. D. Reid, Esq.
8. Babu Joy Prakash Lall.
9. „ Hurbuns Sahai.
10. „ Bhoop Sen Singh.
11. „ Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjees.
12. G. Toynbee, Esq.
13. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, Esq.
14. M. Finucane, Esq., Secretary.

Before continuing the discussion on Head VI, Mr. Worsley proposed that section 27 of his draft Bill (quoted below) regarding the right of common ryots to receive pottahs for five years be adopted:—

(27)—Common ryots are entitled to receive leases for any term not exceeding five years at the rates hiterto paid by them, provided that no such ryot shall be entitled to receive second and successive leases at the rate hitherto paid by him until twelve months after the expiration of his last lease. If within such period the landlord shall not have ejected such ryot, or have obtained an order under this Act for the enhancement of his rent, or if the parties shall not have entered into a new engagement, such ryot shall be entitled to receive another lease for a term not exceeding five years at the rate hitherto paid by him. If the court in a suit for enhanced rent shall have declared a higher rate than that previously paid by him, such ryot shall be entitled to receive a lease for a term not exceeding five years at the said higher rate.

Mr. Browne proposed as an amendment that "no non-occupany ryot shall be liable to enhancement of rent or to ejectment, except at intervals of five years, if he has built a house in the village or estate. At the end of every five years the landlord shall either eject the ryot or serve notice of enhancement, which must not exceed one anna in the rupee every five years up to a term of 20 years. No ryot shall be allowed to contest an enhancement not exceeding that amount; but if he does not agree to the enhancement, he must vacate the land."

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed that the law regarding the right of non-occupancy ryots to pottahs, and their liability to enhancement of rent, be left as it is.

Mr. Hodgkinson's proposal was carried.

Mr. Gibbon proposed that every ryot be accorded the right to sublet the whole or any portion of his holding, provided that all arrears of rent are paid up in full, and that the due payment of the rent is secured to the zemindar.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed as an amendment that the power to sublet be limited to occupancy ryots, and to non-occupancy ryots holding under a lease for the unexpired term thereof.

Mr. Gibbon accepted Mr. Hodgkinson's amendment, which was then put as a substantive resolution as follows:—

"That every ryot having a right of occupancy be accorded the power to sublet the whole or any portion of his holding, and that every non-occupancy ryot holding under a lease be accorded the power to sublet (for the unexpired term of his lease) the whole or any portion of his holding, provided that all arrears of rent are paid up in full, and that the due payment of the rent is secured to the zemindar." (See Note 2.)

PRESUMPTIONS IN FAVOUR OF RYOTS.

Mr. Worsley proposed that the definition of "resident ryot" in section 3, clause 6 of his draft Bill, and clause 2 of section 9, with explanations. III and IV, omitting clause (a), be accepted.

Mr. Finucane proposed as an amendment that the Committee adhere to the conclusion arrived at in their first meeting on this subject, namely, that the definition of zerat, khamar, nij jote, &c., be allowed to stand, and that section 6 (b) of his draft Bill, omitting the word khoodkasht, be substituted for section 9 of Mr. Worsley's Bill.

Mr. Worsley's proposal being in substance the same as Mr. Finucane's, the former gentleman withdrew his resolution in favour of the amendment, which was then put as a substantive resolution as follows:—

"That every resident ryot who has cultivated or held any land continuously for twelve years in any village or estate shall be presumed to have occupancy rights in the whole of the land which he occupies in that village or estate till the contrary is proved in respect of the whole holding or of each portion thereof."

Mr. Gibbon proposed as an amendment that "in the whole of the ticca land which he occupies" be substituted for "the whole of the land which he occupies."

The resolution was therefore carried.

Babus Joy Prakash Lall, Hurbuns Sahai, and Bemola Churn expressed their dissent from the principle of creating a presumption in any shape; Messrs. Gibbon and Anderson were willing to accept the presumption if limited to ticca lands.

HEAD VII.—TO SIMPLIFY AND AMEND THE LAW OF DISTRAINT, AND TO MAKE ILLEGAL DISTRAINT OR RESTRAINT OF CROPS SPECIALLY PUNISHABLE.

Mr. Browne proposed that distraint without suit be initiated in a court; that process of distraint be served through the zemindar's servants if he so wishes; that if the tenant object to the distraint on a one-anna stamp paper, the landlord will have to sue him summarily and to apply simultaneously for attachment before judgment; that sales be conducted through the court peons or officers appointed for the purpose by the local Government; and that otherwise distraint before suit and claims to crops distrained be treated according to the general law in the same way as in case of attachment before judgment. Mr. Browne's view as to distraint, given in detail in his written opinion on the amendment of the rent law, are quoted below:—

1.—No right of distraint without suit can be exercised by co-sharers except through a manager.

2.—No right of distraint without suit can be exercised by persons who should have been, but have not been, recorded in the Collector's Registers under the Land Registration Act.

3.—All distraint without suit shall be initiated in the court by an application, and notice of demand accompanied by an extract from the rent-roll. Such notice may be served (through the court) by the landlord's servants, and distraint may be executed by the landlord, resistance being punished by the laws in force in the same way as resistance to the processes of the court.

4.—Claims made by third parties in distraints without suit to be treated under the general provisions of the law as in cases of claims against property attached before judgment, the claimant to pay an institution fee according to amount of rent claimed. The court to pass such orders as to giving security as it may think fit. The claimant must simultaneously apply for an attachment before judgment.

5.—When the tenant whose crops are distrained without suit contests the demand, he will be allowed to put in an objection on a one-anna stamp paper. A notice will then be issued on the landlord calling upon him to sue the tenant summarily, and to apply simultaneously for attachment of crops before judgment.

6.—The custody of the property distrained before suit or on attachment before judgment, and the sale thereof, to be regulated by the rules of the Civil Procedure Code; but the court should be bound to entrust the property to, or to carry out sales of crops (distrained by the landlord without suit or attached before judgment) through such officials either in the village or thana as the local Government may from time to time direct.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed as an amendment that Mr. MacDonnell's draft sections quoted in paragraph 6 of Sir S. C. Bayley's note, be substituted for the existing law of distraint, only substituting the words "Canoongo or such other officer as the local Government may direct" for "putwaree;" also the words "three days" for "at the same time" in section 72, and omitting altogether section 75, which is noted below:—

* (Section 75).—Any distraint of crops in excess of the quantity specified in the notice of distraint shall subject the distrainer to the penalties provided for criminal trespass or for theft, as the case may be, in the Indian Penal Code; and persons removing crops which have been lawfully distrained under the provisions of this Act, until such have been sold by the putwaree as aforesaid, shall be liable to the penalties provided for theft in the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. Gibbon proposed that the law of distraint be entirely abolished, and that the summary procedure suggested in the Bengal Bill for the more speedy realization of rents be adopted in its place.

The question was put to the vote whether, in case a summary procedure for realization of rents be extended to Behar, the power of distraint should be altogether abolished.—(Vide page 13, post.)

HEAD VIII.—TO LIMIT THE RIGHT TO ENHANCE AND MAKE ILLEGAL ENHANCEMENT PUNISHABLE.

Mr. Gibbon proposed that all zemindars be accorded the power to enhance the rents of all ryots paying below the average rental of the pergunnah; that, having accorded the zemindar that right, the zemindar shall have no power to raise the rents of any resident ryot paying above the average rent of the pergunnah.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed as an amendment that the Committee adhere to the restrictions on enhancement already agreed to by them.—

Mr. Hodgkinson's amendment was declared carried.

HEAD IX.—TO MAKE THE DEMAND OF ILLEGAL CESSES PUNISHABLE.

Babu Bhoop Sen Singh proposed that the Collector be empowered to define what cesses are illegal.

Mr. Toynbee proposed as an amendment that Head IX be left alone, as being a question on which the Committee had no suggestions to offer.

Mr. Toynbee's amendment was carried, Babu Bhoop Sen Singh dissenting.

HEAD X.—TO RECOGNISE AND PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE SYSTEM OF PAYMENT IN KIND.

Mr. Worsley proposed that section 41 of his draft Bill, taken from the North-Western Provinces Rent Act (quoted below), be adopted.—

(41)—Whenever rent is taken by the division of the produce in kind or by estimate or appraisement of the standing crop, or other procedure of a like nature, requiring the presence both of the ryot and landholder either personally or by agent,—if either landholder or ryot, personally or by agent, neglect to attend at the proper time, or if there is a dispute as to the amount or value of the crop,—an application may be presented by either party to the Collector, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate, or appraisement. On receiving such application, the Collector shall issue a written notice to the opposite party or his agent to attend on the date and at the time specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom such division, estimate, or appraisement shall be made.

If on or before the date appointed the dispute has not been amicably adjusted, three residents of the village shall be appointed assessors, one by each of the parties and one by the officer deputed to divide the grain or estimate or appraise the crops; and the officer deputed shall decide the amount of rent payable by their award, and shall give to the party applying a written authority to divide the grain or cut the crops: provided that, if either party fail to attend, the officer deputed shall nominate an assessor on his behalf.

The officer deputed shall report his proceedings to the Collector, who shall determine the amount of costs properly incurred under this section, and the share of the costs to be paid by either party.

Babu Bhoop Sen Singh proposed as a rider that it be provided that the danabundi papers be filed in the Collector's or other office prescribed by the local Government within 15 days of the "kankut" (appraisement), whether the assessment be made by the zemindar himself or through the Collector, as provided by Mr. Worsley's section 41.

Mr. Worsley's proposal, with Babu Bhoop Sen Singh's rider, was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. Hudson proposed that in cases in which the ryot allows bhaoli lands to be fallow, thereby depriving the landlord of any profits from such lands, the Collector or court be empowered to fix a money rent for such land.

Mr. Finucane proposed as an amendment that, in cases where the ryot, without due cause, allows bhaoli lands to be fallow, the landlord shall be entitled to a cash rent in respect of the period in which the land was fallow, such cash rent to be fixed by the court at a cash rate not exceeding that paid for the same description of land in the village or neighbourhood.

Amendment accepted by Mr. Hudson and carried.

The fourth meeting of the Committee was held at Sonepore on Wednesday, November 13th, 1878.

PRESENT:

F. M. Halliday, Esq., President.	Babu Bhoop Sen Singh.
T. M. Gibbon, Esq.	„ Hurbuns Sahai.
B. Hudson, Esq.	„ Joy Prakash Lall.
C. F. Worsley, Esq.	G. J. S. Hodgkinson, Esq.
G. Anderson, Esq.	D. Reid, Esq.
J. F. Browne, Esq.	G. Toynbee, Esq.

M. Finucane, Esq., Secretary.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed that "where occupancy rights have been established, the occupancy ryot or zemindar shall be entitled to commute bhaoli into nagdi (cash) tenures at the rates paid by other occupancy ryots in the neighbourhood; where occupancy ryots holding nagdi (cash) tenures do not exist, that the ryot shall be liable to pay in money rent the average value of the zemindar's share of the produce, calculated on the outturn of the preceding five years."

Babu Bhoop Sen Singh proposed as an amendment that the principle of allowing bhaoli to be converted into nagdi tenures be rejected, and that the rules proposed by him in his written opinion on the amendment of the rent law be adopted.

The rules referred to are quoted below:—

(1)—The estimate of the produce of bhaoli lands shall be made by the amlas of the zemindar in the presence of the ryot and assessors, as mentioned in Mr. Worsley's draft Bill. The estimate and quantity of land shall be entered then and there in counterfoil books in the presence of the ryot and assessors. It shall be signed by the putwaree, the gomashta, and the assessors, and the duplicate form shall be similarly signed and attested and given to the ryot.

(2)—If the ryot do not agree to the estimate, he shall forthwith demand an agora (watchman) from the zemindar; and, if refused, he shall within a week from the date of the estimate, apply on stamp paper to the Collector to obtain an order to have the crops reaped and apportioned without delay.

(3)—If the ryot shall fail to make an application as aforementioned, he shall be held bound to the estimate made in the manner prescribed by Rule 1.

(4)—In case of dispute as to partition of bhaoli crops, it shall be open to either party to make an application to the Collector to have the crops divided under the supervision of a proper officer.

(5)—That the application be on an eight-anna stamp paper.

(6)—That the Collector on receipt of such application shall depute a proper officer.

(7)—That such officer shall have the partition of crops made in his presence, and that he be liable to criminal prosecution for corruption.

(8)—That the costs be borne by the parties jointly.

(9)—That if the ryot remove bhaoli crop without permission of the zemindar, or before partition of the crops has been made, he should be held guilty of theft.

(10)—That any number of ryots be permitted to make a joint application for division of crops.

For Babu Bhoop Sen Singh's amendment the following gentlemen voted:—

Messrs. Gibbon and Anderson dissent from the principle of converting bhaoli into nagdi tenures altogether.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed, as a rider to his resolution, "that, where the proportion of the produce to be taken by the zemindar is not specified in any written agreement, it shall be presumed that the zemindar is entitled to half and the ryot to half the gross produce."

Carried, Messrs. Gibbon and Anderson dissenting.

Head VII.—Distraint.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed that "in the event of the proposal to abolish distraint and to substitute for it a summary procedure not meeting with the approval of Government, distraint be initiated in a court; that the zemindar shall make to the Collector or other court an application, which may be for the distraint of any number of ryots' crops residing in the same estate or village, showing the amount due from each ryot and the instalments in which the arrear is due; that the Collector shall thereupon make a summary order, a copy of which shall be given to the applicant for service."

Mr. Finucane proposed as an amendment that the following words be added:—"if any person, being empowered to distrain, shall distrain or sell, or cause to be sold, any property in a manner contrary to the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act, he shall be liable to the same penalty as is provided in section 99 of Act VIII of 1869 for illegal distraint on the part of a person not empowered to distrain."

For the Amendment—	Against—

The amendment was declared lost. The original proposition was then put, and declared carried by the same majority. The members who voted in favour of the amendment gave a qualified assent to Mr. Hodgkinson's proposal, as being better than nothing, but still insufficient to prevent illegal distraint.

Summary Procedure.

The Committee next proceeded to consider what would be the best form of summary procedure for Behar, supposing the right of distraint abolished. The question was put—

1*st.*—As a summary procedure, whether the Bengal Bill be accepted in its entirety.

2*nd.*—Whether the Bengal Bill, with section 19 so far modified that the ryot can only be ejected at the end of the agricultural year, be accepted.

3*rd.*—Whether Mr. Browne's proposal for summary realization of rent, with a modified form of section 19 as given in clause 2, be accepted.

Mr. Anderson voted for the Bengal Bill in its entirety. Mr. Gibbon for the Bengal Bill with section 19 modified.

The following gentlemen voted for Mr. Browne's proposal, with a modified form of section 19 of the Bengal Bill added:—

Mr. Browne.	Mr. Hodgkinson.
„ Toynbee.	„ Halliday.
„ Worsley.	„ Finucane.
„ Hudson.	Babu Joy Prakash Lall.
„ Reid.	„ Bhoop Sen Singh.

Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjeea.

Mr. Browne's proposals for summary realization of rent, as contained in his written opinion on the amendment of the rent law, are quoted below:—

(1)—Landlords should be allowed to sue summarily for arrears of rent of one year's standing or less, and such suits shall be entered in a register to be called a summary register; such summary suits may be instituted on payment of a fixed fee, the amount of which is to be determined by the local Government.

(2)—If in such summary suit the tenant altogether denies the relationship of landlord and tenant, the suit shall be dismissed.

(3)—If in such suits tenancy is admitted, the tenant will not be allowed to raise any other plea than that of payment; and after deciding on that plea, the court shall pass orders of payment for amount admitted (if any) and for such amounts respecting which the plea of payment has been raised but not proved to the satisfaction of the court. The plaintiff will be left to sue for the balance of his claim (if any) by regular suit in the usual manner with the usual institution fee.

Section 19 of the Bengal Bill for the speedy realization of rents to be added, so far modified that no ryot be liable to ejectment except at the end of the agricultural year.

Miscellaneous.

Mr. Hodgkinson proposed "that no zemindar shall be allowed to eject a tenant except by order of a court."

Mr. Worsley proposed, as an amendment, that section 40 of his draft Bill, taken from the North-Western Provinces Act, quoted below, be accepted:—

Section 40.—If the landholder desire to eject a common ryot, or any other tenant holding only for a limited period after the determination of his tenancy, he may cause a written notice of ejectment to be served on such tenant, specifying the land from which the tenant is to be ejected, and informing him that he must vacate such land on or before the last day of the month of Jeyt next following; or that, if he means to contest the right to eject him, he must apply to the court for that purpose on or before that date.

The notice shall be written in the vernacular language and character of the district, and shall be issued and served on or before the first day of the month of Cheyt through the office of the Collector, and the landholder shall pay the cost of service. It shall be served in the manner prescribed by section 20.

The tenant on whom such notice has been served may, on or before the last day of the month of Jeyt next after the service, make an application to the court contesting his liability to be ejected.

When such an application is made, the court shall proceed to determine the question between the parties.

If no such application is made, the tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall be held to cease on the last day of the month of Jeyt next after the service. The court, if necessary, shall enforce the ejectment:

Provided that no such application for the ejectment of a farmer on the determination of a lease shall be received if the lease be of a kind in which an advance has been made by the leaseholder, and the proprietor or landholder's right of re-entry at the end of the term is contingent on the payment of such advance either in money or by the usufruct of the land. In all such cases the landholder must proceed by suit in court.

Mr. Hodgkinson withdrew his resolution in favour of Mr. Worsley's amendment, which was then put as a substantive proposition and carried, Babu Hurbuns Sahai and Babu Joy Prakash Lall dissenting.

Mr. Worsley proposed that section 47 of his draft Bill, quoted below, be adopted with the addition—That the hath be the standard of 18 inches:—

Section 47.—All measurements made under this Act shall be made according to the standard pole of the pergunnah in which the land is situated; and in case of dispute, the Collector shall determine what the standard (of each ?) pole is.

Mr. Gibbon suggested that for "standard pole of the pergunnah" be substituted "standard pole of the pergunnah or tuppah." Mr. Worsley accepted the suggestion. Section 47 of Mr. Worsley's Bill thus modified was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. Worsley then proposed that the principle involved in section 107 of his draft Bill, quoted below, be accepted:—

Section 107.—In every suit for the delivery of pottahs or kabuliyats, and for the determination of the rates of rent at which such pottahs or kabuliyats are to be delivered; in every suit for the recovery of damages on account of the illegal exaction of rent or of any unauthorized cess or impost, or on account of the refusal of receipts for rent paid, or on account of the extortion of rent by confinement or other duress; in every suit on account of the excessive demand of rent, and in every suit for abatement of rent; in every suit for the recovery of arrears of rent, and in every suit for the determination of class of tenure,—any number of ryots or other tenants may be sued or may sue collectively; and it shall be no ground for dismissing or refusing to hear the application or plaint that such ryots or other tenants are wrongly joined as defendants or plaintiffs: provided that the suit by or against all the tenants be of the same nature, and be on account of lands situate in the same estate, or, where the estate consists of more than one village, in the same village having one registered putwaree.

Mr. Toynbee proposed that the principle be rejected.

Mr. Toynbee's amendment was carried.

Mr. Reid proposed that the rules laid down in Mr. Worsley's draft Bill for compensation for improvements made by ryots be adopted, with one addition, relating to compensation for the value of trees planted by ryots. The zemindar or in-coming ryot should be made to purchase the original ryot's interest in the trees, or acknowledge the custom of the country which still prevails, viz. that the planter of the trees and his heirs are entitled to one-half of the produce.

Mr. Finucane proposed that Mr. Worsley's sections, taken from the North-Western Provinces' Act and quoted below, be adopted in their entirety:—

Section 48.—If any ryot, or any person from whom he has inherited or purchased, make any such improvements on the land in his possession as are hereinafter mentioned, neither he nor his representative shall be ejected from the same land without payment of compensation for such improvements.

Explanation.—The word "improvements" as used in this section means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

(a) tanks, wells, and other works for the storage, supply, or distribution of water for agricultural purposes;

(b) works for the drainage of land, or for the protection of land from floods, or from erosion, or other damage by water;

(c) the reclaiming, clearing, or enclosing of lands for agricultural purposes;

(d) the renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works or alterations therein or additions thereto.

Section 49.—Such compensation may, at the option of the landholder or his representative, be made—

1*st*, by payment in money;

2*nd*, by a rent to be charged on the land;

3*rd*, by the grant of a beneficial lease of the landholder or his representative to the ryot or his representative;

4*th*, partly by one or by any two of the said ways, and partly by the others, or other of the same ways.

Section 50.—In case of difference as to the amount or value of the compensation tendered, either party may apply to the Collector, stating the matter in dispute and requesting a determination thereof. On receiving such application, the Collector shall—

(a) cause notice thereof to be served on the other party;

(b) take such evidence as the parties, or either of them, may adduce;

(c) make such further inquiry as the Collector may deem necessary; and

(d) determine the amount of the payment in money and the amount and incidence of the rent charge, and the terms of the lease, or any of such matters.

Section 51.—In determining the amount or value mentioned in section 50, or the terms of such leases, the Collector shall take into account any assistance given to the ryot by the landholder, either directly in money, material, or labour for the purpose of making such improvements, or indirectly by allowing the ryot to hold at a favourable rate of rent.

Mr. Gibbon proposed that "no compensation for improvements be given."

The question was then put to the vote, whether compensation for improvements should, under any circumstances, be allowed—

Against allowing compensation for improvements—	For allowing compensation for improvements—
Mr. Gibbon.	Mr. Reid.
„ Browne.	„ Toynbee.
„ Anderson.	„ Hudson.

Mr. Gibbon's amendment was declared lost.

Mr. Hodgkinson then proposed that compensation for improvements be confined to cases where advances had been made under the Land Improvement Act.

Mr. Worsley accepted Mr. Hodgkinson's proposal, which was carried. The gentlemen who voted against compensation for improvements altogether, prefer Mr. Hodgkinson's limitation to Mr. Worsley's original proposal, but would rather have no compensation allowed in any case. (Vide Note 3.)

HEAD XII.—THE EMPOWERING COLLECTORS TO EFFECT A SETTLEMENT IN DISPUTED CASES.

Mr. Toynbee proposed that "the Committee consider any special measures under this head to be uncalled for in Behar."

The proposal was carried, Babus Joy Prakash Lall and Hurbuns Sahai dissenting, and Mr. Finucane expressing a qualified dissent.

Mr. Finucane proposed that remeasurment of estates or tenures be not allowed oftener than once in ten years, and only by a person, or body of persons, representing the entire proprietary interest.

Mr. Gibbon proposed as a rider, except where a measurement having been made by one co-sharer another co-sharer disputes its accuracy, through the court, within six months of the measurement.

The original resolution, with Mr. Gibbon's rider, was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. Finucane proposed that in cases where the parties have not entered into a special agreement in writing, fixing the kists in which rent is to be paid, the Collector be empowered to fix and declare for each district, or part of a district, the instalments in which rent shall be payable.

Agreed to unanimously.

Mr. Finucane proposed that "where there is a dispute between rival rent claimants as to which of them is entitled to the whole or any part of the rent of a ryot's holding, and such ryot after claim made upon him, is doubtful as to which of the rival claimants is entitled to the rent or any quota thereof, he shall be entitled to deposit his rent in the court having jurisdiction to entertain a suit for such rent to the credit of the rival claimants. That such deposit shall have, as far as the ryot is concerned, the same force and effect as if the ryot had paid the amount deposited to the person or persons legally entitled thereto.

Carried unanimously.

Mr. Finucane proposed that where a village or estate has been leased in farm, the lessor shall be bound to notify to the ryots the conditions and terms of the lease by affixing a copy of it in the village cutcherry and also by beat of drum in the village.

The Committee was of opinion that this was unnecessary.

Mr. Finucane suggested that the provisions of the North-Western Provinces law, sections 23 to 35, Act XIX of 1873, relating to putwarees and canoongoes be extended to Behar. These sections are quoted below—

Section 23.—The Collector of the district, with the sanction of the Board, may arrange all the villages of such district in putwaree's circles, and may from time to time alter the limits of such circles.

But no such arrangement or alteration shall be final unless and until it has been sanctioned by the Board.

Section 24.—A putwaree shall be appointed to each circle, whether the mehals in such circle are assessed to revenue or not.

Section 25.—Whenever a circle is without a putwaree, the proprietors of such circle, or their representatives in interest, shall, in accordance with local custom, nominate a person to be such putwaree, and he shall be appointed by the Collector of the district.

Section 26.—In case of disagreement as to the nominee, the Collector shall ascertain the local custom, if any, and shall appoint the person nominated in accordance therewith.

Where no such custom can be ascertained, the Collector shall appoint the nominee of those proprietors who represent the largest amount of annual value in the circle or of their representatives in interest.

If a mehal is held under direct management, or if the proprietor of a mehal be under the charge of the Court of Wards, the Collector of the district shall be held to be the proprietor for the purpose of nominating a putwaree under this section.

Section 27.—If the person in whom the nomination is vested neglect to nominate a successor to the putwaree within fifteen days from the occurrence of the vacancy, the Collector of the district shall call on them by notice to make the nomination; and if they fail to do so within fifteen days from the receipt of notice, the Collector of the district shall make the appointment.

Section 28.—If the person or persons in whom the nomination is vested nominate a man not qualified to perform the duties of a putwaree, or in the nomination neglect to follow the local custom, the Collector of the district shall refuse to appoint the nominee; and if a fit person be not nominated within fifteen days from the date of the notification of such refusal, he shall himself appoint a person to the vacant office:

Provided that the Collector of the district, in making the appointment under this and the last preceding section, shall always give preference to any member of the late putwaree's family qualified to perform the duties of the office:

Section 29.—A rate may be imposed by order of the Collector of the district on the annual value, or on the cultivated area, of all the mehals composing the circle of each putwaree, or partly in one way and partly in the other, for defraying the salary of such putwaree, and any charges incurred on account of any additional establishment required for the proper supervision, maintenance, and correction of the putwaree's records.

Section 30.—The amount of the rate to be imposed under section 29 in any district shall be determined by the Board under the orders of the local Government:

Provided that such rate shall not exceed three per cent. on the annual value of the rated mehal (in Behar 3 pie per rupee on the jummabundee).

Section 31.—The rate shall be collected with the revenue, and shall, in cases of default, be recoverable by the same process as arrears of revenue.

Section 32.—The salaries of the putwarees shall from time to time be fixed by the Board under the orders of the local Government.

Section 33.—One or more canoongoes may be appointed in each tehsil (thana) for the proper supervision, maintenance, and correction of the putwaree's records.

In cases of a vacancy in the office of a canoongo, preference shall be given to some duly qualified member of a family in which the office of the canoongo of the tehsil or any part thereof is hereditary.

If no such qualified member can be found, then one of the putwarees of the tehsil shall, if duly qualified, be appointed to the vacancy; and failing any person duly qualified among them, some other fit and competent person shall be appointed thereto.

Section 34.—The salaries of the canoongoes shall from time to time be fixed by the local Government.

Section 35.—Every canoongo and putwaree, and every person appointed temporarily to discharge the duties of any such officer, shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and all official records and papers kept by any such officer shall be held to be public records and the property of Government—Vide Note 20, Part I.

The Committee seemed to be of opinion that it was desirable to abolish putwarees altogether, but no definite conclusion on this point was arrived at.

The President next asked the Committtee for an expression of opinion as to the means by which the extra establishment required for the decision of summary suits, for the enforcement of legal distraint, for the division and appraisement of the produce in bhaoli tenures, for the custody of accounts to be filed in the Collector's office, and for the carrying out of their other recommendations is to be paid.

On this point Mr. Hodgkinson proposed that "the Committee is of opinion that the receipts from stamps in summary suits and copies, and from registration fees, will suffice for the extra establishment required."

Mr. Hodgkinson's resolution was put and carried.

Mr. Finucane proposed that, with a view to paying the extra establishment required for the enforcement of legal distraint, and for carrying out the other recommendations of the Committee—

(a) applications for distraint should bear court-fees as in a civil suit, such fees to be assessed on double the amount of the arrear which it is sought to recover by distraint;

(b) that applications for service of notice of enhancement bear court-fees calculated on the capitalized value of the proposed enhancement.

These proposals were not approved by the Committee.

Note (1°).—In a circular letter dated 29th January 1879, the President invited a further expression of opinion on the following points:—

(a) Are occupancy rights to be transferable provided the transferree is a bond fide cultivator?

(b) Should sub-letting (which was proposed as a substitute for the transferability of occupancy rights) be allowed?

(c) Should compensation for improvements be allowed in all cases, or only where improvements are made under the Land Improvement Act?

In reply to the President's letter, the following members have expressed opinions in favour of the transferability of occupancy rights, as long as there is no decree outstanding for rent, and without any restrictions as to the status or class of transferees:—

Mr. Worsely.	Mr. Hudson.
„ Reid.	„ Finucane.

The following members are in favour of the transferability of occupancy rights, provided the transferee is a bond fide cultivator:—

Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjees.	Babu Bhoop Sen Singh.

The other members are opposed to transferability of occupancy rights.

Note (2°).—Messrs. Worsley and Finucane would only allow sub-letting in case the transferability of occupancy rights is not recognised specifically by law. Messrs. Reid and Hudson would adhere to the present law, allowing sub-letting whether occupancy rights are declared transferable or not.

Note (3°).—In reply to the President's No. 382, dated 29th January, the members named below have expressed opinions in favour of allowing compensation for improvements in all cases, and not alone where the improvement has been made under the Land Improvement Act:—

Mr. Worsley.	Mr. Reid.
„ Hudson.	„ Finucane.
Babu Bemola Churn Bhuttacharjees.

The President is also in favour of allowing compensation for improvements in all cases.

M. FINUCANE,
Secretary.

No. 120, dated Bankipore, the 18th February 1879.

From—J. F. BROWNE, Esq., Member, Behar Rent Law Committee,
To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division and President of the Committee.

I HAVE the honor to submit the following remarks with reference to your letter forwarding to me for signature the draft report of the Behar Rent Committee.

HEAD I.

Putwarees.—I think it might be mentioned with advantage under this head, that putwarees could be altogether done away with if Moonsifs were appointed in each thana, with powers both to try simple money suits and summary rent suits. I pointed out that the whole expense of such Moonsifs could be defrayed from the proceeds of fees payable in the proposed rent-roll offices for the filing of accounts and from usual court-fees. Distraints and sales would be carried out as at present by peons, but with this difference that such officers would be under much closer and nearer supervision than they are at present. The thana Moonsif would be very much in the position of a North-west Tehsildar. The issues before him for decision would be always of a simple character, and he would therefore have ample time to superintend the execution of revenue processes.

HEAD IX.

It appears to me that courts should be distinctly prohibited from admitting plaints in which any mention is made of any cess of any sort or kind. Ignorant peasants will never believe that such cesses are illegal when courts can be compelled to decree them on the specious ground that they have been agreed to by the tenant.

HEAD X.

Under this head I wish to place on record my opinion that the system of rent in kind must, as long as it continues to exist, be most detrimental to the interests of the ryots. Its practical result is that the landlord, whenever there is any harvest, obtains such an exorbitant proportion of the produce, that the tenant must always be a pauper. Of course when there is no harvest the tenant pays nothing, but no more in most cases does the nagdi or money rent tenant.

Of course the bhaoli system could not be abolished by one stroke of the pen, but I think that it might easily be seriously discouraged. I would throw on the landlord, in all cases in which he had not attached the crops before reaping, the burden of proving that their value exceeded the amount of cash rent paid in the same or adjoining districts by occupancy ryots. I would allow bhaoli ryots to commute on the same principle, and not only at rates in the neighbourhood, for in many districts, e.g., Gya, there are no occupancy ryots. I would not allow the landlord to recover through the courts anything else except the exact half of the produce, and no expenses or cesses of any kind. Such steps would, I think, gradually lead to the substitution of money rents for rents in kind.

HEAD XIII.

I would add at the end of section 28 another provision—

5.—That when a ryot tenders rent in a suit, the plaintiff's pleader should be bound at once to receive it and give a counterfoil receipt. This arrangement is vastly preferable to the present very cumbersome system of deposits.

2. I shall now proceed to answer the questions a, b, c, of your section 3.

(a) I am decidedly of opinion that in Behar it would be premature at present to give special legal sanction to the transfer of occupancy rights. In most of the districts the ryots have no such rights, or, I should rather say, these rights do not admit of legal proof. When they have been properly defined by gradual litigation, and connected with specific lands by the action of the proposal made by me in section 8(a) of this report, the occupancy tenures must become transferable in the natural course of events precisely in the same manner as the guzáshta tenures of Shahabad. If they do not, it will then be time enough to declare them transferable. To do so now would amount to giving great and dangerous encouragement to false claims on the part of ryots. They will be induced to claim as occupancy lands the whole of the lands in their possession, although it is notorious that only a very small proportion thereof has been held for twelve years continuously.

With reference to the proviso suggested in the question, I am of opinion that the determination of the point whether the transferree is a bonâ fide cultivator would be attended with insuperable difficulties.

(b) I do not think that sub-letting by occupancy ryots should at this juncture be formally sanctioned by a special law. It would, in cases in which the sub-lessee is a bonâ fide cultivator, lead to the very worst kind of rack-renting by a host of intermediate holders of the most needy and greedy description. When the sub-lessee is not a cultivator, he would be either a mahajun, a land-jobber, or a planter. I think it most desirable that such complications should be avoided at a time when we are seeking to improve the relations between landlords and tenants, and to improve the status of the latter. Good feeling should be encouraged as much as possible between landlords and those ryots who may succeed by the help of the proposed presumptions in their favour in securing occupancy rights; the very contrary result will take place if it is declared by law that those who secure occupancy rights will be allowed to sub-let their lands to others at higher rates than those paid to the landlord, or to make over their tenures to powerful outsiders with a view to their acting as patrons and friends of the ryots against the landlord.

(c) The discussion of the question of compensation seems to me quite premature, and should, in my opinion, be postponed to the time when tenants will be in a position to improve their tenures by the expenditure of capital. The paucity of such tenants in most of the districts of Behar at the present time is notorious.

3. I now return the report signed, on the understanding that the few amendments proposed by me will be incorporated in the report or sent up as my own suggestions.

Dated Chumparun, the 22nd February 1879.

From—T. M. GIBBON, ESQ., Member, Behar Rent Law Committee,

To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division and President of the Committee.

I HOPE I may be allowed to say a few words in continuation of my letter of the 19th instant. I have only just seen, through the kindness of a friend, a copy of the memorial presented by the members of the Behar Landholders' Association to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

In it there is one assertion of such importance as made by them, and at the same time partly so incorrect, that I hope you will pardon my drawing your attention to it. In section 10 of their memorial, the memorialists assert that "right of occupancy is heritable"—it is so, but only to a very limited extent, and not as the memorialists are under the impression that it is, in the widest sense of the word.

One of the points that we were asked to discuss, and a very important one, was whether it was advisable to make rights of occupancy "inheritable and transferable."

Whether the right is to be made inheritable and transferable, or only inheritable or transferable, or neither, the law should be clearly defined, and not left in its present vague state.

To allow an assertion, backed by the names of all the principal zemindars in Behar, to pass unquestioned, particularly on a matter which concerns the custom, might mislead His Honor's Government into the belief that it was correct, and accept it as such without investigation. To make the occupancy rights of ryots inheritable in the general acceptation of the term, would affect the interests of the landholders to a greater degree than to accord to them the right to transfer their holdings.

As I said before, I see nothing to clash with the interests of the landholders in according the ryots the right to transfer their rights, provided they are not allowed to part with their lands piece-meal, but to make them inheritable—I believe a very serious matter.

Section 6 of Act VIII of 1869 says: "The holding of the father or other person from whom a ryot inherits shall be deemed to be the holding of the ryot within the meaning of this section."

This does not, in my opinion, make a ryot's holding inheritable, but simply allows a ryot who has been permitted by his landlord to get possession of his father's farm to count the time his father held such lands in his own favour.

As I said in my letter of the 24th October, custom permits lands held by a joint family to be inheritable, but only among the members of a "joint" family, and as long as they form a "joint" family, that is to say, as long as two or three members of a family live together, it does not matter in whose name the jummabundee stands; if the party whose name is on the rent-roll dies, it makes no difference to the rest of the family; the family still remains in possession.

A man cannot claim to inherit the lands of a relation from whom he has been separated some years; his right to inherit even ancestral property in such a case, would very, very seldom be allowed, and certainly never in the case of lands his relative might have acquired after their separation.

Whether such right is to be allowed in the future is a matter for the Government to decide; if it is to be granted, it will be necessary, in the interests of the zemindars, to put some limit to the time within which such claim is to be made, or we shall have fifth and sixth cousins turning up to claim lands already settled with others.

In reference to another matter, which I hope you will pardon my again referring to, its importance to us all must be my excuse.

Both before and at your meeting, I strongly protested against ryots acquiring rights of occupancy in bhaoli lands, and pointed out that it was contrary to custom. I now beg to refer you to section 6 of Act VIII of 1869, to show you that it is also contrary to the present law. "Khmar" ryot, according to Wilson's glossary of Indian law-terms, means "a cultivator who pays his rent in kind or in a certain share of the produce."

Dated Chumparun, the 19th February 1879.

From—T. M. Gibbon, Esq., Member, Behar Rent Law Committee,

To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division and President of the Committee.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your circular No. 382R, of the 29th January, requesting me to record the points on which I dissent from the findings of your Committee, and for a statement of the grounds on which I do so.

Under Head II, section 8 (a).—Although I quite agree with the recommendation made by Mr. Browne that the courts should be empowered to compel the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats in all cases where rights of occupancy have been decreed, I am of opinion the courts should also be empowered to fix the term for which, and the terms on which, the ryot is to hold such lands.

If the courts are not empowered to do so, the power to declare that the ryot has occupancy rights in his lands will be valueless.

Head III.—In reference to the compulsory use of counterfoil receipts, I cannot hope that the objections urged by Mr. Anderson and myself will have any weight as against the strongly-expressed opinions of such a large majority of your Committee in favour of the measure; but I am sorry to say I see no reasons assigned for doing so of sufficient weight, to induce me to re-consider my opinion, or to withdraw my objections to it. My objections to the measure are stated by me in my letter of the 24th October. I do not think the members of your Committee have fully considered the necessity the Judges will be under of giving decrees against ryots on the production of the counterfoil, even though their better judgment leads them to suspect foul play.

If the production of the counterfoil is not to be final in a suit, the compulsory use of them will be a decided nuisance.

If (as I hope it will), the Government will take measures to compel the keeping of proper accounts, &c., in accordance with the recommendation of your Committee, I would recommend the seahas being kept in counterfoil. I am sure you will find them better checks, and not so onerous. If a zemindar has previously made up his mind to swindle an unsuspecting ryot, no checks Government may contrive will prevent him from doing so. Where the ryot suspects foul play, and demands a receipt that the zemindar is disinclined to give, it is as easy and just as effectual for the ryot to apply for a receipt in the usual form, as it is for him to apply to the courts for one in counterfoil. These, I maintain are not the cases requiring protection or that the Judges have such difficulty in deciding.

The ryots will, in most cases, I may say in all, demand receipt immediately they pay their rents from the party to whom they pay their rents, whether collector, putwari, or zemindar; but if they are at the time of payment put off with any excuse, such as press of work, &c., provided they see the amount duly entered on the seaha, they will go away satisfied and not think of demanding a receipt for the amount paid until months after.

These are the men I would wish to see protected, and this can only be done, as recommended, by insisting on the seahas being kept in counterfoil.

I maintain that in most cases where the landlords have denied in our courts having received rents that have been paid to them, at the time of receiving such rent they had not the remotest intention of acting dishonestly by their ryots. To many everything is fair in law; both parties acting carelessly, but in good faith, as long as they have no dispute pending, think it no degradation to act unscrupulously when once an appeal has been made to law.

Head V, section 15.—I was not present on the first day of your meeting, so I hope I may be permitted to add the words " or by his representative " to your definition of zerat lands.

A man may be ticcadar of a village for fifty years, and during that time have cultivated lands as zerat, and yet he is not a proprietor, co-sharer, or servant.

Head V, section 17.—I am now as strongly averse to the principle of compensation for improvements being admitted as I was at the meeting of your Committee. It is a decided innovation, not required by the people, contrary to the practice of the country, and is sure to be misunderstood.

I am afraid public opinion is not sufficiently advanced to put the same construction on the word " improvement " that many of us would do.

Many cases of great hardship to the zemindar might occur were the principle allowed in the case of a poor zemindar and a wealthy tenant: for instance, a wealthy tenant might think it necessary to excavate a tank, expending Rs. 5,000 on it, and yet you would only allow the zemindar to dispossess him for the non-payment of his rent, say Rs. 10, on his paying down that sum.

I cannot see any hardship adduced in justification of the measure in the ryot having to pay ground-rent for a tank he thinks it necessary to excavate, or in his being obliged to keep it clean. In fact I am not quite sure that more public officers than zemindars do not insist on the fulfilment of this last clause. It is certainly a hardship to the ryot to be compelled to pay ground-rent and be deprived of the fish. A ryot receives his lands at the hands of the zemindar to farm, and thereby to support himself and family; if a ryot has, under the law, acquired a permanent interest in the soil, he can only be dispossessed for not fulfilling his part of the contract, namely to pay the zemindar his rent if he makes improvements to facilitate his farming operations. He knows at what risk and on what terms, and should be prepared to pay the penalty of non-fulfilment of contract.

He is at liberty to make any improvements he thinks necessary or required on his own farm, but he has no right to constitute himself the judge of the public wants, to mulct the zemindar in the cost of the same thereafter.

Head VI refers to the advisability of making occupancy rights inheritable and transferable.

It not because I object to the resolutions of your Committee that I again refer to the subject, but because one of my objections to making them transferable has been fairly met by your able Secretary, and demands an answer.

One of my reasons for objecting to the ryots being accorded the right to transfer their occupancy rights in the soil was, as stated in my letter of the 24th October, and to your Committee, that their lands would soon pass from them into the hands of money-lenders and others.

To this it is replied that, by enhancing the value of the ryot's holding you raise his credit and enable him to raise money on more favourable terms than he is now able to do.

This I admit to be correct in principle By according him the right to transfer his holding, you accord to him proprietary rights in the soil, and do most materially improve the value of his property, and will after the lapse of time enable those who may be fortunate enough to retain possession of their lands to raise money on more advantageous terms than they are now able to do.

But such a result will only come about after some years have elapsed, when the ryot appreciates his position. You cannot, with the stroke of your pen, alter the terms on which he has hitherto borrowed money, and will for years to come do so. Anything you can do for him will not make him more provident for the future, or relieve him from his present burden of debt.

At present the money-lenders, knowing the ryots' lands are not saleable, feel that their only chance of realizing their claims is to support them and keep them alive. If you make occupancy rights transferable, you deprive such ryots of their only means of support.

In my letter of the 24th October I stated that I would make one exception to this rule, and that is to allow a sale by decree of court for arrears of rent. I have no arguments to bring forward in favour of such exceptions being made. When I come to analyse my own thoughts on the subject, I believe I am mainly guided by the great loss I have seen the much-abused ticcadars suffer by being deprived of their leases, and consequent difficulty they have in collecting their just dues.

Head VIII.—To limit the right to enhance, &c.

I believe clause (b) of section 21 will be found inoperative, and always evaded. As the recommendations of the Committee now stand, I have no very great objections to make to them.

At the meeting of your Committee I strongly objected to any preference being shown to one set of ryots over another; and far from agreeing with your Committee that my proposition to allow zemindars to raise all rents below the average of the pergunnah to such average was an innovation, I am strongly of opinion that the innovation was on the other side.

Before the passing of Act X of 1859 "no" ryots had the right to hold at fixed rates; and I am strongly of opinion that by granting them such right the Legislature of the day did the zemindars a positive injury, one contrary to the interests of the country.

I cannot hope that Mr. Anderson's and my opinions will carry much weight as against the opinions of such a strong majority, but I beg respectfully to protest against the word "rates" being used; if a ryot is to be allowed to hold his lands on the same conditions for all time to come, I beg it may be stated that he may hold his lands "on the same terms," not "at the same rate." As your Committee propose to word the law, a ryot might claim to hold his land at the same rate, but under different conditions.

Head X.—I am averse to allowing zemindar or ryot to convert bhaoli into nugdi tenures at pleasure. Bhaoli lands pay rent in kind, according to their yield: all lands do not yield equally well. Your proposal as it now stands would permit ryots to claim a right to hold especially good lands, or even fair average lands, at a lower rental than they are now paying. Bhaoli lands pay rent in proportion to the yield of each field; nugdi according to the average value of a jote. They should not, therefore, be classed together.

Should Government think it necessary to permit zemindars and ryots the option converting bhaoli into nugdi tenure, I prefer the average produce of the last five years being taken as the basis of settlement, to the average rates paid by occupancy ryots in the neighbourhood.

Head XI.—A summary procedure.

My reason for preferring the Bengal Act to Mr. Browne's procedure was that the former left it at the discretion of the court to allow or disallow a defence; whereas by the procedure proposed by Mr. Browne, a ryot has only to set up a false defence to compel the zemindar to appeal to the slow and tedious process of a civil suit to receive redress.

Dated Arrah, the 22nd February 1879.

From—Baboo Hurbuns Sahai, Member, Behar Rent Law Committee,
To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division and President of the Committee.

With reference to your Circular No 382R., dated 29th ultimo, I have the honor to state that I generally assent to the proposed report of the Behar Rent Law Committee, and beg to offer the following remarks in connection therewith.

I am very strongly of opinion that a mere right of occupancy, which is a creation of Act X of 1859 and Act VIII of 1869, should not be declared transferable. I have to refer you to my previous report on the subject, which I submitted to you in the beginning of November last for the reasons of the position I maintain.

The transferability of guzáshta tenures in Shahabad was recognized before Act X of 1859 came into force according to local custom and usage, but a guzáshta tenure is a quite different thing from a mere right of occupancy. The former, strictly and properly speaking, means a hereditary tenure held by a khoodkasht resident ryot from the time of the permanent settlement, or at least from a very ancient date, at a fixed uniform rate. Though, latterly, in some cases attempt has been made to make guzáshtadari and occupancy rights, synonymous terms, yet, whenever proper objection has been made, and the case has been thoroughly sifted and carefully tried by the court, the attempt has failed.

In Behar, where the Mitakshara law prevails, the transfer of a right of occupancy which has been inherited by a son from his father would be invalid, unless with the consent of all the members composing the joint Hindu family. As a general rule, the Hindu family consists of minors or other male members who are unwilling to assent to the transfer, and as a logical consequence the recognition of the transferability of the right of occupancy, instead of conducing to the general prosperity of the agricultural population, will lead to litigation and ruin.

In Shahabad already a large portion of the old guzáshtadari tenures have passed into the hands of mahajans and indigo-planters in the same manner as the zemindaries of old families have passed into the hands of banians and mahajans, and consequenly I cannot agree to the remark made in the report of the Committee that "the effect has not been to throw ryots' lands into the hands of mahajans or other monied men, nor have any difficulties arisen in connection with the Hindu law of inheritance."

Another danger which, in the interests of the agricultural population, I humbly beg to point out is that, one of the consequences of the recognition of transfer of a right of occupancy will be that the best lands will pass away from the hands of ryots into those of indigo planters, and thus the tenantry will be reduced to ruin and misery.

There is no objection, in my humble opinion, in according the power of sub-letting their holdings to the occupancy ryots, but I would most emphatically beg to state that the zemindar should not be bound to recognize the sub-tenure. The proviso in the resolution of the Committee about the due payment of rent to the zemindar is vague and indefinite. The question simply to be determined is, to whom is the zemindar to look for the payment of his rent? Surely he cannot be compelled to look to the under-tenants for the same. The zemindar at the time of the creation of the tenure selected his own peaceful ryot, and equity as well as law cannot compel him to recognize an obnoxious or a poor person who may be introduced by his ryot in his estate.

Many perplexing and difficult questions will arise if the zemindar be compelled to recognize the sub-tenant. Supposing he is a man of straw and the rent cannot be realized from him, is the tenant lessor jointly responsible with his sub-tenant for the rent or not? Supposing that the original tenant dies without leaving any heir (under the present law the tenure would lapse to the zemindar), can the zemindar, under such circumstances, oust the sub-tenant, though there may be no default in the payment of the rent? The zemindar has created the tenure for the cultivation of food-grain, can he be bound to recognize an indigo planter whom his refractory ryot may happen to sub-let to, and who has cultivated indigo much to the annoyance and inconvenience of himself and tenants at large? The sub-tenant will be at liberty to grow whatever crop he may like, and the zemindar may not be able to distrain the crop which the under-tenant may grow. I am therefore strongly of opinion that the zemindar should not be compelled to recognize the sub-tenant.

The other point on which I beg to enter my emphatic protest is the proposal to abolish the distraint law altogether. The Committee was called upon by Government to consider and suggest how to simplify and amend the law of distraint. The majority of the Committee, instead of carrying out the instructions of Government, propose to abolish it altogether. It has been declared, from the earliest legislation to the present time, that the produce of the land is hypothecated for the rent, and the zemindar has legal right to realize his rent by distraining the crop. No good and valid reasons have been shown, nor has any grave necessity been made out, why the zemindar should be deprived of his vested right, which he has hitherto enjoyed. It has been said that the power has been abused by him; but this fact is no reason why the law should be altogether abolished. If the present law be inadequate for protecting the ryot's interests and punishing the zemindar for abusing the power vested in him, surely the law should be improved, and effectual provisions ought to be made to remedy the evil. Almost all the laws are abused by some one or other, but that is no reason why the law should be dispensed with. I would therefore differ from the majority of the Committee in abolishing the law of distraint, and recommend the law should be improved as suggested by the Committee.

In my humble opinion no summary procedure for the realization of rent is required in Behar. The Bengal Bill as well as Mr. Browne's proposal will not materially assist the zemindar, and are open to grave objections. The present law, in my humble opinion, is quite sufficient so far as Behar is concerned, and no fresh legislation is necessary.

Compensation for improvement should be allowed only when the improvement is made under the Land Improvement Act. No doubt the ryot is equitably entitled to recover compensation for every sort of improvement which enhances the letting value of the land; but, in my humble opinion, there ought to be some restriction to the power of the ryot to make the improvement, and some provision ought to be made to keep reliable record to determine the amount of compensation to save protracted lengthy enquiries and litigation. As much difficulty will be experienced in carrying out the above scheme, I would propose that for the present, compensation be allowed in cases of improvements made under the Land Improvement Act.

Dated Doomraon, the 1st March 1879.

From—Baboo Joy Prakash Lall, Member, Behar Rent Law Committeee,

To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division and President of the Committe.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your circular No. 382L., dated the 29th January 1879, with enclosures, and to submit the following in reply.

2. Head II, paragraph 9.—I beg to dissent from this proposal on the following grounds:—

1*st*.—Chittas containing the areas of fields, rates actually paid, amounts of rent, and instalments thereof, are in fact pottahs in miniature, and their compulsory interchange involves as much difficulty as the interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats.

2*nd*.—On precisely the same grounds that a law requiring compulsory exchange of pottahs and kabuliyats will have the effect of driving the parties to litigation, the compulsory interchange of chittas and khattians will inevitably lead to the same result.

3*rd*.—If it is only intended that a chitta not agreed to by the ryot, and not signed by him, is to be tendered by the zemindar, it would serve no purpose whatever; and if it be intended to bind the zemindar on his part, the ryot can do so by taking a copy of the jummabundee which the zemindar files in the Collectorate. If, however, it be intended to give a reciprocity to these chittas, in short, the probative force of a mutual contract, the chittas are nothing less than pottahs as has been submitted above.

4th.—In the present state of things, in the absence of a cadastral survey, it is very difficult to give the precise boundaries of a ryot's holding, and this difficulty is the same with regard to chittas as with pottahs.

5th.—It is respectully submitted that the Committee, in negativing the proposal for the compulsory interchange of pottahs and kabuliyats, should not for like reasons, recommend the compulsory interchange of chittas

3. Head V, paragraph 15.—I respectfully dissent from the proposed definition of zerat lands. Cases of forcible ouster noticed by Sir Stuart Bayley, and exchange of ryotti for zerat lands, are, according to the opinion of the Committee, of rare occurrence in Behar, and such cases, involving as they do cases of forcible ouster, are, according to the opinion of the Committee, sufficiently provided for by the present law; under the circumstances, the definition is unnecessary. It is not also justifiable as regards the actual state of things and existing rights of zemindars, for there are cases in which, for good reasons, the zemindars do not cultivate the zerat lands themselves, or cannot do so. Nor is it easy to see how the definition obviates the difficulty noticed by Sir Stuart Bayley; for in cases of forcible ouster, and the ryot's seeking the assistance of courts, the ryot's case will stand or fall by proof of his own right. In the North-Western Provinces rent law, zerat lands have been so defined, more with a view to the protection of Government interests than with the view of protecting the ryots. This reason does not exist in Bengal.

4. Head V, paragraph 17.—I humbly dissent generally from the proposal of awarding compensation—first, because this jeopardizes the landlord's right of re-entry;

secondly, because it will lead to litigation;

thirdly, because such improvements are, as a matter of fact, scarcely made by tenants at will, because their tenancy is precarious, and also because they want the means to make such improvements, and the consequence of the enactment will only be that the tenant will set up absurd claims for compensation as an answer to the landlord's right of re-entry.

These objections may not of course be applicable to cases where the improvements have been made after an inquiry or with the landlord's consent under the Land Improvement Act.

5. Head VI, paragraph 18.—I hold, as I held in Committee, that the interest of the landlord and tenant will be alike affected by making rights of occupancy under the rent law transferable. I do not see how the matter is any way improved by making occupancy rights transferable in a restricted sense (i.e.) to a bond fide cultivator. The object of such restriction is, perhaps, to keep away mahajans, ticcadars, and indigo planters from buying; but, in Behar, all these classes cultivate on their own account.

The proposed transferability of the right of occupancy created by Act X of 1859 will be considered by the zemindars as further encroachment on their rights, and at the same time it will not be so beneficial to the ryots, inasmuch as their lands will pass into the hands of monied men, such as usurers or indigo planters.

A misunderstanding of the character of the guzáshta tenures of Shahabad seems the cause of many influential authorities recommending the transferability of occupancy rights in Behar. The guzáshta tenure had been recognized by custom and local usage in Northern Shahabad long before the date Act X of 1859 came into operation, while the right of occupancy came to exist with the promulgation of the Act. The mere right of occupancy is not thus possessed of the necessary substance that enabled guzáshta tenures to find a consideration and regard with the landlords of higher rank. Inheritance of tenures held by khoodkhasht (resident) ryots from a very ancient date contemporary with the commencement of the permanent settlement at a fixed uniform rate, is a qualification wanting in the mere right of occupancy of the present day. All attempts at the promotion of occupancy right to the rank of a guzáshtadar tenure have met with failures wherever judicial courts have taken up the careful sifting of the question on proper objections advanced against such an undue recognition. In face of the authority of the Mitakshara law that commands such an extensive and deep-cherished respect of the Hindu families in the province of Behar, no recognition of the transferability is likely to take place without a lengthy and expensive litigation leading to no good to the ryot. Existence of numerous instances carrying testimony to the fact of actual transfers of guzáshtadari tenures from the possession of men devoted to land cultivation to that of men professionally carrying on money transactions, called usurers, can be proved.

As to the question of sub-letting, I am still strongly of opinion that the law should be left as it is. If the zemindar be bound to recognize such sub-leases, there is not much difference between transfer by sub-lease and transfer by sale. The result under both conditions will be alike injurious to the zemindars. They cannot of course object to the law as it exists at present, allowing a ryot of occupancy right to cultivate himself or let others to cultivate under him. The evils of sub-infeudation have already been discussed under the Bengal Rent Bill.

The difficulty of the zemindars in matters of realization of rents will increase because the ryots selected by them before Act X of 1859 came into operation, or at the time of the temporary settlement as peaceful tenants may change hands by bringing an obnoxious or too poor sub-tenant. In case of the tenant's dying without an heir, which empowers the zemindar to resume the lands, he may find difficulty in ousting the sub-tenant whom he has already been recognizing.

6. Head VII, paragraphs 19 and 20.—I beg to dissent from the proposal of the Committee that distraint should be abolished altogether or initiated in a court of justice. The power of distraint is only efficacious because at present the initiative is in the zemindar's own hands and in order to take that initiative, he has not to resort to a distraint court. The existence of the right in such form serves the purpose of inducing the ryots in many cases to pay his rents promptly. In Behar the right is but scarcely exercised : witness the paucity of distraint cases in courts.

The right to act promptly gives whatever advantage the zemindar enjoys under this power, and the delay that would result from the new provisions makes the right of no value. Under the proposal, distraint is attachment on application to court, thus giving the ryot full opportunity of removing his crops before the attachment order can reach the village. The produce of the land has always been considered to be hypothecated in the rent; the abolition of the power of distraint will therefore seriously affect the interests of the zemindars, and no summary procedure can afford any similar facility. Promptitude, which is so essential in all pecuniary transactions, is equally necessary in the realization of rent.

7. Head VIII, paragraph 21.—To sub-clauses (a) and (b) of clause (a) I would add the following sub-clause (c), "or on proof of payment of enhanced rate of rent by production of counterfoils for the preceding years." I hold sub-clause (a) alone not sufficient. In cases when the enhancement has been agreed to by the ryot, and payment of rent made by him at enhanced rates, there does not appear to be any reason why the proof of the fact of such payment for the preceding year shall not entitle the zemindar to a decree for enhanced rate of rent for subsequent years. In many cases it will be very troublesome and expensive to the parties to have their written engagements registered under the Registration Act.

With reference to clause (b) it would be hard to deny the right to enhance to parties to whom the land with all interest has been transferred for a term of years by the person having a permanent interest, such as mortgagees and lessees. The reason of the rule is served by providing thus—(b) "that enhancement shall not be allowed except with the consent of a person having a permanent interest in the land," &c.

With reference to clause (h), I am of opinion that it would be better to leave the phrase "adjacent places" undefined, as it would enable the court to decide rate questions agreeably to the just requirement of each particular case.

I would remark on this head that, whilst seeking to limit the right of enhancement, regard should be had to the fact that the value of money has decreased and that of land produce increased in these days of scarcity and exportation, whilst the rates of rent sought to be enhanced were fixed 12 years ago on the current value of money and grain.

8. Head XI, paragraph 26.—I respectfully beg to submit that neither the Bengal Bill nor Mr Browne's proposal will facilitate realization of rent. My objections are these—first, the procedure on comparison with the present will be found not more calculated for despatch of business. Secondly, Mr. Browne's procedure is not, of course, liable to objection on this score, but it makes the zemindars undergo the expenses of two suits in place of one. The troubles and expense involved in this will scarcely be compensated by the little expedition (perhaps nominal) gained with respect to arrears of undisputed rates. The zemindars of the North-Western Provinces have not so severe a law for the recovery of arrears of Government revenue, nor are their tenants so better-off as in Behar; still there is section 35 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, XVIII of 1873, as an object of terror for the defaulting ryots.

9. Head XIII, paragraph 28, clause 2.—There does not appear to be any reason why the landlord or his representatives should be debarred from the right of measuring the lands excepting at the end of 10 years. It will be found that 10 years is a very long period in case of alluvion and diluvion, Bal or Panchait lands, or lands held under bhaoli tenures, which require yearly measurement Clause 4 —I dissent from the recommendations contained herein. It would be practically placing the landlords at the mercy of their ryots. Some party, whether rightly or wrongly must be always in possession, and the ryots are bound to pay him rent. By such payment they are also exonerated for all time to come, and the rightful claimant can only recover mense profits from the party in possession to whom the ryots have paid. A dispute as regards the zemindari title is thus never prejudicial to the ryots' interest; it is sometimes advantageous to him. Greater indulgence is not required to be shown to him by the necessities of the case. It is possitively mischievous with respect to the zemindars, for, under this proposal, even in case of secure possession, the ryots, specially the inimically inclined or gained over by the zemindar's enemies, may trump out a dispute and cease to pay rent under the protection of law, thus possibly bringing on a sale of the zemindar's property and his ultimate ruin.

In conclusion, I beg leave to state that the present time is inopportune for new legislative action for landlord and tenant No radical alteration in the substantive law is needed. The abuses that are represented to exist are the result of want of knowledge in the tenantry; but, then, it has been admitted by competent authority that the tenantry of Behar are awakening to a knowledge of their rights; with the spread of this knowledge the existing law is sufficient to protect the interests of both parties, and the abuses complained of will find check in administrative reform in the improvement of the putwaree's as well as the zemindar's accounts, and in the increase of the strength of the existing machinery of justice. From the papers before the Commission, and from my own experience, I can say that Shahabad tenants, from their daring and turbulent habits, have wrested from their landlords more rights and advantages than the law had conferred upon them. In most instances the zemindars have suffered from the energetic combined resistance arising from the village commission system which prevails among the tenants of the Rajpoot and Brahmin castes in the district.

A

TO

Amend the Law relating to the recovery of Rent in the Province of Behar.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the provisions of the Rent Law in the Province of Behar, relative to the rights of ryots with respect to the delivery of pottahs and the occupancy of land; to the prevention of illegal exaction and extortion in connection with demands of rent; and to other questions connected with the same; to provide a summary procedure for the trial of certain classes of cases; to extend the jurisdiction of Collectors; and to amend the law relating to distraint: it is enacted as follows:

CHAPTER I.—PRELIMINARY.

1.—This Act may be called "The Behar Rent Act, 1879," and it shall take effect in the Province of Behar from the date which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall fix by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette.

2.—When and so soon as this Act shall commence and take effect "The Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869," shall cease to have operation or effect in the Province of Behar, save so far as it repeals or modifies any other Regulations or Acts, and save so far as regards suits or proceedings which before the time of the commencement of this Act shall have been instituted before any Court.

3.—In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

(1) "Province of Behar" means all the districts of the Patna Division, and includes any district or districts in the Bhagulpore Division to which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, be pleased to extend this Act:

(2) "Rent" means whatever is to be paid, delivered or rendered by a tenant on account of his holding, use or occupation of land:

(3) "Proprietor" means a person or body of persons being in possession of an estate or revenue-free property as owner or owners thereof:

(4) "Co-sharer" means any person being in possession of an undivided share in an estate or revenue-free property as owner thereof:

(5) "Landholder" means the person to whom a tenant is liable to pay rent,* and includes a sharer or body of sharers being in possession of separate lands held in severalty, or of certain specific mouzahs or lands forming part of an estate or revenue-free property, under such circumstances as are described in sections 12 and 9 (b) of "The Estates Partition Act, 1876," and section 11 of Act XI of 1859:

(6) "Resident-ryot" means a cultivator whose homestead is situated in the same estate or village in which he holds lands, and whose father or other relative, from whom he has inherited, resided and held land in the said same estate or village: provided that the aggregate period for which such ryot and his father, or such ryot and his other relative aforesaid, may have so resided and held land shall have been not less than twelve years:

(2) This definition is taken from section 3, clause 2 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act XVIII of 1873

(3) This definition for the most part corresponds to that given in section 3 clause (8) of the Land Registration Act, 1876, but the latter has been altered so as to exclude a sharer in a joint undivided estate.

(5) This definition, which is taken from the North-Western Provinces Act, section 3, clause (3), seems preferable to the definition in Baboo Kristodas Pal's Bill, which would include an unrecorded proprietor (vide section 78 of Land Registration Act).

* So far as his relations with tenants are concerned, such a sharer is to all intents and purposes a 16-annas proprietor

(6) It is necessary to use both words "estate" and "village" in this definition, because in some districts estates are much larger than villages, while in others, owing to the effects of the Butwarra Law, estates are being daily subdivided, and a village often contains twenty separate estates.

(7) "Non-resident ryot" means a cultivator who holds land in an estate or village other than that in which his homestead is situated :

(8) "Month" means a month of the Fusli year :

(9) "Year" means the Fusli year :

(10) "The Court" means the Civil Court having jurisdiction in any suit or matter :

4.—In the construction of this Act the word "Collector" shall include a Deputy Collector in charge of a sub-division, or other officer exercising the powers of a Collector of a district, or of a Deputy Collector in charge of a sub-division, by whatever designation such officer may be called.

4. Taken verbatim from section 1 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869.

CHAPTER II.—Rights and Liabilities of Landholders and Tenants.

5.—No dependent talookdar, or other person possessing a permanent transferable interest in land intermediate between the proprietor of an estate and the ryot, who holds his talook or tenure (otherwise than under a terminable lease) at a fixed rent which has not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, shall be liable to any enhancement of such rent, anything in section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, or in any other law to the contrary notwithstanding.

5. Taken from section 16 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869.

6.—Whenever, in any suit under this Act, it shall be proved that the rent at which a talook or other tenure is held has not been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of the suit, it shall be presumed that such talook or tenure has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, or it be proved that such rent was fixed at some later period.

6 Taken from section 17 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869

7.—Ryots who hold lands at fixed rates of rent, which shall have not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, shall continue to hold at such rates. Such ryots shall be called "ryots at fixed rates." Their tenures are heritable and transferable.

7. Taken generally from section 3 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869. The right "to receive pottahs at those rates" may be more appropriately declared under the heading of "Leases."

8.—Whenever, in any suit under this Act, it shall be proved that the rent at which land is held by a ryot has not been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of the suit, it shall be presumed that the land has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, or unless it be proved that such rent was fixed at some later period.

The presumption which in this section and section 6 arises from payment of rent at one uniform rate for twenty years is not rebutted by a tenant's omission to plead specially that he has held at the same rate from the time of the Permanent Settlement, nor by the production of a pottah dated subsequently to the Permanent Settlement, unless the tenant expressly admits that the tenancy or rate commenced from the date of such pottah.

8. The first clause of this section is taken from section 4 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869 The second clause is new, and its enactment is rendered necessary by certain rulings of the High Court, which are injurious to the interests of ignorant tenants.

9.—Every ryot who shall have cultivated or held land for a period of twelve years shall have a right of occupancy in the land so cultivated or held by him, whether it be held under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same; but this rule does not apply to "seer" or "zeraat" land belonging to the proprietor of the estate or tenure, and let by him on lease for a term, or year by year, nor (as respects the actual cultivator) in land sublet for a
